We regret that the Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD, from which we are used to hearing constructive words and truthful Arab news, has become the victim of a liar who tries, through his articles, to divert this newspaper from its normal course. Papers Cited on Polisario Talks, Arab Issues

LD112108 Rabat MAP in English 1236 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Rabat, May 9 (MAP) — The so-called separate talks being held in New York between Morocco and the Algerian-backed guerillas "the Polisario", the rumours of an eventual U.S.-Israeli aggression against Syria the American Senate's objection to the sale of U.S. missiles to Saudi Arabia, and terrorism make the headlines of today's newspapers in Morocco.

The widely-circulated daily newspaper (in French) of the Istiqlal Party (nationalist, opposition) L'OPINION, in its editorial "The Path of Reason" says, regarding the "separate talks" under the supervision of United Nations's secretary general, that "Morocco has made all concessions imaginable and has put forth all its powers to settle this bilateral dispute in the perspective of the construction of the grand Arab Maghreb for which our martyrs sacrificed themselves and to which the present [words indistinct] aspire". The governing people in Algiers, the daily says, have had during eleven years the occasion to realize that Morocco, king, people and government cannot accept any kind of bargain or concession about the Sahara which has been and will remain Moroccan. "It would be better for them to favor a peace process and definitely close this dossier", the editorialist concludes.

AL-ITTIHAD AL-ISHTIRAKI, mouthpiece of the Socialist Union of Popular Forces (Socialist), editorializing "The Dilatory Manoeuver", says that "the conditions set forth by the Polisario mercenaries and those who back them have no practical meaning but to hinder the good-will mission of the UN secretary general, avert the organization of a referendum, and oppose any attempt to settle the Sahara problem". "Morocco, the daily says will never accept blackmail under any circumstances.

Under the heading of "The Signs of Escalation", the same daily comments on the rumours of a planned American-Israeli aggression against Syria. For AL-ITTIHAD AL-ISHTIRAKI, the threat is directed not only against an Arab country but also against the whole Arab world, "unless the surprise happens and the Arab leaders join efforts and unite for the defense of their dignity and their independence".

ALMAGHRIB, daily newspaper (in French) of the National Rally of Independents (Liberal) which prints in enormous characters "First-Fruits of a New Syrian-Israeli Confrontation" wonders if Syria is the only Arab country in the Middle East being the target of the American-Israeli crusade. "Pressures are also accentuating on other countries such as Lebanon — still under the menace of a new Zionist invasion — as well as Jordan and Saudi Arabia".

In its column "Hot Spots", L'OPINION expounds the reasons that led the American Senate to turn down President Reagan's request to supply Saudi Arabia with U.S. missiles. For the daily, the behaviour of the House of Representatives and the Senate speaks volumes for the manner the American political power perceives the Arab world and the degree of its support to Israel. "To tell that the Jewish lobby exercises a great influence on the White House is a pure fiction, as American policy-makers use this pretext to hide their intentions", the daily says adding that "the vote of the House of Representatives and the Senate prove that American officials make no difference between moderate and extremist Arab countries. For the U.S.A., Arabs constitute a danger, and America's interest lies in its unconditional support to Israel while maintaining the Arab world in a situation of economic and political dependence", the columnist continues.

In its essay on terrorism, ALMAGHRIB deems that the current international economic order, the Zionist terror in the Middle East, the racial policy in South Africa, to dictatorship in some countries, racism and xenophobia from which immigrant workers suffer, nuclear accidents such as that of Chernobyl in Russia, and the atomic bomb in Hiroshima must also be considered as terrorism acts.

Confers With Southern Political Leaders

JN101843 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1730 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, 10 May (SUNA) — Prime Minister Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi held a meeting with the leaders and representatives of the parties and political organizations of southern Sudan here today. They exchanged views on the current political situation, the efforts to form the government, and the best means of ensuring the southern forces' effective participation in the constitutional bodies. During the meeting, the prime minister asserted that the national interest requires concerted efforts and unified steps at this stage to build the constitutional bodies and go forward to face the increasing challenges facing the country.

The prime minister noted that the dialogue with our brothers in the south is continuing with the aim of defining a suitable formula that would encompass all their trends and political concepts. He said that the major issues concerning the national political balance will be comprehensively dealt with in the constitutional conference which will be held shortly and which enjoys the government's full interest and concern.

On the differences of views that emerged recently on the distribution of constitutional posts, the prime minister called on the audience to reach agreement on the basic points around which acceptable, common formulas can be crystallized which would reflect the concepts and trends of all the southern parties with regard to outstanding issues. He called on them to find a reasonable formula within this framework.

This was followed by a rigorous discussion in which a large number of leaders and representatives of the southern political organizations took part. They expressed their appreciation for the prime minister's initiatives and his sincere efforts to promote national reconciliation and entrench national unity. The discussion dealt with the objective bases for defining the size of the southern representation in the constitutional institutions, the September 1983 laws and how to deal with them during the next stage, the need to protect the African culture and heritage in Sudan, the system of government and the bases of administrative division of the south, as well as other issues.

The following results were achieved:

1. The size of the southern representation in the government should be compatible with demographic size in accordance with the latest census.

2. All the parties and political forces that participated in the meeting have agreed to support the government in light of its declared policy on the current issues, particularly with regard to ensuring a just distribution of wealth and natural resources and fighting the September [Islamic] laws.

3. Consultations between the two parties forming the government and the southern political forces should continue in light of the positive results of the meeting with the aim of reaching a final formula on the southern parties' participation in the government.

4. The ministerial distribution of the southern representatives must be revised in light of the results of the complementary elections.

The meeting was attended by Sayyid Ahmad al-Husayn, deputy secretary general of the Al-Ummah Party; Ahmad Sa'd 'Umar, member of the party's Political Bureau; and Al-Ummah Party officials 'Umar Nur al-Da'im, Ibrahim al-Amin, Bashir 'Umar, and Muhammad 'Abbas Faqir.

[Text] Libreville, May 11 (AFP) — Seventy-six Sao Tome nationals who landed their fishing boat in a South African port last week after apparently fleeing their homeland are in no way connected with the West African island state's main opposition group, officials here said.

Carlos da Graca, representative here of the opposition National Resistance Front of Sao Tome and Principe, said the men had been expelled from the rebel group because it had "cladestinely organized a military training camp in Gabon under cover of fishing activities." "This group later fled to Cameroon where it was also expelled a few days ago," he told reporters.

Sao Tome's Foreign Minister Fradique de Menezes, on an official visit, also denied the men were part of the country's opposition, denouncing them as "opportunists... trying to extort money from Sao Tome citizens." They have just been expelled from Cameroon and now through personal ambition they have taken refuge with the South African racist regime," he said.

They were given temporary accommodation at a South African air force base there, while immigration officials sought to establish their plans. Chadian Envoy's Statement on Conflict With Libya

AB101323 Kinshasa AZAP in French 1022 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Kinshasa, 10 May (AZAP) — The Chadian conflict is certainly a conflict between Chad and Libya, Maitine Djoumbe, Chad's ambassador to Zaire, told AZAP on Saturday. In a statement to the diplomatic missions and international organizations accredited to Kinshasa, Mr Maitine revealed the contents of a Libyan presidential decree issued by Colonel al-Qadhdhafi last February inviting mercenaries, called volunteers, to join the ranks of the Islamic Legion and the Libyan army stationed in Chadian territory

The ambassador pointed out that Col al-Qadhdhafi is increasingly losing confidence in his army which is losing ground in Chad and which no longer supports his expansionist ambitions.

These mercenaries, the document indicates, are recruited exclusively in the Arab nations, after filling out applications at the Libyan people's bureaus (embassies) and the bureaus of brotherhood (bureaux des freres). They should fulfill all the qualities demanded in the military arts [l'arts militaire], should have completed military service not more than 3 years prior, and should not have had a rank higher than a colonel in the army.

BURKINA FASO

Communique Issued at Conclusion 'Arafat Visit

AB091857 Ouagadougou Domestic Service in French 1300 GMT 9 May 86

["Final Communique" issued at the end of PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat's visit to Burkina Faso on 9 May at Ouagadougou International Airport — read by Burkinabe Foreign Minister Basile Laetare Guissou]

[Text] Final Communique:

Upon the invitation of Comrade Captain Thomas Sankara, chairman of the CNR [National Council of the Revolution], president of Burkina Faso, and head of the revolutionary government of Burkina Faso, Brother Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee and commander in chief of the Palestinian Revolutionary Forces, paid an official visit to Burkina Faso from 7 to 9 May 1986.

The militant people of Kadiogo and Zound Weogo Provinces, mobilized within the Committees for the Defense of the Revolution [CDR's], offered a particularly warm and enthusiastic welcome to the leader of the Palestinian Revolution and the delegation accompanying him on his arrival in Ouagadougou, thus testifying to the quality of ties of brotherhood, solidarity, and friendship which exist between the Palestinian and Burkinabe peoples. During his stay in Ouagadougou, the chairman of the PLO Executive Committee held private discussions with Captain Thomas Sankara, CNR chairman, president of Burkina Faso, and paid working visits to Burkinabe senior officials, all of which took place in an atmosphere of cordiality and brotherhood.

Those who participated in these discussions were, on the Palestinian side, Brothers 'Abd al-Rahim Ahmad, member of the PLO Executive Committee; ('Abd-al Awak Hamid), Chairman 'Arafat's economic adviser; Sulayman Harfi, adviser to chairman 'Arafat on African affairs; 'Imad Shakkur, adviser to chairman 'Arafat; (Amin Abu Hafirak,) assistant manager of the PLO office in Paris' 'Abd al-Rahim Abu Rabah, PLO ambassador to Burkina Faso; on the Burkinabe side were Comrade Captain Pierre Ouedraogo, CDR national general secretary; Major Jean-Baptiste Boukary Lingani, chief of Defense Staff of the People's Armed Forces and minister of Popular Defense; Henri Zongo, minister of economic promotion; and Basile Laetare Guissou, minister of External Relations and cooperation.

During their discussions, President Thomas Sankara and his guest reviewed the international situation and examined in detail the situation in Africa, the Middle East, and the bilateral relations between the Palestinian and Burkinabe revolutions. On the international level, the two leaders reaffirmed their commitment to the UN Charter, the fundamental principles of nonalignment, and of the Islamic Conference Organization. They expressed their common conviction that the international peace and security can only be guaranteed by taking into account the legitimate and inalienable aspirations of the peoples struggling against hegemonism, imperialism, racism, and zionism, and by the installation of a new and more just international order. To this end, they firmly emphasized the need for people who are victims of aggression, oppressed and exploited peoples, to close their ranks for an effective anti-imperialist combat and an active solidarity.

Touching on the situation in Africa, they paid tribute to the merciless and many-sided struggle being waged by the freedom fighters in South Africa, in occupied Namibia, and generally in southern Africa. In this connection, they severely condemned the despicable apartheid system set up in South Africa by the racist Pretoria regime with the complicity of its imperialist allies, and reaffirmed their support to the South African people and the ANC, their genuine representatives. They also vigorously denounced the growing collaboration and the unwholesome alliance between Israel and the racist Pretoria regime in economic, military, and nuclear fields in particular. They made an urgent appeal to the international community for the implementation of economic sanctions against South Africa as provided for in Chapter 7 of the UN Charter.

With regard to the situation in Namibia, the two leaders firmly demanded the immediate withdrawal of South Africa from its territory, and the implementation of UN Security Council Resolution 435. Finally, they reiterated their support for and solidarity with SWAPO, the true representatives of the Namibian people. They also expressed their support for Angola, in the face of repeated aggressions intended to destabilize the country, and denounced the help and diplomatic support given by certain powers, led by the United States, to the puppet UNITA of Jonas Savimbi, the lackey of the racist South Africans and imperialism, and underlined their solidarity with the other frontline states.

They condemned once again the bombing of the PLO Headquarters in Tunis by Israel as well as the U.S. raid on Tripoli and Benghazi, both of which constitute clear acts of aggression against a struggling people and sovereign states which are members of the United Nations and which are reminiscent of the painful situation imposed on the militant peoples of Grenada and Nicaragua.

Concerning the Middle East, the PLO Executive Council chairman informed President Thomas Sankara of the latest developments in the Palestinian issue as well as the struggle of the valiant Palestinian people to regain their (?inalienable) rights and to foil all plots against them. He sincerely thanked President Sankara for Burkina Faso's constant support for the PLO, demonstrated among other things by its refusal to attend the 40th UN anniversary celebration due to the fact that the PLO and SWAPO were not invited to attend the celebration.

In turn, President Thomas Sankara reaffirmed Burkina Faso's unflinching support for the just struggle of the Palestinian people under the clearsighted leadership of the PLO, their only and legitimate representative.

The two leaders reaffired their conviction that there cannot be a just and lasting peace in the region unless the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people to self-determination and the establishment of their own state are recognized. They strongly called for Israel's withdrawal from occupied Palestinian territories as well as from all other occupied Arab territories. The two leaders denounced Israel's behavior in the occupied Palestinian territory, especially its policy of settlement formation and depopulation which is primarily aimed at annexing the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. They described as arrogant and scornful the Zionist attitude toward the fundamental principles of international law, UN resolutions, and international public opinion. Under these circumstances, the two leaders admitted that in order for peace to prevail in this part of the world, an international peace conference must be summoned under the auspices of the United Nations and with the active participation of the PLO.

Concerning the Iran-Iraq war which has caused great material damages and which, above all, has led to the loss of human life, the two leaders noted with much concern that the continuation of this war will only serve as a pretext for the intervention of foreign forces in the conflict. They therefore reaffirmed their support for the appeal made by the 1983 New Delhi summit meeting of the Nonaligned Movement for finding a solution to their dispute through negotiation and appealed to the two warring sides to end their hostilities immediately.

Concerning cooperation between the Arab world and Africa, the two leaders stressed the need for cooperation and the strengthening of the relations existing between African and Arab countries. In this regard, they renewed their support for the idea of holding rapidly a second Afro-Arab summit meeting in order to discuss issues of common interest.

President Thomas Sankara briefed the PLO leader on the significant changes which have taken place in Burkina Faso since the advent of the democratic and popular revolution as well as the numerous achievements made by the people of Burkina Faso who are mobilized within the Committees for the Defense of the Revolution. Chairman 'Arafat expressed his admiration for the quality of the achievements. Touching on their specific bilateral relations, the two leaders agreed to strengthen the relations of cooperation and friendship between their peoples and their two revolutions in all the areas of mutual interest and to multiply their consultations.

At the end of his visit to free Burkina Faso, the chairman of the PLO Executive Council, on his own behalf, on behalf of his delegation, and of the Palestinian people, sincerely thanked the Burkinabe people, the CNR, and its chairman, Captian Thomas Sankara, and the revolutionary Government of Burkina Faso for the very fraternal and warm welcome accorded them as well as for the frankness with which they held their discussions.

Reportage on Visit of Brazilian President Sarney

Arrives 9 May

AB092120 Paris AFP in French 1829 GMT 9 May 86

[Excerpts] Mindelo (Cape Verde), 9 May (AFP) — President Jose Sarney of Brazil arrived early Friday afternoon in Cape Verde for a 2-day visit, the first to Africa by a Brazilian head of state since that country returned to democratic rule. Mr Sarney, who arrived at the airport of Sal (east of the Cape Verde archipelago), immediately went to Mindelo on the island of San Vincente (northwest of the country) where he was welcomed by the Cape Verdian head of state, Aristides Pereira.

Mr Sarney was given a popular and colorful welcome in Mindelo. In an improvised speech, he conveyed the "tribute paid by the 130 million Brazilians," because of "their respect and admiration for Cape Verde which has been able to overcome drought and fought for its independence." The Brazilian president recited some lines of a poem he had written several years ago on Cape Verde, and was met with a standing ovation from thousands of Cape Verdians who had come to welcome him.

Mr Sarney, who had just visited Portugal, is expected to go to Praia, the capital of this former Portuguese colony, in the evening.

The Cape Verdian and Brazilian presidents will exchange toasts at an official dinner on Friday evening in Praia. On Saturday Mr Jose Sarney will inaugurate the Brazilian Embassy in Praia and will receive Mr Pires Pedro, the Cape Verdian prime minister in audience before leaving Cape Verde at the end of a 48-hour visit.

The two leaders also called for the strict implementation of United Nations resolutions calling for free elections and independence in the South African-controlled territory of Namibia.

On bilateral relations, they discussed ways of increasing Brazilian development aid to Cape Verde including the creation of a major trade and transport complex in Cape Verde to handle Brazilian exports to Africa and the Middle East, the communique said.

Paper Criticizes U.S. 'Propaganda' Over Chernobyl

AB090835 Accra Domestic Service in English
0700 GMT 9 May 86

[From the press review]

[Text] The PEOPLE'S DAILY GRAPHIC says that nowhere is the game in the East-West superpower politics as transparent as in the attempt by the United States to use the accident which occurred on Sunday 25 April this year [date as heard] at the Chernobyl nuclear power station in the Soviet Union as a propaganda ploy. It says the United States is blowing up the accident as an international crisis and creating fear and insecurity among Western Europeans, especially the neighbors of the Soviet Union.

With indecent haste, the United States has demanded that she should be given the right to make an immediate inspection and investigation on the spot, a demand which the officials very well know that the Soviet Union cannot, in self-respect, allow any such poking and moping around her nuclear installations. [sentence as heard] The GRAPHIC wants to know the number of times that the Soviet Union has demanded to go and inspect many serious nuclear accidents in the United States on the pretext that some of the radioactive fallout will reach Mexico or Canada.

The paper says one of the reasons behind the U.S. ploy is that by drumming up an unnecessary outcry, she and her allies hope thereby to distract the world public from her aggression against Libya. It is also designed to make us here in Africa forget U.S. support for apartheid South Africa and her funding of bandits and mercenaries like Jonas Savimbi and Holden Roberto. The GRAPHIC believes that the world has not forgotten the condemnation of U.S. nuclear blasts in Nevada in recent weeks and it has not forgotten that between 1971 and 1984, there were about 151 similar incidents in 14 other countries, mostly NATO countries.

The paper agrees that there has been a nuclear accident in the Soviet Union. It is also a fact that it is an accident against which nobody is guaranteed safety, but to blow it out of all proportion puts it in the realm of fiction. What the world is interested in, since the United States and the USSR both have stockpiles of these destructive weapons, is for them to draw the conclusions that can prevent future accidents, and not to gloat shamelessly over the misfortune of the USSR to score a point in an East-West game.

The Liberian leader then, among other things, sounded a stern warning to Mr Darpoh to be careful of his life, adding: God gave you long life, but you are careless with it. Responding, Mr Darpoh explained that the role of the press is a delicate one and it is hard to understand. He then asserted that the SUNTIMES newspaper was not against the government, but was indeed in the supreme interest of the Liberian people.

[Excerpt] After the final ceremony marking the end of Yasir 'Arafat's visit to Togo and the exchange of documents between the Togolese and PLO delegations, the presidential motorcade left the Guest of Honor's palace for Tokoin Airport. Prior to his departure, Yasir 'Arafat made a statement in which he expressed satisfaction with the opportunity offered him to meet with President Gnassingbe Eyadema, and thanked the Togolese people and their leadership for their constant support of the Palestinian people's struggle.

[Begin recording] ['Arafat in English fading into French translation] On behalf of the Palestinian people, on behalf of the PLO, and on behalf of the freedom fighters, I had a very important opportunity to come and visit a brotherly and friendly country led by my friend and brother, His Excellency General Gnassingbe Eyadema. I have the honor to say that this visit is a historic visit during which I had very fruitful discussions with His Excellency President Eyadema. I can say that during this very short period I was able to appreciate the great sympathy and the unflinching support of His Excellency President Eyadema and of the Togolese people for the just cause of our struggle, which we cannot forget. I am anxious to thank His Excellency Gen Eyadema, his government, his party, and the Togolese people for their unflinching support for our cause.

[Unidentified reporter] What is the current situation of the Palestinians in Lebanon?

['Arafat] There are about 1 million Palestinians in Lebanon where they have been living since 1948. Those Palestinians have participated and have always participated in all the activities taking place in Lebanon. But after our departure from Beirut, our people were confronted with terrorist activities led by Israel such as the Shabra and Shatila massacres. Another massacre occurred in these same refugee camps shortly afterward. During the first massacres, that is in Shabra and Shatila, we lost 5,000 martyrs, while during the second attack we lost 7,000 martyrs with many people injured.

At the level of the PLO leadership we are trying to be responsible to our people and are doing everything possible to achieve this objective. We will do everything possible to ensure stability, security, and peace in Lebanon. We will also do everything possible to ensure the unity of the Lebanese people, the integrity of the Lebanese territory, and the sovereignty of the Lebanese territory. [End recording]

[Joint communique issued at the conclusion of PLO Chairman Yasir 'Arafat's visit to Togo from 9 to 11 May — read by Togolese Foreign Minister Atsou Koffi Amega]

[Text] At the invitation of His Excellency General Gnassingbe Eyadema, founding chairman of the Rally of the Togolese People [RPT] and president of the Republic, and in the framework of brotherly and cordial relations existing between Republic of Togo and the Palestine Liberation Organization [PLO], His Excellency Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee and commander in chief of the Palestine revolutionary forces, undertook an official visit to Lome, Republic of Togo, from 9 to 11 May 1986.

Talks between the two leaders took place in a frank, cordial, and brotherly atmosphere, during which they carefully examined all current problems in the bilateral, African, and international spheres.

On bilateral issues, the two leaders expressed satisfaction with the excellent relations of cooperation existing between Togo and the PLO, the relations which (?need to be strengthened) in the political, economic, and cultural areas. They agreed to organize frequent meetings at several levels in order to constantly strengthen ties between their two governments and people. They also decided to sign an agreement on economic cooperation between their two governments.

On the Middle East, the chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, Yasir 'Arafat, informed the RPT founding chairman, Gen Gnassingbe Eyadema, of developments in the situation in the Middle East, and the activities of the PLO [words indistinct].

In this regard, the president of the Republic of Togo reiterated his firmest support, and that of the Togolese people for the Palestinian people, in their just struggle to achieve the right to self-determination and the creation of their own state. He encouraged the PLO leader to continue this struggle in order to ensure long-lasting peace (?in the Middle East).

On issues concerning Africa, the two leaders noted with satisfaction the similarity in their views on the situaitons in Chad and southern Africa. They agreed that these crises have been aggravated through foreign interference. On Chad, Chairman 'Arafat and President Eyadema expressed their preoccupation with the latest developments in the situation in that country. They expressed their conviction that the solution to the Chadian problem lies in national reconciliation between the parties and the state, and the withdrawal of all foreign forces.

On southern Africa, the two leaders noted the recent events in South Africa and concluded that the concessions made by the racist regime of Pretoria are far from satisfying the black majority but rather tend to legalize apartheid instead of abolishing it. They reasserted their unflinching support for the struggle of the South African people under the wise and courageous leadership of the African National Congress for the total liberation and emancipation of the majority of the people of South Africa.

Analyzing the Namibian issue, they again expressed their unconditional support for SWAPO, the only legitimate representative of the Namibian people in their (?constant) struggle for the liberation of their people. They reiterated their strong condemnation of the Pretoria government's maneuvers aimed at delaying Namibia's independence.

They launched an appeal to the world community to oblige the racist South African regime to proceed with the immediate and unconditional implementation of Resolution 435 adopted in 1975 by the UN Security Council. The two leaders unreservedly condemned the South African regime for its acts of aggression and destabilization against the Frontline States, and against other independent states in the region. They also condemned the alliance between the racist South African regime and the Zionist regime of Israel for the similarity in their acts against the liberation and emancipation of the African and Middle East peoples.

On the Middle East, they deplored the fact that the situation is not improving in that region in spite of efforts being made from all quarters. On the Palestinian issue, they agreed that there can never be long-lasting peace without the participation of the Palestinian people under the leadership of the PLO, and the withdrawal of Israeli troops from all occupied Arab and Palestinian lands. They reasserted the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, and to the establishment of a sovereign and independent Palestinian state.

The two leaders agreed that the recipe for achieving peace is to hold an international peace conference under the auspices of the United Nations, and with the participatcon of the PLO. They condemned the [words indistinct] UN resolutions on the participation of Arab Palestinians. The two leaders reiterated their call for the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Israeli invasionary forces from Arab occupied lands and [words indistinct] of the UN Security Council.

They expressed their preoccupation with the Iraq-Iran war. They noted with regret that this war [words indistinct] is a destabilizing factor in the region. They therefore launched an appeal to the two warring factions to stop fighting in accordance with the appeal launched by the Nonaligned summit at New Delhi.

On the world economic crisis, the two leaders noted that the best solution to this crisis is better North-South cooperation aimed at the equitable distribution of the earth's resources, and the creation of a new world economic order. They stressed the need for South-South cooperation, emphasizing the importance of development, and the strengthening of relations existing between Arab and African countries. In this regard, they called for an Afro-Arab summit in the shortest possible time in order to examine problems facing Arab and African countries.

At the end of his visit, his excellency, Chairman Yasir 'Arafat, expressed the gratitude of the Palestinian people to his excellency, President Gnassingbe Eyadema, his government, and people, for the [words indistinct] and their support for the just Palestinian cause, and the hospitality shown him and his delegation.

Signed in Lome on 11 May 1986 by Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee and commander in chief of the Palestine revolutionary forces, and by His Excellency Gen Gnassingbe Eyadema, RPT founding chairman, and president of the Republic of Togo.

Dos Santos Speaks at Tbilisi Dinner 9 May

MB101052 Luanda Domestic Service in Portuguese 0500 GMT 10 May 86

[Speech by Jose Eduardo dos Santos, chairman of the MPLA-Labor Party and president of the People's Republic of Angola, at an official dinner in Tbilisi on 9 May — recorded]

[Text] I should like, first of all, to express our gratitude for the official dinner given in our honor today. I should also like to thank you very much for the warm and fraternal reception accorded us since our arrival in this city of Tbilisi, the capital of the Soviet Socialist Republic of Georgia.

During our stay here, we were able to exchange expressions and views on various issues of bilateral interest connected with our cooperation as well as the friendship and solidarity between Angola and the USSR. We were also able to familiarize ourselves with our important achievements in economic, social, scientific, technical, and cultural fields.

We noted that your country has been developing through implementation of CPSU guidelines, thus improving workers' living conditions and consolidating a developed socialist society. It was, therefore, with great satisfaction that we learned from you that this republic has traditionally implemented the national development plans. We congratulate you on your achievements of the entire progressive community, achievements of all peoples fighting against imperialism and for peace, well-being, and development. By consolidating the Soviet economy, by developing this economy and subsequently strengthening its industry, you are also strengthening the firm rearguard of all peoples fighting for peace and liberty.

As you are well aware, existing relations between the peoples of Angola and the USSR are long established. They were established at the time when the Angolan people were still fighting Portuguese colonialism. After our independence, Angola and the USSR further developed relations based on the treaty of friendship and cooepration signed between our two states.

It is with great pleasure that we note our implementation of cooperation in various fields of social life, thus contributing to economic and social reconstruction in Angola. It also gives us pleasure to note that workers and technicians of this Soviet Republic of Georgia have participated in this effort by serving in Angola in various fields. Accordingly, the main aim of our visit to the USSR was precisely to assess this cooperation and find ways and means of further strengthening the friendship and solidarity between our two peoples, parties, and states.

This cooperation is important for Angola. It is important to all peoples who oppose oppression in Africa. It is a new kind of cooperation based on the principles of proletarian internationalism. You are aware of the existence of the system of apartheid in southern Africa where our country is situated. The racist South African regime has been systematically organizing acts of aggression and destabilization not only against the People's Republic of Angola but also against other states of the region. It is, therefore, our desire to continue to strengthen this cooperation in order to consolidate Angola economically and politically, thus enabling it to strengthen the independent role it plays in Africa, particularly in southern Africa. Angola plays an important role today because of its support for the national liberation movements.

The ongoing struggle in southern Africa is, in our view, a struggle of all exploited and oppressed peoples against imperialism. It is a vanguard of all progressive forces opposed to imperialist domination. That is why we think that responsibility must be collective. There is a need for all progressive forces to firmly and resolutely support Namibia so that this country may achieve, as soon as possible, its independence based on UN Security Council Resolution 435. We also think that it is our collective responsibility to mobilise all material, moral, political, and diplomatic support for the South African patriots who heroically fight racist domination and for democracy and liberty.

I should not fail to take this opportunity to express my gratitude for the solidarity once again reiterated by the comrade first secretary of the Central Committee, on behalf of the residents of Georgia in particular and the Soviet people in general with the heroic struggle waged by the Angolan people against external aggression. Since our arrival here in the USSR, we have felt this solidarity and great sympathy everywhere we have been, particularly here in Georgia. Here, we had the privilege and great honor to participate in celebrations marking the Victory Day over fascism. We saw how the residents of Georgia and the Soviet people in general once again extolled Soviet heroism, fighting traditions, and the patriotic spirit of self-denial, thanks to which you were able to defend the USSR from attacks by fascists, defeating and expelling them. During this celebration, marked today, we learned how to strengthen unity and transfer tradition from old to new generations for the continuation of struggle for an increasingly stronger and more powerful USSR on the path to communism.

We would like to take this opportunity to wish you all success in implementing all guidelines and notes established by your party's 27th congress. There is no doubt that these objectives will be carried out inasmuch as we have faith in the ability of your workers and your people in general, their creativity, devotion, and commitment. Your party is strong, well-tested and forged in struggle, and there is no doubt that victory is certain.

In conclusion, I would like to ask the comrade first secretary to toast to strengthening the friendship, solidarity, and cooperation between the peoples of Angola and the USSR.

Mr Shipanga was speaking at a parade of the South-West Africa/Namibia Police Counter-Insurgency Unit at (?Ehoma) in central Ovambo.

Speaking at the same parade, the minister of national training, Mr Andrew Matjila, said the government of national unity did not want to get involved in a war, but said it was the government's duty to protect its citizens against guerrillas. Mr Matjila expressed the wish that South-West Africa/Namibians would remain motivated to overcome their present situation and not, like SWAPO, fight to dominate other racial groups in the country.

SWAPO Claims 132 RSA Soldiers Dead in 7 Weeks

MB091930 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1840 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Harare, May 9, SAPA — The South-West African People's Organization (SWAPO) insurgents killed more than 132 South African soldiers during the past seven weeks, according to a SWAPO communique released in Harare today, ZIANA reports. Fifteen of those killed included local "special agents" in (SWA/) Namibia. Many more troops and agents were wounded in battles with SWAPO, the report said. SWAPO's military wing, the People's Liberation Army of Namibia (PLAN), laid ambushes and landmines, it said.

PLAN destroyed 25 military trucks, 77 telephone poles, partially or completely destroyed three bases, brought down two DC-3 transport planes and seized large qunatities of arms, ammunition and other materials.

The communique said that coinciding with SWAPO's 26th anniversary on April 17, "PLAN intensified both political mobilisation among the masses of Namibia and military actions against the illegal occupationist South African forces and their agents in Namibia." The statement said PLAN combatants were continuing to benefit from the "overwhelming" support of the people of SWA/Namibia.

A spokesman for the South African Defence Force in Pretoria, approached for comment by SAPA, said tonight: "This latest burst of SWAPO rhetoric is totally ludicrous and is as usual no more than blatant distortions of reality. The facts of the matter are well known and have been made public by the South West African Territory Force in Windhoek." He added: "The only success SWAPO could claim is the murder of defenceless people, the abduction of innocent children, and the maiming of people by the cowardly laying of landmines."

SWAPO Insurgents Attack Police Base 11 May

MB111152 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1103 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Windhoek, May 11, SAPA — A group of 55 SWAPO insurgents attacked a police base at Onhangwena in northern SWA/Namibia on Tuesday with instructions to abduct a white policeman and to seize a Casspir armoured vehicle, according to a news report published in Windhoek today. The commanding officer of the base, Sgt Jan Ellis, said a guard had noticed the insurgents at about 1am and in the subsequent heavy firefight and floow-up operations 15 insurgents were killed and two were captured. A member of the Ovambo homeguard in a nearby village died when an RPG-7 rocket fired by insurgents hit his hut. Three civilians, among them a minor, were injured when a mortar bomb of the insurgents exploded in the village of a member of the SWA/Namibian National Assembly, Mr Gotlieb Dan.

Details of the attack were disclosed on a visit to the base at the weekend by three members of the SWA/Namibian transitional cabinet, Mr Andrew Matjila, Mr Moses Katjiuongua and Mr Andreas Shipanga. Sgt Ellis said that shortly before the attack a police guard was alerted by a noise and when he lit up the area with his torch, he caught the insurgents in the beam as they were cutting through the wire fence. "They began firing and the rest of the camp were awakened by the shots and the explosions," he said. A total of 13 mortar bombs fell in the base. "We ran to our positions and returned the fire," Sgt Ellis said.

Two insurgents were killed in the attack before they could penetrate the base and two seriously wounded insurgents were captured later that morning. At first light a follow-up operation was launched by the SWA police force's counter-insurgency unit and in an armed encounter late that afternoon 13 insurgents were shot dead. Two policemen were injured in the attack on the base but there were no further casualties, Sgt Ellis said. Quantities of armaments and documents were seized, from which it appeared the insurgents had a detailed sketch of the lay-out of the base, and that the attack had been well planned.

Voice of Namibia Comments on Brussels Conference

EA101126 Addis Ababa Voice of Namibia in English 1900 GMT 7 May 86

[Station commentary: "On the Diplomatic Offensive for Namibia's Liberation"]

[Text] An international conference in support of the struggle of the Namibian people and their liberation movement, SWAPO, opened in the Belgian capital, Brussels, on Monday [5 May]. The conference has been organized against the background of continued South African intransigence and maneuvering regarding the speeding [as heard] and genuine liberation of Namibia. It is being held at a time when the illegal occupationist regime and its imperialist allies have launched an unprecedented campaign of slander and lies aimed at discrediting the vanguard of the Namibian people's struggle, SWAPO, and its time-tested leadership. The Brussels conference is also being held in the year of the 20th anniversary of the termination of South Africa's mandate to rule Namibia by the UN General Assembly in 1966.

Underlining the urgency of the task of ending South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia speedily, the UN Council for Namibia, the legal administering authority over the territory, and SWAPO, as the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people, have resolved to launch a concerted diplomatic offensive for the immediate and unconditional implementation of Security Council Resolution 435. The Brussels conference is just one of these manifestations on the diplomatic front. In July another international conference on Namibia is scheduled for Vienna, Austria. Later in the year the UN General Assembly is to hold a special session on Namibia.

The purpose of these conferences is to bring pressure to bear on the racist South African regime and its imperialist supporters, notably the United States, Britain, and the FRG, to facilitate the unfettered independence of Namibia in the near future. These conferences will also be an opportunity for peace-loving and justice-upholding humanity to intensify all-round and unconditional support to the Namibian people through SWAPO.

If the regime continues to show contempt for the wishes and aspirations of the Namibian people and international public opinion as it has done hitherto, then there is no alternative than to bring it to book. The only effective peaceful option will be comprehensive mandatory sanctions. In that connection a world conference on sanctions against South Africa, to be held in Paris in June, should be an opportunity for the international community to force the regime to relinquish its illegal grip on Namibia and dismantle apartheid in South Africa.

SWAPO of Namibia has declared 1986 the year of general mobilization and decisive action for final victory, and it is under the guidance of that slogan that it is intensifying the national liberation struggle on all fronts. While we shall continue to bear the brunt of the struggle ourselves, it is an inescapable moral and legal responsibility of the international community to actively work for the speediest decolonization of Namibia.

The Brussels international conference and the other international conferences on Namibia must therefore contribute significantly to the ending of colonial slavery in Namibia. Everything for the struggle! All for victory!

Police Conduct 'Security Operation' in Alexandra

'High Profile' To Continue

MB100749 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0741 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 10, SAPA — Security forces are carrying out a security operation in the township of Alexandra last night due to "a high level of lawlessness which has been continuing in the area," police said today. A statement from the police Public Relations Division said the security forces would continue to keep a "high profile in Alexandra. The township operation would carry on as long it was necessary to restore law and order to the area." The statement said the operation was necessary because apart from the "usual incidents at points of unrest there was a high incidence of vehicle hijackings and intimidation. No further lawlessness will be tolerated and the sooner the lawbreakers understand this the better," it said. The statement said the security forces regrets any inconvenience to law abiding people in and around the township and asks them to see the importance of the operation which is being carried out for their own interests. "The operation was mounted to control crime, unrest and other unruliness," it said.

Roadblocks, Searches Underway

MB100840 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0831 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 10, SAPA — Police and members of the South African Defence Force sealed off the troubled township of Alexandra and have arrested five people since the security operation there began at midnight, police said today. A police spokesman in Alexandra said the five men had been arrested on charges ranging from possession of drugs and stolen property to driving without a licence. Roadblocks have been erected and residents are being searched on their way into and out of the township. He said the security forces were receiving "excellent cooperation" from Alexandra residents but he said the situation there was "tense."

A resident of Alexandra told SAPA this morning that all the entrances to the township had been sealed off and there was a "large presence of police and defence force members." He said everyone leaving or entering Alexandra is being "searched and screened." He said armed members of the security forces were heavily deployed in main streets of the township and there were a "lot of police in vehicles as well as people on foot" involved in the operation. He too described the situation there as "tense."

1670 Police Involved

MB101136 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1112 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 10, SAPA — Police said today that 16 people have so far been arrested in trouble-torn Alexandra township which as been sealed off by security forces since last night. Those arrested were detained in connection with drug possession, possession of stolen property, and one person was arrested for driving without a licence.

The 1670-strong security force moved into Alexandra at midnight and erected roadblocks and started conducting house-to-house searches. Members of the security force were handing out pamphlets at the roadblocks asking Alexandra residents if they were "tired of being harassed?" Police said the operation was launched because of "a high level of lawlessness which has been continuing in the area."

A statement from the police Public Relations Division said the security forces would continue to keep a high profile in Alexandra and the operation would carry on "as long it was necessary to restore law and order to the area."

Alexandra residents contacted today said that taxis were told to stop operating from 7am "in order to keep people at home," one township dweller said. He added that pepole were being given pamphlets at all of the many roadblocks in the township.

The pamphlets said: "Are you tired of being harassed? The police need information concerning people who are:
" — preventing your children's education;
" — about people who are keeping you from work;
" — about people who stop you to buy where you like;
"Let us protect you," the pamphlet said and then gave a telephone number where information could be given anonymously and assured people that the information would be "kept confidential."

One Alexandra resident said that police were "thoroughly searching all the people and cars" going through the roadblocks. He added that residents had to undergo up to six of these searches before being able to leave the township. Another Alexandra resident said the security forces was heavily armed and "groups of two or three were standing a few meters apart" thoughout the township. "They are just like bees swarming all over Alex," he said.

The chairman of the Alexandra Action Committee, Mr Moses Mayakeso, said that apart from the present operation the security force presence in the township had made life "very difficult" for the residents and added that his group would contact employers to allow people to sleep at their place of work as it was impossible to rest in Alexandra. "For the past few weeks we have been hearing gunshots in the night and there are a lot of searchlights all over the place making sleep difficult," he said. He added that since last night no shots had been heard in the township. Regarding the police pamphlets, he claimed it was the police who were harassing the residents and spoke of the gunshots and the use of searchlights.

18 Reported Arrested

MB110553 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1736 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 10, SAPA — A total of 18 people were arrested in the troubled township of Alexandra today since a 1670-strong security force sealed off the area at midnight last night, police said. Lt Pieree Louw, the police media liaison officer for the Witwatersrand, said this evening the situation in Alexandra was "quiet." He said two stolen cars had been recovered and the 18 people were arrested in connection with dealing in or possession of dagga [marijuana], possession of stolen goods, and driving without a licence.

Earlier today a statement from the police Public Relations Division in Pretoria said the security operation had been mounted to combat an increasing wave of lawlessness in the township.

'Comrades' Reportedly Running Alexandra

MB110515 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1727 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 11, SAPA — A shadowy political group called "the comrades" has taken over the running of strife-torn Alexandra townships since the mass resignation last month of the town council. A Johannesburg newspaper, BUSINESS DAY, will tomorrow publish an exclusive inside story about this group which claims Alexandra is 100 per cent uner its control, according to BUSINESS DAY managing editor, Neil Jacobsohn.

He said in a statement to news agencies and radio stations that against this background have arisen the "people's courts," about which hair-raising tales are told in the townships. These courts "dispense a harsh justice" — including, say some, the feared "necklace" — a blazing, petrol-drenched car-tyre around the neck — for police informers and other major offenders.

A BUSINESS DAY staffer followed a dangerous chain of contacts to meet the "comrades." He arranged meetings with anonymous people who kept their faces hidden, or who gave him directions in the dark. Finally, he was granted permission to sit in one a case of the "people's court." Jacobsohn said the report details how the court handles a charge of housebreaking and theft against a young black man — because "hardly anyone goes to the police these days — they report their cases to the comrades."

He said the response of the authorities has been harsh, culminating this weekend in a massive raid by hundreds of SA police and soldiers.

Alexandra Funeral for April Unrest Victims 15 May

MB091700 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1654 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 9, SAPA — The Alexandra Action Committee (AAC) intends to hold a funeral on May 15 for up to 20 people killed in unrest in the township on April 22 and 28, the committee said today. An AAC spokesman, Mr Naud Moitse, told a press conference in Johannesburg that so far only nine of the victims had been identified and one, Mr Vusi Silango, had already been buried. Mr Moitse said: "Township residents would like to bury all their dead ... but so far there are only eight bodies which have been identified. The other 12 are missing — feared dead."

The AAC intends to take legal steps to be allowed to hold the funeral in the Alexandra stadium and will ask that the South African Defence Force be asked to vacate the stadium. He said the stadium had been turned into a "sort of a military base" and no one was allowed to use it. "There is no real alternative venue for the funerals as the churches and halls in the township will not be able to handle the number of people who are expected to attend," Mr Moitse said.

The funeral has been tentatively scheduled to start at 9am and confirmed speakers include: Mrs Winnie Mandela, Mr Elijah Barayi, the COSATU [Congress of South African Trade Unions] president, and a United Democratic Front office bearer, Mr Trevor Manuel.

The names of the dead identified so far are: Mr Colin Ntohla, Mr Elias Mduli, Mr Victor Banda, Mr Vusi Dube, Mr Ace Shlongwane, Mr Albion Makathini, and Mr Jacob Phefada.

The committee said it would also ask for there to be no police or Defence Force presence at the funeral.

"We have a good record of behaviour in the past and don't need to be told how to conduct ourselves at a funeral," Mr Moitse said.

Mr Moitse also mentioend yesterday's attacks on a church in nearby Bramley and on the Kew house of Mr Martin van der Ploeg who was actively engaged in working towards a peaceful settlement of the situation in South Africa. There have been reports that these attacks were carried out by extreme right-wing elements and Mr Moitse said the AAC had "strong indication that off-duty policemen were involved in vigilante activities." "People are scared to come forward and make statements because of a fear of reprisals," he said, adding that the committee had a number of affidavits concerning yesterday's incidents as well as others in the township.

A spokesman for the police Public Relations Division in Pretoria said today he could not comment on the allegations "until a formal complaint" has been made to the SAP. A SADF spokesman in Pretoria said he was not able to comment on the allegations that the Alexandra stadium had been turned into a "sort of military base" as all matters of unrest had to be referred to the police.

Influx Control Abolition Bill Tabled in Parliament

MB091325 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1255 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Parliament, May 9, SAPA — The abolition of influx control bill, which will do away with the pass book as an influx control measure, but at the same time tighten control on "nuisances such as disorderly squatting" was tabled here today. A memorandun attached to the bill says the government accepts that freedom of movement to and in urban areas should apply "on a non-discriminatory basis for all citizens of the Republic of South Africa, taking into consideration the distinctive settlement circumstances of communities in the republic". Government urbanisation policy, it says, is that:

— urbanisation measures will not draw a distinction on the ground of race or colour;
— influx control as applied in terms of the Black (Urban Areas) Consolidation Act of 1945 will be abolished;
— the reference book system as an influx control measure will be abolished and replaced by uniform identity documents issued to all South Africans. Legislation to bring this about would be introduced by the minister of home affairs; and — universal measures to combat nuisances such as disorderly squatting, slums, and conditions that contain a health hazard will, where necessary, be "amended and applied more effectively".

A landowner convicted of ignoring such a prohibition will be liable to a R1,000 fine or six months jail, or both. It will be no defence for an owner to say that the squatters have settled on his land without his permission unless he proves in court that he is "actually pursuing" measures to get them off. This new section is coupled in the bill with an existing provision which prohibits anyone from settling on land without the permission of the owner. The penalty for contravention of this provision will be an increased fine from R200 to R1,000. The six months imprisonment for both stays. An existing clause which makes a squatter who stays on after being convicted, guilty of a "continuing offence" with penalties that increase with each day he stays, is to be scrapped. The fine for an owner who permits the erection of a building not approved of by the local authority on his land is to be increased from R500 to R2000. The maximum jail term — 12 months — stays the same, and the landowner may still be liable to both fine and imprisonment.

The penalty for an owner who fails to notify a local authority or the Department of Consititutional Development of the presence on his land of an unauthorised structure is to go up from R200 to R1,000, and remains coupled with a possible six-month jail term.

The fine for anyone contravening regulations laid down by the minister in connection with an emergency camp is to be increased from R100 to R500 for a first conviction, and from R200 to R1,000 for any subsequent conviction. The jail terms, of up to three months and up to six months, stay the same. The fine for anyone hindering any official authorised by the department to demolish a squatter dwelling, or by a magistrate to move squatters to another area, is to be increased from R500 to R2,000. The jail term of up to one year stays the same. Section 3C of the prevention of Illegal Squatting Act, which prevents employers from introducing employees into an urban area under certain circumstances unless the local authority has certified that proper accommodation is available, will be repealed.

The memorandum attached to the bill says that as some local authorities "do not have the ability to handle squatting" the bill gives the state president the power to entrust the execution of the squatting act to "a particular authority or functionary" within the area of jurisdiction of that local authority.

A schedule to the bill lists seven acts and two proclamations which are to be repealed entirely, and another 25 acts which are to be repealed in part. To be repealed are the:

— Blacks (Urban Areas) Consolidation Act, 1945;
— Administrators Powers (Validation) Act, 1950;
— Blacks (Urban Areas) Amendment Acts of 1955 and 1978;
— Blacks (Prohibition of Interdicts) Act, 1956;
— Black Laws Amendment Act, 1957;
— Contributions in respect of Black Labour Act, 1972; and — Proclamations 270 of 1966 and R 74 of 1968. The latter proclamation deals with black labour regulations.

To be partially repealed are the:

— Black Laws Amendment Acts of 1937, 1952, 1963, 1964, 1968, 1970, 1974, 1976, 1977 and 1978;
— Development Trust and Land Amendment Acts, 1936, 1939, 1954, 1956 and 1958;
— Black Laws Further Amendment Act, 1957;
— Group Areas Act, 1966;
— Black Affairs' Administration Act, 1971;
— Second Black Laws Amendment Act, 1978;
— Laws on Cooperation and Development Amendment Acts of 1979, 1980, 1981, 1983 and 1985; and — Laws on Cooperation and Development Second Amendment Act, 1979.

The bill is to be retroactive, with effect from April 23 this year.

Commentary Favors Security Action To End Violence

MB120624 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English
0545 GMT 12 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] Two things must be apparent to all fair-minded people in South Africa today: the government's commitment to reform and the fact that the violence in the country simply has to be brought to an end. It is well documented that instability is inherent in the process of change. Any society adapting to the changing circumstances experiences increased tensions. In the South African situation, however, it is clear that this natural phenomenon is being grossly aggravated by the efforts of groups whose own goals are thwarted by peaceful change. Because of the link between change and instability it is an essential condition for successful reform that law and order must be maintained. This view has been stated repeatedly in our commentaries, and we do so again with no apologies.

The continuing situation in the country is now no more than a response to reform itself. Violence is feeding on violence, to the extent that even sympathisers with the extremists are recoiling from the horror of it all. The situation as it has now developed completely negates two hackneyed arguments from the left of the political spectrum — that apartheid is the rootcause of violence in South Africa and that the violence is a response to oppression. On the first charge, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the British Parliament not so long ago: I do not accept that apartheid is the root cause of violence in South Africa, nor do most other people. How do you then explain the total and utter violence in Uganda? And if it were true that the violence is a response to oppression, it must follow that reforms that have taken place would result in an abatement of the violence. And the argument that reforms, particularly those announced most recently, are cosmetic and have no real substance can no longer be taken seriously.

It has been stated unequivocally that the government is committed to power-sharing between all the peoples of the country. The state president could hardly have put it more clearly than when he stated: All South Africans must be placed in a position where they can participate in government through their elected leaders.

What remains to be decided now is the mechanics, the structures, for bringing this about. The days are past, however, when the government would have simply announced how this would be effected. Instead, it has stated that the country's constitutional future will be decided by representatives of all its peoples. Patently, the violence and unrest is aimed at wrecking this process and ensuring that its objectives are not realized. There are identifiable groups in the country that have no interest in sharing power. Their goal is to seize power. And the fomenting of violence in order to try to render the country ungovernable is part of the softening-up process towards that end. An added dimension to the problem is that the continued violence from the leftist radicals is fueling the designs of those on the right who, for opposing reasons, are also against the evolution of a more just and equitable constitutional dispensation. Clearly, effective security action, backed by enabling measures, will now have to be taken in the interests of the vast majority of South Africans if this two-edged threat of total anarchy is to be avoided.

Heunis Says State Must Take 'Coercive Action'

MB091552 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1507 GMT
9 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 9, SAPA — The state had to take certain "coercive action" in the interest of reform, the minister of constitutional development and planning, Mr Chris Heunis, said today. If this did not succeed, communities who sought peace would not be able to negotiate frankly with each other, he said during the debate on his budget vote. Violence encouraged further violence and as such could not support reform alone. This was not to say that the state could not use force. "Let there be no illusion, the state must, in the present circumstances, use its power to take certain coercive action (dwangaksies) in the interest of reform and the continuation of reform. I want to emphasise that the security forces goal cannot be to take over all government actions but to ensure the conditions in which those actions can continue on social and political levels."

Mr Heunis said the only people who welcomed violence were those who wanted to destroy reform. It was not possible to condemn "Marxist revolutionaries" without at the same time condemning the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging, [Afrikaner Resistance Movement] he said. It is they who do not want negotiation and peaceful processes to succeed." Reform would fail if alternative systems came to being that recognised a different authority from the legal one. "Therefore the state's security component has a responsibility to visibly enforce the state's authority so that the reform process can proceed normally and that the system that is established in the process can function visibly."

"One-man, one-whip," Mr Ken Andrew (PFP [Progressive Federal Party] Gardens) said by way of interjection. Mr Heunis said all parties were agreed on the need for reform and the only question to be debated was how it should be furthered to allow everyone to take part. The reorganisation of his department reflected this commitment to reform and there was no room for an official who was not reform-oriented.

Replying to points raised during the debate, Mr Heunis said he wanted to repeat statements made before the 1983 constitutional referendum that the present constitution was not final but only a blueprint for a new structure. This would come about by way of evolution, he said. Mr Nic Olivier (PFP nominated) had said the NP [National Party] had created the election of a black majority government. However, Mr Heunis said, Mrs Helen Suzman (PFP Houghton) had said that this was the necessary result of her party's policy. "She didn't say that, "said Mr Brian Bamford (PFP Groote Schuur) in an interjection. Mr Heunis said that, no matter how the PFP's proposed federal system was drawn up, a white minority would not result in any of its commponents. Greater consensus among white political parties was a prerequisite for democratic change, Mr Heunis said.

14 Convenience Stores Closed Due to Strike

MB091228 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1215 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 9, SAPA — Pick'n'Pay had been "forced" to close 14 of its supermarkets and hypermarkets throughout the country due to "unlawful and unruly behaviour on the part of striking workers," the company said in a statement today. The closures, affecting 2,465 workers at three hypermarkets and 11 stores, was to "protect our customers," the statement said.

Pick'n'Pay is engaged in a pay dispute with the Commercial Catering and Allied Workers Union of South Africa (CCAWUSA), which is claiming an across-the-board increase of R90 a month. Pick'n'Pay has offered R80 a month backdated to March 1 or a split increase of R60 a month from March with a further R30 in July. CCAWUSA has rejected the offer and refused to negotiate.

The statement said 4200 workers "slept-in" at 24 stores and five hypermarkets "peacefully" last night. "Management ensured that food was provided for these employees and unrestricted access was permitted to canteen and ablution facilities. All 38 stores and seven hypermarkets affected by the industrial action opened this morning for normal trading. Due to unlawful and unruly behaviour on the part of striking workers and in order to protect our customers, 11 stores and three hypermarkets have been forced to close," the statement said.

The closures affect the Durban hypermarket, the Bedworth hypermarket in Vanderbijpark in the Transvaal, and the Blomfontien hypermarket. Seven of the stores are in Natal, two in the [Orange] Free State and one in the northern Cape.

Durban Students Arrested

MB101151 Umtata Capital Radio in English 1100 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Support for striking Pick'n'Pay workers has landed about two dozen students in police custody. Carmel Rickard sends this report:

[Rickard] A number of students have been arrested by riot police after they held a demonstration supporting the striking Pick-'n'Pay workers. The students, mostly from Natal University in Durban and from the University of Durban-Westville, held their demonstration at the Musgrave shopping center on Durban's Berea this morning. While placard-holding striking workers continued to occupy the store, the students on the other side of the closed glass doors shared their support for what they called the workers' demand for a living wage. The lawyers acting for the students have been told by the police that they will be charged, but police have given no further details and the students are apparently all still being held.

Troops, Police Make Arrests in Oudtshoorn Township

MB091606 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1552 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 9, SAPA — Police and troops moved into Bongolethu township near Oudtshoorn at 4am today and detained many people, according to a community worker. The worker, who asked not to be named, said troops helped police to search homes and arrest people. He said those detained were mainly young men. The township was sealed off after 15 Casspirs, Hippos, army jeeps, lorries, and motorcyclists moved in. A police helicopter was also used.

Col Eddie Snyman, police liaison officer for the South-Western Districts, said "a number of people" were detained during "a crime-prevention operation." Troops cordoned off the area while police entered, detaining a number of people for questioning, Col Snyman said. He said more details would be available when the operation ended.

Several people were arrested during a crime-prevention operation at Maraisplaas near Mossel Bay yesterday. Col Snyman said a "large number" of people were arrested yesterday for crimes ranging from burglary and stock theft to public violence, attempted murder and malicious damage to property. Two men were arrested for possessing ammunition without licence, a woman was held for possessing mandrax and dagga, [marijuana] and another woman for dealing illegally in liquor.

The raid "was not conducted from door-to-door."

Cape Town Police Turn Away Detainee Supporters

MB091904 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1834 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 9, SAPA — A delegation of about 20 people who feared "that relatives and friends would be severely tortured and harrassed in detention under Section 29" were confronted by the security police when they tried to deliver a letter to the commissioner of police today. The letter condemned the way in which the detainees were detained and placed under Section 29. About 50 people had met at the Methodist Church hall in Buitenkant Street and decided to send a group of about 20 relatives and friends to the commissioner of police. On their way a police captain warned them to "disperse immediately" and that it was an illegal gathering. The group returned to the church hall while police waited outside until they left the church.

The family and friend of Mr Quentin Michaels, Mr Cecil Esau, Mr Mayo Maqatesha, Mr Anderson Ncivita, Mr Reed Macozona, Mr Joseph Gosani, Mr Neville van der Rheede and Mr hudson Ghila demanded "that we be afforded the opportunity to visit our respective family as a matter of urgency." They also wanted the commissioner of police to ensure, in writing , that he would release the detainees soon. The incident was confirmed by a police liaison officer for the western Cape, Lieutenant Attie Laubscher.

Vigilantes Destroy Homes of Crossroads Activists

MB100851 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0945 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 9, SAPA — The shacks and homes of members of the former Old Crossroads committee, who fled the squatter camp this week fearing an outbreak of right-wing violence, were destroyed by "witdoeke" [white scarves] today — allegedly under police protection. This was claimed at a press conference in New Crossroads today, where nine former executive committee members all blamed Old Crossroads leader, Mr Johnson Nxobongwana and his supporters, who include the present Old Crossroads Executive Committee, 19 "headmen", their "cabinets" and a vigilante force, the "witdoeke", of inciting violence in the community. The nine former members are Mr Elliot Dyakopu, Mr Wilson Zakile, Mr Anton Qukumpu, Mr Don Nofemela, Mr Enoch Nqwenze, Mr Samuel Langa, Mr Erasmus Lugalo, Mr Johannes Bambi and Mr Albert Napahakete.

They alleged that when "witdoeke" were "collapsing" their shacks today and either removing or stealing and smashing their possessions, security forces — in a Casspir and in a helicopter that hovered overhead — stood by as "protection" for the vigilantes.

They also alleged that at a mass meeting on Sunday at Old Crossroads, a present Executive Committee member, Mr Sam Ndima, told his audience that "he had permission from the authorities" and would not be charged or apprehended by police for killing or attacking "comrades," or members of progressive and UDF [United Democratic Front]-affiliated organisations. Mr Ndima was also alleged to have said the "witdoeke" were in possession of "600 guns," which they would use for the killings.

A police liaison officer for the western Cape, Lieutenant Attie Laubscher, tonight rejected the allegations against the police "with the contempt they deserved".

Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report]

Johannesburg Petrol Bombing

In a front-page report on three petrol bombings in Johannesburg, Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 9 May cites the rector of the Bramley Anglican Church, one of the targets of the bombs, as saying that "he thought the church, which is part of the Johannesburg Diocese of which the Right Rev Desmond Tutu is Bishop, was singled out along with the house of Mr Martin van der Ploeg, founder of the Civil Convergence organisation, because they have both been involved in providing relief in the form of blankets, food and accommodation to those Alexandra residents that have had their homes burned down or have been threatened by other Blacks."

Pick'n'Pay Strike

An article on page 2 discussing the strike at Pick'n'Pay by the Commercial Catering and Allied Workers Union [CCAWUSA] quotes company chairman Raymond Ackerman as saying he was not quoting the CCAWUSA leader when he noted that a unionist had told him they wanted to make the country ungovernable but rather a unionist from another union who had made the remark 18 months ago. Still, he said that it was true that his company paid higher wages than competitors and that even after further offers the union leaders refused to negotiate. " 'I can only construe that they are gunning for us for other reasons,' said Mr Ackerman. 'That's not the way to get South Africa right. If the unions are going to squeeze the people fighting for a better South Africa, then they're going to destroy South Africa, and I'm not prepared to let them do that. I'm not prepared to let them destroy 19 years of staff development, of working for fair payment policies, employee housing, education and job advancement.' "

CITIZEN on Store Bombing

THE CITIZEN's editorial on page 6 says that the Benmore Garden explosion should be a reminder to those with "an easy going attitude" towards the ANC organization that it is still "a terroristic one — and that it doesn't care who it hurts or injures." A limpet mine was set off in a crowded shopping center and it was a miracle no one was hurt. If someone had been, the ANC would have regarded him as a victim in the "crossfire" with the government. That it occurred at a Pick'n'Paystore during a strike was interesting. Raymond Ackerman, chairman of Pick'n'Pay, has been one of the businessmen most vociferous in asking for reform yet his firm was being singled out for attack and was being used as a "political football." Perhaps Mr Ackerman will learn "that being a nice guy, or having a good track record in industrial matters, or taking the lead in demands for change, will not protect him from the machinations of the radicals."

Freedom of Association

Brian Stuart reports from Cape Town on page 10 that "with the lifting of influx control, South African Blacks will obtain rights to be accommodated as guests in White, Coloured and Indian group areas — implying a large measure of freedom of association." In the past, blacks were subject to pass raids when visiting friends in other areas. With the pass laws gone blacks are free to use the exemption in the Group Areas Act, Section 26, "since South Afrian citizens can no longer by their mere presence be 'illegally' in an area." This was confirmed to the paper by senior officials of various departments involved in reviewing the legislation to be repealed by the new act. According to the Group Areas Act, visitors may remain in another group's area as a guest for up to 90 days. The opening of Central Business Districts gives blacks other rights. Black businessmen can now buy land and conduct business in any open district in the country. Furthermore, "in terms of the lifting of influx control laws, a Black man is able to seek work whereever he can find it."

Reform Costing Support

Another article by Brian Stuart on page 11 says that "reform is losing the National Party [NP] support, but it is crucial to South Africa's future to meet the aspirations of more than 10 million Blacks who live and work in the country, according to the NP." According to the party publication THE NATIONALIST, the party was "now losing support because of its programme of constitutional, political and socio-economic reform." The paper says that if the party had extended its power base, the conservative parties would have no support but doing so would have been "extremely irresponsible. It would in the long term lead to disaster to go ahead, in a fast changing world, with policy directions which are no longer practicable, simply in the interests of popularity." Even with the independent black states, there were still 10 million blacks in South Africa with no political rights and there was no moral justification for expecting them to live for an indeterminate period without rights simply because they were black. The conservative parties had no solution to this problem.

Catholic Stand Criticized

"Leading Catholics in the Verwoerdburg parish of Lyttelton have hammered their bishops — in the presence of Pretoria's Archbishop George Daniel — for their continued backing for economic pressure on South Africa," THE CITIZEN reports on page 12. Severe criticism of the Southern African Catholic Bishops Conference was expressed at a meeting Monday night in the parish. The meeting discussed the "watered down" decision of the conference, which Catholics said indicated the bishops were "backing down" in the face of opposition to the "liberation theology."

CITIZEN on Reform Conflict

The 8 May edition of Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English carries an editorial on page 6 which cites conflicting opinions from the left and right concerning the government's policy but says that "reform is irreversible." The rightwing parties fear the end of white rule but the policy is aimed at power-sharing, not black domination. Although it may be difficult to control the situation when the blacks sense "liberation," "it would be impossible to put out the fires of insurrection if an attempt were made to put back the lid, suppress Black aspirations by force, and deny Blacks the opportunity to share in the government of the country." The paper says it is strange that the threat of white extremism is as great as of black extremism and strange that people cannot understand that "there can be no domination by any section over another, but only chaos and conflict if it is attempted."

UWUSA 'Overwhelmed' by Membership Requests

"The newly formed United Workers Union of South Africa [UWUSA] says it has been so overwhelmed with applications for membership that the few offices it has established cannot cope," the paper reports on page 8. At a press conference in Johannesburg, it listed the companies in which it had gotten majority support; most are in Natal. The union's general secretary said he could not disclose the names of the unions which had discussed affiliating with UWUSA. On strikes and stayaways, he said they would be used as " 'the last resort. There is a tendency among certain leaders to think for the people without consulting them. We will negotiate first and if negotiations fail, we will refer the matters to the workers who can take a ballot. We do not believe in taking decisions without a mandate from the community.' " He said that many people had told them their unions were dragging them into " 'ideologies foreign to them.' "

Mandela's Moderation

Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English on 7 May carries an editorial on page 8 saying that Nelson Mandela's positive attitude toward negotiation is "very encouraging." Few black leaders have as high a standing and he could help restore peace to the townships. Although there has been optimism of possible negotiations with the ANC as a result of the Commonwealth Group, "the whole style of Nationalist politics militates against negotiation with the ANC." It makes little sense to release Mandela unless the ANC is unbanned and negotiations begin but it seems improbable that P.W. Botha is ready to take such a step. "It seems more probable that he will play for time and fend off intensified Western sanctions."

Opening Business Districts

In a second editorial on the same page, the paper welcomes the opening of four Peninsula business districts to all races and says this "will help to untie the straitjacket in which businessmen of colour have hitherto been restricted" in the areas. It may also stimulate the economy. "But why this piecemeal method of abolishing racial discrimination in the commercial sector? Why could not all business areas in the city and Peninsula be declared open to all races, instead of dispensing bits at a time?" The Group Areas Act was amended 2 years ago to permit this reform. "It is a pity that this long-approved reform must be spoilt by both the tardiness of its implementation and its fragmentary natuee."

One Parliament Needed

In his "Politics Midweek" column on the same page, Michael Accot notes the speeches made by Indian and coloured ministers in the white House of Assembly and says "many suspect that it is only temporary, that eventually the divisions must come down and we will have one Parliament with one debating chamber where decisions are taken jointly by all, including black representatives." The president has not committed himself to one parliament, however. The government will probably keep making offers that get rejected until it sees it must offer genuine power sharing. But "by that time, it might find it has no credible takers because black demands harden with every evasion or delay of decision that should have been taken years ago."

No Scramble in Cape

CAPE TIMES Property Editor Neill Hurford reports on page 9 that "there will be no frantic rush by black business people to buy buildings in the Peninsula's four business districts proclaimed 'open' by the minister of constitutional development and planning," according to major commercial property brokers and rental agents who said there were no deals pending for sale of property to blacks in the four areas. Brokers said there was already black investment in these areas through nominees. They also said there were few properties for sale and certainly no bargains. One broker said that this move might stimulate the market but "there will be no scramble. A lot of the interest will be from professional people looking for office accommodation in the city." There would also be an upsurge of interests from traders looking for rented commercial space, "particularly in what was termed the informal sector."

Delight Over Opening

A related story on the same page reports that "black businessmen yesterday welcomed the opening of four business districts in the Peninsula and said they were 'delighted' that the areas had been opened to all races." According to one black business group, the chnage proved that government was moving away from " 'a strict business policy based on colour.' " According to the chairman of the group, " 'if only the iniquitous Group Areas Act can now be scrapped, as I consider the time ripe for such an undertaking, we shall all be moving towards a healthy and harmonious South Africa, which I hope is the aspiration of all constructive and peace-loving South Africans.' "

Barclays Bank on Loans

Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English on 9 May reports on its front page that Barclays Bank chairman Timothy Bevan has said that the bank would not resume lending to South Africa even if the debt moratorium had ended. Asked if the abolition of the pass laws would change Barclays policy, he said: " 'Progress has not been made.' "

Sullivan Code Change

In a report from Washington, Simon Barber quotes Rev Leon Sullivan as saying that U.S. companies in South Africa must adopt " 'a stringent course of corporate civil disobedience to challenge actively all apartheid laws.' " Companies must also immediately increase the number of blacks in senior management positions " 'to assure that, as quickly as possible, there will be appropriate representation of blacks in the management groups of each company at all levels.' " Sullivan said: " 'I am asking companies to use their legal and financial resources to the fullest extent possible...to assist blacks in the equal use of all private and public amenities, such as parks, beaches, hospitals, theatres, public transport, schools and housing.; " which goes well beyond the original Sullivan principles.

Freedom to Move

In a page 6 editorial, BUSINESS DAY says the government's decision to start buying large tracts of land to house people moving toward the cities is "a logical and sensible one." There is no doubt that rural people are coming to the city "in hordes" and if land is not set aside for them, they will set up homes anywhere. There will be some objections from whites but the truth is that most will not be affected. "The Nationalists have taken half a step towards reality by recognising that mass housing for the poor must be provided, and that it can be; now it should drop the other shoe and recognise that freedom of movement must be permitted and that it can be. We just don't need the Group Areas Act."

Debt Repayment Talks

An article on the same page by Gerald Prosalend discusses the maneuvering that went with reaching agreement on the debt repayment, and says that the success of such an agreement "is now firmly linked to political reform. Although they have made no specific political demands, foreign bankers turned watchdog are closely monitoring government's reform initiative." Most bankers agree the agreement was a remarkable achievement, with South Africa allowed to salvage a measure of respectability. However, "it is clear that foreign banks have SA over a barrel and are increasingly becoming the power brokers in this country's future economic health. Which means SA simply has to normalise its links with the outside world."

Unemployment Crisis

BUSINESS DAY reports on page 7 that "increasing unemployment has caused desperation among hundreds of able-bodied blacks — particularly those who moved from the homelands to cities hoping to find work." The unemployment lines get longer every day. Some say they have been out of work for more than 2 years and their hopes of finding jobs are dwindling every day. Battles with bureaucracy also makes the situation worse. Many of the unemployed live precariously in the city hoping for work, seeking refuge in alley, parks and the open veld.

Economic Stimulation

John Tilston, economics editor, writes on the same page that "a majority of economists believe the economy now needs some fiscal stimulation to regain its infant momentum of late last year." Although the failure of the economy to improve has been attributed to a general lack of confidence, one economist says "there is also an inability on the part of the private sector to do anything. Resources are stretched to the limit, and lower interest rates alone will not make much difference." The government says the private sector has been led to water but is not drinking; the private sector says the government has yet to fill the trough. If something is not done, according to the economist, the country might slide into "a vicious circle of economic and political disasters."

Sanctions on South Africa

Neil Lurssen reports from Washington for Johannesburg THE STAR in English on page 1 of its 9 May edition that "the leaders of the world's top seven democracies believe economics sanctions will not solve South Africa's problems," according to White House spokesman Ed Djerejian. He said that there had been basic agreement on South Africa and that sanctions were not locked upon as an effective approach.

Freeing South Africa

"Christ will liberate South Africa, even if he uses the ANC or the Russians to do it," according to Netherlands Reform Minister Nico Smith, the paper reports on page 4. He told a memorial service in Pretoria for th people who died in Winterveld on 26 March that "the Church had failed to stop apartheid. 'We have watched it unfolding like a horror movie. People are being treated like sheep and are being slaughtered.' "

COSATU Divided

Sheryl Raine reports on the same page that "radicals were ahead of the rank and file membership of the Congress of SA Trade Unions (COSATU) and insufficient attention was being paid to seeking mandates from embers for executive action," according to a labor expert at Cape Town's Graduate School of Business. "She said the more pragmatic leadership within COSATU realised the confrontation politics being espoused by some COSATU officials posed a real danger for the union movement unless those responsible knew how and when to beat a strategic retreat." She said unions could be classified as reformist or radical in intent, with radicals wanting to use the unions to overthrow the capitalist system. However, their roles as independent bargaining agents would likely be the first casualty of any new non-capital regime.

Banker Quizzed

The paper's bureau in London reports that Lord Barber, chairman of the Standard Chartered Bank has been quizzed by the "End Loans to South Africa" pressure group who wanted to know why Standard was not following Barclays in cutting off loans to the country. He said that the only way to bring peace to South Africa was to dismantle apartheid but "how this was to be achieved was another question." He also said that "his bank's loans to South Africa were not a moral issue but a matter of judgment."

Whipping Pupils

THE STAR's editorial on page 10 says that whatever the provocation at Arcadia high school in Cape Town, the "sjambok [whip] injuries inflicted by the police there this week suggest that a totally unacceptable level of force was used by the security forces to quell the demonstration." "It is essential the police get past this oft-repeated position of emerging as the instigators of grievances. Until they modify their methods of handling unrest — and agree to open and impartial inquiries when the actions are questioned — they will appear blameworthy in the eyes of the world regardless of the circumstances. The minister must assert his authority to ensure the police stop landing the country in this intolerable position."

Emigration Issue

THE STAR's second editorial on page 10 notes the net loss of people in January and the developing trend toward losing people, mostly white and mostly well qualified. "Should the tendency continue, the loss would be very serious indeed." Many bright young people in business are seeking to emigrate. "Can the country afford it? Whatever society emerges in the difficult days to come, South Africa is going to need all the skills it can muster. That is yet another reason why political delay can be so damaging to us all."

Different Worlds

Frederick van Zyl Slabbert's "My View" column on the same page notes that in the past few weeks the author has talked to young blacks and then to young whites about the future of the country. "It was like walking around in two different worlds." Although the white world has all the solid institutions, the young whites were "beset with anxiety and experiencing a severe role crisis" while the young blacks, living in disorder, were "confident, self-assured, and excited about the future." Afrikaaner youths are worried about how they can fit themselves into a black future and most are so depoliticised that they do not understand what is happening around them. Young blacks, on the other hand, are cool and confident, but some also want to talk. "If only they can do so, perhaps ones confidence about the future will no longer be a source of anxiety for the other."

Heunis: 'Minister of Everything'

David Braun reports from Cape Town on page 11 that Minister of Constitutional Development Chris Heunis and his department have moved into the center of the parliamentary stage. Some people in jest say that Mr Heunis "has assumed so much authority and so many new duties in this portfolio that he should be more aptly called Minister of Everything." More seriously, others say that his powers are so extensive that "it would make for a more efficient administration if he were made Prime Minister to President P.W. Botha's executive State President," thus alleviating Botha of some of the crushing duties of the president. Heunis heads a special cabinet committee which has been for some years "secretly investigating how black people can be brought into the country's political processes." By last month, the committee had received representations from 135 people and groups. He is also in charge of local governemnt plans for the future. However, one aspect of his philosophy — the Group Areas Act — "is expected to come under heavy fire again."

Floating Rand

An article by Dr Roger Gidlow on page 12 discusses the implications of the Tokyo summit decisions to more actively intervene to produce more stable, but still floating, exchange rates. With these currencies still floating, there is no reason "for arguing that South Africa's policy of managed rand floating will change." If the fluctuations are less, presumably there will be less intense pressure on the rand, other things being equal, and therefore the leads and lags problems will be less, as leading and lagging "thrives in conditions where predictable movements are anticipated in the value of the rand against other currencies." The floating rand "does provide an important element of uncertainty about future movements of the rand." However, it is unlikely that the Reserve Bank will increase its interventions as it has already been involved in such action far more so than the United States has.

Death of Union Leader

The death of William Olifant, chairman of the South African Allied Workers's Union's Workers' Committee at Noordfed in Lichtenburg, was described by the union as a " 'deliberate campaign to intimidate an organisation that caters for workers' interests,' " according to a page 2 story in Johannesburg SOWETAN in English on 9 May. Mr Olifant and the vice chairman of the committee were allegedly taken from work to the police station and were subsequently kidnapped and assaulted. Police later asked Mrs Olifant to identify a body, which was her husband. The union said that " 'what emerged was that he was brutally assaulted and died as a result of this asault or was killed after being assaulted.' " However, it said that the workers would " 'not be intimidated by faceless agents who carry out their evil deeds in the corridors of darkness.' " It also warned employers against assisting in such deeds.

Doctor's Release Demanded

A spokesman for the South African medical discussion group yesterday called on the governemnt to either charge or release Dr Bafana Zwane, a medical practitioner in Bophuthatswana. He was deported in January and subsequently detained under the Internal Security Act, the paper also reports on page 2. An organization spokesman said that " 'we abhor the detention witout trial laws in South Africa. Dr Zwane, who has now been declared persona non grata in a place where he stayed and practised, should either be charged or released.' " His family is worried about his physical and mental condition.

SOWETAN on EPG

The SOWETAN carries on page 4 an editorial discussing the Eminent Persons Group which has worked quietly with a low profile but seems "to have tacked onto some kind of deal that would involve the very core to the sharing of power in South Africa." The release of Nelson Mandela is part of the deal, but it should be accompanied by the unbanning of the ANC and Pan-Africanist Congress and the release of other political prisoners. "The ideal scenario following that would be for the Government to talk with these people and talk with them about the sharing of power." The government made a mistake by setting conditions for Mr Mandela's release which was reinforced when the state president asked the ANC to renounce violence. "If Mr Mandela is released and the ANC unbanned, it should follow that the gates towards further violence have been slammed shut. The violence was caused by the banning of these organizations and the jailing of its leaders. It seems simple enough to us, though we must admit others might not be so optimistic."

Cop in Command of Funeral "The eastern Cape's most senior policeman, Brigadier Ernest Schnetler, has undertaken to personally assume command of police monitoring a funeral in Zwide, Port Elizabeth, tomorrow and to ensure that police keep a 'low profile' during the proceedings." the paper reports on page 8. This was reported by United Democratic Front regional Vice President Henry Fazzie after he led a delegation meeting with Schnetler. He also told the delegation that several policemen who had been found to have "acted beyond their lawful duties while monitoring the gatherings in the twonships had been transferred to other police units."

Detentions Double

"Detentions under security legislation rose to 377 last month, well over double the 161 recorded at this time last year," the paper reports on page 13. The figure was suppplied by the Detainees Parents Support Committee. The committee said that there were 90 known detentions in April, which brought the figure to 377, but says that the actual figure is probably much higher, around 1,000. "This large discrepancy is due in the main to the extensive use of Section 50 on members of the communities whose names reach the public with great difficulty."

ANC on Negotiation

Johannesburg CITY PRESS in English on 11 May reports on its front page that the ANC sees no role for the Eminent Persons Groups in negotiations between itself and the government. According to an ANC source, this would be a " 'distortion of the fundamental reality of South Africa.' " The ANC regards the situation in South Africa as one of " 'internal colonialism' " and has made clear that in any negotiations, it wants a "two-sided table," with itself and other elements of the " 'democratic movement' " on one side and the government and its allies on the other, with no one in between. "This ANC source said the outlawed movement believed the current 'unity in action' being developed between the ANC and legal organizations would have to be carried through to any negotiations. He ruled out the ANC's acceptance of any round-table negotiations in which a whole range of small delegations sat bickering amongst themselves."

Activist Still Alive

In another page 1 report, Mono Badela writes that the family of Port Elizabeth Community leader Qaqawuli Godolozi believe he is still alive, as are his two lieutenants, all of whom have not been seen for a year. They believe he is being held at the Alexandra police station, 90 kilometers away, and have petitioned the Port Elizabeth Supreme Court to direct Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange to release the men.

CITY PRESS: 'Countdown' Started

On page 2, the paper carries a "comment" saying that "from all available evidence, the countdown has started. There is very little doubt that what we have been saying to this Government is slowly sinking in, and they are beginning to accept the realities of the real South African situation." The days of white superiority are over and "unilateral decision-making has at last been exposed as the biggest factor contributing to the continuing spiral of violence that has left deep and sometimes unhealable scars on the soul of this nation." As the ANC is the "largest custodian of the majority of our people's aspirations," it cannot be excluded from negotiations and the government seems to slowly be realizing this. P.W. Botha must now rise to the occassion. "For him the choice is spelt out loudly and clearly in historical terms: Chaos or peace — it is SA's choice."

Detainees Increase

According to the Repression Monitoring Group, "the number of South African detainees has increased by almost 500 percent — but the number who've been taken to court is even lower than before," the CITY PRESS reports on page 2. According to the group 2,387 people were held under the Internal Security Act in 1985 compared to 505 in 1984, however only 135 of these people (6 percent) were charged compared to 179 (35 percent) in 1984. The group said that the government would like the public to believe the detainees were engaged in illegal activity. However, " 'the fact that only 1 percent of the people detained in 1985 were convicted proves unequivocally that no such association exists. The primary aim of detentions is to gather information through the use of various forms of duress, to intimidate and harass activists and to hamper organisations through the removal of activists.' "

Activist's Death

"Sebokeng's Johannes Radebe is dead — only months after being acquitted on charges of high treason in the Pretoria Supreme Court," the paper reports on page 4. He was found dead in a field this week with several stab wounds on his body. A Vaal Civic Association spokesman said: " 'It is quite clear that his killing was not an ordinary criminal act.' " A post mortem is to be conducted.

Mohlakeng Struggle Continues

Another page 4 report says that "Mohlakeng's political war is still raging. Crucial talks to end the feud between members of AZAPO [Azanian People's Organization] and the UDF [United Democratic Front] had to be cancelled at the weekend." Both groups charge the other did not show up for the talks. Then a church where the AZAPO delegation was staying was petrol bombed. Issues to be discussed at the talks, aimed at solving differences between the two organizations, include the lawlessness in the area, the education crisis, and the formation of a Parents' Crisis Committee.

Vaal Pamphlets

The Vaal Civic Association [VCA] and Vaal Parents' Crisis Committee [VPCC] have criticized a " 'faceless organization' " — the Vaal Residents's Committee — for distributing pamphlets advising residents to " 'think of their stomachs' " and fight future stayaways and May Day, the paper reports on page 5. The pamphlets said these events were planned by people who wanted to earn money for doing nothing. A VCA spokesman said his organization was disturbed by such " 'narrow-minded suggestions.' " A VPCC spokesman said that such propaganda would have little effect as " 'boycotts will continue as long as black people in this country are oppressed.' "

Reagan's Double Standard

"Percy's Itch" column by Percy Qoboza on the same page says that while the Tokyo summit condemned terrorism, UNITA blew up a hotel in Huambo, Angola, killing 17, using U.S. weapons, a "cowardly attack on a facility used by civilians, many of them foreigners." By arming UNITA the U.S. has lost credibility as an honest broker, and Reagan has shown his "scorn for the power of diplomacy." "He is a warmonger who has been going around the globe sponsoring cruel wars in his support for totalitarian rightwing governments. He has shown himself to be the most dangerous threat to international peace."

BEELD on 'Wise Men'

On page 8, Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans on 9 May in an editorial says there is a serious danger that the handful of South African leaders who are still prepared to underwrite a democratic system are moving further away from each other. The reason for this should be sought in the increasing tendency to negotiate with each other through the media. It would appear that Chief Buthelezi is losing credibility because he is trying to negotiate with President Botha as well as with his radical political opponents, all at the same time. This leads him to make statements at times which are unacceptable to one or the other. For the whites of Natal he has to sound moderate, while for the sake of his radical opponents he has to shake off the moderate image. Mr Enos Mabuza of Kangwane, the paper says, is falling into the same trap. He is trying to become involved in dialogue with both the governemnt and the ANC, and unfortunately his public statements make it seem he is playing the one off against the other. "There is a clear need for a mechanism which enables leaders to talk with one another without making it appear politically suspect. The special cabinet committee is too closely linked to the government. What about a local, independent gorup of 'wise men' who can play the role of mediator?"

Port Elizabeth Beaches

The Johannesburg DIE VADERLAND in Afrikaans on 9 May reports on page 4 that the controversy in Port Elizabeth over the opening of its beaches to all races could cost the city's rate payers 10,000 rands if the city council decides to hold a referendum on the issue. The report says a meeting has been called for 20 May at which the public will discuss the council's recommendation to the administrator of the Cape that all beaches be opened. The meeting was called after petitions were presented by a city council member and the local branch of the Herstigte Nationale Party [Reformed National Party].

DIE VADERLAND on 'Silver Lining'

DIE VADERLAND's editorial on page 12 says despite the problems of black violence and threats of economic isolation, there are signs of a silver lining behind the dark cloud. "To speak of a breakthrough is perhaps not justified but nevertheless there are signs that the changes being brought about by the government are being noticed abroad." It points to the fact that the French Government has decided to send back its ambassador to South Africa as one of these signs. It also notes the postponement of a planned international conference on apartheid which was to have been held in London. Then, too, it says, there are indications that the disinvestment campaign in America no longer seems to be so intense. And it points to a seemingly more positive attitude among international bankers. "As noted these are not breakthroughs, and it would be wrong to wax lyrical. But it all points to progress, something which at one time seemed impossible. Even a journey around the world begins with the first step."

Aid for Unemployed

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans on 8 May reports on page 2 that thousands of people who are unemployed due to the poor economic climate have already been assisted this year under the government's emergency scheme for the unemployed, which was undertaken by the Department of Health and Welfare. The report says over 380,000 rands were spent in January under the scheme, more than 304,000 in February, 329,000 in March, and 362,000 in April. The report adds that in December, too, about 1 million rands were given to welfare organizations for people affected by the loss of jobs. "It is the policy of the department to prevent health and social problems due to poverty. The emergency scheme was started in September of last year to provide temporary assistance to breadwinners who were dismissed due to the weak economy."

Starving Children

On the same theme, the paper reports on page 6 that welfare organizations have indicated that with the coming winter, the number of starving children will increase. According to Mrs Rika Mellet of the Dutch Reformed Church social services in the southern Transvaal, her organization has had to provide food for 30 percent more people in the past 3 months than during the previous 3 months. In southern Transvaal, the organization has used 35,000 rands, provided by the government to provide food for 1,006 children under the ages of 10 years, and 2,008 people over 10 years. R.F. West, of the Jimmy O'Connor welfare service, told the newspaper: "'Hungry children also have hungry family members. This is why, last month, we asked school headmasters to provide us with the names of families who will need food parcels.'"

BEELD on Botha-Thatcher Initiative

In an editorial on page 8, the newspaper says the questions with which President P.W. Botha and Mrs Margaret Thatcher confronted the leaders at the economic summit in Tokyo are troublesome, but in time they will have to be addressed, otherwise the outside world cannot speak of constructive engagement. President Botha, it points out, sent a letter to the summit asking that the reforms in the republic be recognized. "Suddenly these leaders cannot continue playing political games. They will have to give credit where it is due, if they want to retain their credibility. This would give the lie to the propaganda of the ANC and other hostile forces overseas that oppression is increasing and that the government does not want change. The fact of the matter is: There have been remarkable changes in attitudes and legislation." Mrs Thatcher highlighted the problem of the security of the whites in the midst of racial conflict, asking the leaders to express their concern. While the proposal was not accepted, the world has been made aware of the dilemma of minorities. "Implied in the Thatcher request, however, is the realisation that the ANC, in its striving towards a unitary state dictatorship, will not protect minority rights." If the Botha-Thatcher initiative causes people somewhere to think again, that would be welcome progress.

BEELD Warns Kaunda

In another editorial on the same page, the paper says Dr Jonas Savimbi this week underlined the role of Zambia's President Kaunda as terror broker in southern Africa. South Africa, it says, has for long had to live with the frustration of Dr. Kaunda allowing the ANC to establish its headquarters in Lusaka, a comfortable and convenient base from which to plan and execute its terrorist attacks against this country. There are many factors, political and international, which have made it difficult for this country to take military action against Zambia, and Dr Kaunda up to now has been able to hide behind these factors. "But Dr Kaunda may now learn the hard way that bush fighters like UNITA are not restricted like formal governments. It will be much easier for UNITA than, for instance,South Africa to pay Dr. Kaunda in kind for providing the platform for destabilising forces. Dr Kaunda's flirtation with the Cubans could prove to be the last straw."

Freehold Plan

"Details of freehold rights for urban blacks — promised by President Botha — could be announced next week," Winnie Graham, property editor, writes on the front page of Johannesburg THE STAR in English. "There is, however, no news yet of where the Government is to buy land for black township development. A report tabled in Parliament this week says a project to upgrade 120 black towns, involving 15,000 stands and 1.2 million people, has already been started by the Department of Constitutional Development and Planning."

Schools Policy

An article on page 2 quotes white Education Minister Piet Claus as saying "the Government is sticking to the policy of exclusive white government schools despite predictions by Indian Own Affairs Minister Amichand Rajbansi that State schools could be intergrated on a selected basis." He said the government's policy had not changed.

Witbank Homes Attacked

"Four Witbank activists' homes are reported to have been petrol-bombed in the early hours of Thursday morning," according to another page 2 report. The attacks were all on the homes of members of the United Democratic Front [UDF]-affiliated Witbank Youth Congress and the Witbank Students' Congress. The spokesman said no one was injured.

Emigration Increasing

Also on page 2 the paper reports that "more South Africans are leaving the country as the economic squeeze and township violence continue. Latest statistics show the 'brain drain' has not abated and emigration has risen by 33.3 percent during 1985." A U.S. Embassy spokesman said about 80 families a month were leaving for the U.S. The Canadian embassy also reported a sharp increase in the number leaving. While emigration increased 33.3 percent, immigration dropped by 40 percent.

Bridging the Gap

David Braun's "political commentary" on page 8 cites Helen Suzman's remarks this week concerning Nelson Mandela's attitude towards negotiations. He says the problem is now one of "synchronisation. A formula has to be found in which the Government can unban the ANC and release political prisoners at the exact moment that they renounce violence and agree to peaceful negotiation." Many people in the government now admit the reform program will falter without genuine black leaders to negotiate with and the talks will not get off the ground without Mandela and the ANC. "There is the question of saving face, a very important factor in African (including Afrikaner) politics. Many whites would recoil at the prospect of releasing Mandela, let alone negotiating and sharing power with him. Any such move would erode the National Party's support, and that makes quite a few cabinet ministers nervous. Some ministers in any case are opposed to the idea so that such a move could rock the government dangerously." However, if viable negotiations do not begun, the country will continue to degenerate.

Unrest Deaths

Moira Levy reports from Cape Town on page 1 of Johannesburg THE WEEKLY MAIL in English on 9-15 May that "more than 50 percent of people shot by police in Cape Town last year were wounded in the back, according to a University of Cape Town Medical research report." This was one of two reports dealing with police behavior in the unrest. in one, a member of the UCT's Department of Forensic Medicine found that more than 50 percent were shot in the back and another 11.6 percent were shot in the side, "suggesting they had turned to run as police opened fire." The average age of victims was 25.2 years and 12.2 percent were under 15. The youngest was 7. The other report was done by the SACLA clinic in Crossroads and showed that about 500 people shot by security forces between February and November 1985 had been treated.

UWUSA Seeks Aid

Another front page report, by Phillip van Niekerk, says that the Inkatha-based United Workers' Union of South Africa (Uwusa) "is seeking large-scale assistance from overseas." One of the sources it has applied to is the U.S. AFL-CIO, and its African arm, the controversial African American Labour Centre. On 10 April the UWUSA secretary general led a delegation to Washington to seek aid from the group, although no firm offer of aid emerged from the meeting.

Objector on Detention

Mike Loewe reports from Port Elizabeth on page 2 that in an interview, conscientious objector Philip Wilkinson said that he had been received in a friendly manner during his time in the detention barracks. Internees and military policemen had come to talk with him and were not hostile. When one said "just wait until you get into the townships," he replied that he had been there many times, which "really floored" his listeners. They gave him a friendly send off when he was released.

Port Elizabeth Boycott

THE WEEKLY MAIL reports on page 2 that "a threatened boycott of white stores by the city's coloured and Indian communities moves a large section of Port Elizabeth's white commercial sector closer to extinction." Blacks have been boycotting the businesses for a month and already "to let" signs have sprung up in empty stores. "An extension of the boycott to coloured and Indian areas is sure to sever a lifeline for many white traders, who had been forced to rely on coloured spending power to maintain some turnover." A consumer boycott spokesman said the coloreds were ready to support the boycotts because the Ford pull-out and General Motors retrenchment had caused them not to trust the "white-dominated motor industry;" the concomitant rapid rise in colored unemployment; disappointment with the Labour Party's failure to reduce rents and bus fares; "heavy-handed" Labour Party handling of education issues; and heightened political activity in African areas.

Catholic Dilemma

On page 3, the paper cites Catholic Archbishop Denis Hurley as saying the "the Catholic bishops' controversial statement on economic pressure against apartheid contains contradictions which reflect the dilemma of conference members." The bishops are quite aware of the suffering caused by hunger, which might be increased with outside pressure. Also there is the dilemma of whether they actually want sanctions even though they call for them. The bishops tried to get around this by saying that "any form of economic pressure was welcomed as long as it did not destroy the fabric of the economy or significantly increase unemployment." However, they said that if there was no " 'significant change' they would call for the level of economic pressure to be stepped up."

Buti's Fortunes Slipping

Shaun Johnson reports on the same page that "Sam Buti's political fortunes now seem to be in a headlong slide in Alexandra." The Alexandra Action Committee (AAC) has strongly denied reports that township residents are prepared to accept Buti back as a member of their community resistance organisations, and it accuses him of using his meeting with Nelson Mandela to " 'pretend that he has been accepted by the national liberation movement.' " The AAC chairman said he did not think the people would ever accept Buti back. Residents were furious about his meeting with Mandela, who they regard as a savior.

Brits Township

Phillip van Niekerk Reports on page 5 that whites have for 25 years bought property in Elandsrand on the understanding that a ramshackle Brits township would be moved one day. Only last year, the 15,000 strong community was told it would have to move. However, they are resisting. The government is therefore caught between militant residents on one side and radical rightwing whites on the other. Large employer groups have intervened on the side of the residents. The township's friendly spirit is one reason the residents resist the move so fiercely. Despite the fact that the large employer groups have asked the government to halt the move, the government faces a strong rightwing backlash if they fail to force the move.

Union Battles

In a lengthy article on pages 6 and 7, Steven Friedman says that the May Day demonstration showed that a major battle was shaping up between the Inkatha-backed United Workers Union of South Africa and the Congress of South African Trade, unions which are generally categorized as being "popularist" or "workerist" respectively, with the latter being more militant. The message of May Day was that both were alive but does not say which is dominating. The outcome of the battle "could well shape our future for it will determine whether the resistance — and hence the society which emerges after apartheid — will be dominated by a concern for democracy, negotiation, and the organised strength of ordinary men and women,or by a battle to replace the present white elite with a black one."

People's Courts, Committees

Sefako Nyaka reports on page 9 on the formation of street committees in Mamelodi while Peter Honey reports on Mamelodi people's courts. Street committees were formed to take care of problems within their areas and to serve as representatives to higher committees which form the infrastructure providing independent governance of the townships. People's courts try offenders of various types of crimes. Both admittedly have been involved in instances where people have been punished for things without proper representation, but sources say that both attempt to give a fair hearing to people charged with crimes. For the people's courts there is even an appeals court which meets monthly to review people's courts decisions. The goal, according to one Mamelodi Civic Association official, is to " 'break away totally from government structures. The government must become irrelevant to their lives.' " He also said that at this juncture, the movement needs to make contact with whites to break down their confidence in the government and to isolate it so that it cannot continue to govern.

ZAMBIA

Kaunda Warns of 'Explosion' in Southern Africa

MB101213 Dakar PANA in English 1019 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Lusaka, 10 May (ZANA/PANA) — Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda yesterday's expressed grave concern at the West's failure to help (?prevent a) racial explosion in South Africa. Speaking a working breakfast he hosted for president of the Bahamas-based Equator Bank Mr Niles Helmboldt at State House, Dr Kaunda said the increased support for the racist Pretoria regime by the United States and Britian, and more recently France and West Germany, could only harden positions between the white minority and the black majority, thus raising the chances of a racial explosion in the country. He said it was disappointing that the West had failed to heed Zambia's advice on the right course of intervention to take if they were to help resolve the South African conflict. The attitude was not, however, new. Zambia's warning of a Zimbabwean war of independence if the West failed to stop UDI [Unilateral Declaration of Independence] fell on deaf ears resulting in the liberation war that brought the current government into power, he said.

The president warned that the patience of the black majority under apartheid rule had been exhausted, bringing it closer to a bloody racial confrontation with the ruling white minority regime. Sooner rather than later we will be facing this explosion unless something strong is done, Dr Kaunda said. The question was no longer if but when the confrontation would break unless the United States and the leading European powers took very decisive action against South Africa, President Kaunda said.

He said Zambia's concern in South Africa was out of both moral conviction and a vested interest in the situation. Dr Kaunda expressed the fear that the whole southern African region would be engulfed in the explosion when it did occur, and added that Western investment in the region would in the conflict also go up in flames.

Defends Cabinet Reshuffle

MB101235 Dakar PANA in English 1030 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Lusaka, 10 May (ZANA/PANA) — The recent reshuffle of key personnel in the Ministry of Finance and the Bank of Zambia was not designed to facilitate a drift away from the auction system, Zambia's President Kenneth Kaunda said yesterday. Speaking when he hosted a working breakfast for Equator Bank President Niles Helmboldt at State House, Dr Kaunda said he was aware the changes stirred some anxiety in Western financial circles. Zambia was, however, eager to assure Western financiers that the changes were part of an effort to make greater sense of the auction system.

Dr Kaunda said while the old team had done commendable work in establishing the system, it had failed to raise the kwacha to its real value against the United States dollar and other world currencies. The steep depreciation in the value of the kwacha since the inception of the auction system last October had resulted in a severe drop in the quality of Zambian life causing grave concern in the party and government, he said.

[Words indistinct] in Western capitals had expressed concern at the appointment of apparent socialists to key positions in the national economy, the state was believed to be liberalising through the auction system. We did this out of the conviction that it was the right thing to do. We are still convinced this was the right thing to do, the president said.

But for all the difficulties the currency auction system had created, it was proving an effective tool in Zambia's effort towards economic recovery. It had dealt a deep blow to the black marketeering in which unscrupulous businessmen had made hyper-profits through the exploitation of a helpless public. It had also ridden the Ministry of Commerce and Industry and the Bank of Zambia of the corruption that had made economic recovery through the pre-auction system difficult. We think that to a very large extent we have overcome that with the auction system, President Kaunda said. Mr Kaunda said Zambia would stick with the system despite the problems it may have created.

Meanwhile, Bank of Zambia sources today told ZANA the value of the kwacha against the United States dollar had dropped by about 160 per cent since the inception of the auction system last October. In reply, Mr Helmboldt, whose bank runs operations throughout the SADCC countries, said the establishment of the auction system had raised Western investors confidence in Zambia. He said Zambia's courage and innovativeness in implementing the auction was now being cited as the kind of action other African states could take to rise above their current economic difficulties. Mr Helmboldt said his bank was pleased with business developments in the country, despite the economic difficulties it was facing. He was accompanied to state house by Lusaka-based managing director for Equator advisory services Mr Tom Westcoat. Equator advisory services is a subsidiary of the Bahamas based Equator Bank.

Kaunda Asks Support for Mozambican Refugees

MB111148 Lusaka Domestic Service in English 1115 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] President Kaunda has called on poeple in the Eastern Province to continue keeping [as heard] Mozambican refugees running away from their country because of the civil war fanned by the racist South African regime. He pointed out that Mozambicans run away from their country not because they desire to be refugees but because of the confusion that has risen due to racist

South African machinations to try and remove their legitimate Frelimo government. The president was speaking shortly after arriving in Chipata to open the 60th provincial party conference at the Chipata training college.

Mugabe Returns From Malawi Visit 9 May

MB091644 Harare Domestic Service in English 1600 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] The prime minister, Comrade Robert Mugabe, who has been visiting Malawi, returned home this afternoon. While in Malawi, Comrade Mugabe toured several agricultural projects, including the (Churo) tea estate and the fisheries complex near Lake Malawi.

In a joint statement today, the two countries called for the immediate abolition of apartheid in South Africa. The statement, released at the end of Comrade Mugabe's 4-day visit, noted that apartheid is the root cause of instability in southern Africa, and also called for the immediate implementation of UN Resolution 435 on Namibia's independence. Both Zimbabwe and Malawi reaffirmed their moral, diplomatic, and political support for the people of Namibia in their struggle for self-determination. The communique reiterated the two countries' support for the Nonaligned Movement. The Malawian president, Dr Kamuzu Banda, wished the prime minister, Comrade Mugabe, success in hosting and chairing the movement's forthcoming summit in Harare.

Comrade Mugabe was accompanied on the visit to Malawi by several party officials and government ministers.

Mugabe Warns Against Tribal Divisive Elements

MB110907 Harare Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] The first secretary and president of ZANU-PF, Comrade Robert Mugabe, has warned party members against (division along) tribal lines. He was speaking at an election victory celebration rally in Masvingo yesterday. He said he is aware of such divisive elements and warned that the party will not tolerate them. Comrade Mugabe said that there is no one more important than the party whose primacy should be observed from the leadership down to the ordinary members. He assured the nation that there are adequate food supplies to feed everyone despite the drought which has affected some parts of the country. He said an assessment for deserving cases is currently under way and food for work programs will soon be introduced in drought stricken areas in Masvingo, Matebele, and North and South Provinces.

Condemns 'Flare-up' of Animosities

MB110901 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1835 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Masvingo, May 10, SAPA — The gravity of the recent flare-up of tribal animosities within Zimbabwe's ruling ZANU/(PF) was re-emphasised in Masvingo today when the prime minister, Mr Robert Mugabe, warned would-be "sectional leaders" they faced his wrath. Mr Mugabe received an enthusiastic reception at a rally in the heart of the home territory of the Karanga sub-section of Zimbabwe's majority Shona tribe. But his warning may have been intended for the ears of the ZANU/(PF) Masvingo Provincial chairman, Mr Eddison Zvobgo, and other Karanga personalities thought to be falling from his favour. Mr Mugabe stressed his determination to build a Zimbabwe which was above tribalism. Anyone who thought he was in ZANU/(PF) to lead a particular tribal group would not be tolerated, he said. The party, which was committed to Marxist-Leninist ideology, would "crush" the offender.

Mr Zvobgo and his close associate, Mr Byron Hove, were at the centre of a recent controversy in parliament when the minister of transport, Dr Herbert Ushewokunze, who is a Zezuru like Mr Mugabe, claimed Karangas were plotting his political assassination. Dr Ushewokunze had been accused by Mr Hove of "collaborating" with the perpetrators of a R600,000 railway housing fraud exposed by a parliamentary committee. In the aftermath Mr Mugabe axed Dr Ushewokunze from his prestigious position in the elite Politburo, while retaining him as transport minister. Mr Hove, however, was ordered to resign from parliament.

The internal row between the Karangas and Zezurus has been among the factors which have stalemated the unity talks between ZANU (PF) and Mr Joshua Nkomo's ZAPU, which is supported in Matabeleland — also along tribal lines.

Todays's Masvingo Rally was to celebrate Mr Mugabe's victory in the July 1985 general election when ZANU (PF) took 99.9 per cent of the votes in the Karanga-dominated Masvingo Province (once a stronghold of Mr Mugabe's rival, the founder of ZANU, the Rev Ndabaning Sithole, now in exile).

Security Forces Continue Crackdown on Dissidents

MB101225 Umtata Capital Radio in English 1100 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Security forces in Zimbabwe are continuing their crackdown on antigovernment elements. A police spokesman in Bulawayo says a man described as a dissident has been killed in a gun battle in the Plumtree area close to the Botswana border. He says three other people managed to escape. The dead man is reported to be the 12th insurgent to be killed in that area this year.

Zimbabwe's Matabeleland Province has been plagued by rebel activity since shortly after the country's independence 6 years ago. Much of the problem has been blamed on supporters of opposition leader, Joshua Nkomo, and the continuing conflict is likely to interfere with unity talks between Mr Nkomo and Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's party, currently underway.

MIDDLE EAST & SOUTH ASIA REVIEW

Israel and Syria

There is no chance of Israel reaching a political settlement with Syria so long as President Hafiz al-Asad remains in power, Israeli Prime Minister Shim'on Peres asserted in an interview reported by Jerusalem radio. He disclosed that Israeli efforts to establish a dialogue with the Syrians have received a negative response. As for Syria's military preparations, Jerusalem television stated that Israel takes a "very grave view" of fortifications recently established by the Syrians in eastern Lebanon, noting that a message on the issue has been transmitted to President al-Asad, but has "not yet borne fruit." The Syrians have prepared dugouts for tanks and artillery south of their current deployment line in the Al-Biqa' Valley, the television said, and while the United States has viewed these preparations as "defensive," the dugouts provide potential for an "offensive initiative" as large Syrian armored forces could occupy them within hours. In another military development, Beirut radio cited reports from southern Lebanon that Israeli military convoys were seen moving toward the Golan Heights during the night of 12-13 May. However, the commander of UN forces on the Golan earlier told IDF radio that both the Israeli and Syrian sectors of the heights were "quiet" with both sides adhering to their agreements.

In a related commentary, Jerusalem radio's Arabic service accused Syria of "war hysteria," adding that the crucial question now is whether the Damascus rulers will "slip and fall in the trap or whether they will show wisdom by deciding not to go to the brink of disaster." In Syria, Damascus radio's Palestine broadcast maintained that Britain's recent behavior toward Syria is aimed at providing a "cover for an Israeli aggression," which is "likely to take place but will certainly be defeated."

Syria-Iran

Reporting on the Syrian foreign minister's 12 May visit to Iran, Tehran radio said he stressed the importance of "further unity" between Iran and Syria and delivered a "kind message" from President al-Asad to Iranian President 'Ali Khamene'i.

Iran-Iraq War

An Iraqi military communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio reported further fighting in the East Maysan sector, claiming that Iraq's IV Army Corps defeated an enemy infantry attack, killing 76 Iranians, while over 240 Iranians were killed in other recent action in the area. An Iraqi military source cited by INA maintained that 1,584 Iranians were killed during the IV Army's 9 May offensive in the East Maysan sector. An Iranian communique cited by IRNA reported fighting in the same region, stating that Iranian planes bombed Iraqi targets in the Faqqeh area 12-13 May while Iranian troops repulsed two Iraqi attacks. Iran launched further air attacks in the Faqqeh sector early 13 May, according to a military announcement reported by Tehran radio.

On the situation in the Gulf, Iran's Navy commander told ETTELA'AT that U.S. and French warships have recently been disturbing Iranian searches of cargo ships entering the Gulf, and he warned the United States and France against such interference, according to IRNA.

Libya

Announcing Libya's decision to expel 36 diplomats from the embassies of Italy, FRG, France, Netherlands, Spain, Belgium, and Denmark, JANA said the diplomats are being deported in retaliation for the "arbitrary measures" adopted by these countries against members of Libyan People's Bureaus. JANA noted that employees remaining at these embassies are henceforth confined to the Tripoli area, which they cannot leave without securing official permission. Libya would not have applied the principle of reciprocal treatment had there been any real justification for the deportation of Libyans from People's Bureaus in Western Europe, JANA's political editor affirmed in a related commentary. The expulsion of two Belgian officials means that U.S. interests are no longer represented at all in Libya, according to Brussels radio.

In a separate development, JANA claimed the Israeli Air Force chief of staff has disclosed that "five Zionist pilots" participated in the 15 April U.S. raid on Libya.

Tunisian Detained in France

A Tunisian suspected of bomb attacks in Paris and London has told French police that he received orders and explosives from a PLO official in Baghdad, Paris radio reported.

Qatar-Bahrain

Qatar released the 30 captive foreign workers 12 May, Bahrain's GULF DAILY NEWS reported, disclosing that the men were suddenly taken from their cells and put on a flight to Bahrain.

Klibi Warns Israel Against Attacking Syria

LD091023 Kuwait KUNA in English 0805 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Tunis, May 9 (KUNA) — Arab League Secretary General Chadli Klibi has warned Israel against the consequences of executing its plan to launch an aggression against Syria. In an answer to a question from KUNA, Klibi said such an aggression would be of dire consequences to peace and security in the Middle East and may be far beyond.

Klibi criticized the recent statement made by U.S. Vice President George Bush in which he accused Syria of sponsoring terrorism, noting that this statement has been issued after Bush's meeting with Israel's Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin. The allegations voiced by Bush came at a time Israel is concentrating its troops on the front with Syria and along the armistice line with Lebanon, Klibi also noted.

He expressed belief that any Israeli aggression on Syria following Bush's statement and the Israeli admission into the American star wars program would be the outcome of coordination between the U.S. and Israel and "would not be without impact on the Arab-American relations." Klibi concluded saying it is clear that the latest Israeli threats are being directed, through Syria, to all Arab forces which are struggling against the Israeli hegemony and which reject surrender and the liquidation of the Palestinian cause.

Arab Support for Al-Qadhdhafi Seen as 'Thin'

AU121708 Paris AFP in English 1649 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] London, May 14 (AFP) — Arab support for Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi is "thin indeed and may not last much longer," the International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS) said in a report released here Wednesday.

In its annual strategic survey 1985-86, the institute said the U.S. raids on Tripoli and Banghazi on April 15 had triggered official expressions of support in the Arab world for Col. al-Qadhdhafi including from moderate leaders.

But "it is clear that privately many of them would like to see him removed."

"There is little doubt that support for Al-Qadhdhafi is thin indeed and may not last much longer," the report added.

Referring to the Libyan leader's failure to greatly increase his infuence in neighboring African countries, the institute said his effectiveness had been "reduced" in the past year.

At the same time, the change in the Middle East balance of forces continued to tilt in the favor of hardliners. This was part of a trend that included the Iranian revolution led by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeyni, the assassination of President Anwar al-Sadat of Egypt and the Syrian victory in Lebanon, the institute said.

Israeli Soldier Fatally Stabbed in Janin

[Text] A military spokesman for the Palestinian revolution forces general command has stated the following:

In implementation of instructions issued to him, one of our hero revolutionaries operating inside the occupied homeland stabbed an enemy soldier in the Janin market in the occupied West Bank yesterday. The soldier was fatally wounded. Our revolutionary returned safely to base. The Zionist security forces besieged the operation area, launched large-scale search campaigns, and arrested a number of Palestinian citizens on the pretext of connection with the operation. Revolution until victory.

Continuing Reportage on Fasht al-Dibal Dispute

Qatar Releases Workers

GF130526 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English 13 May 86 p 1

[Article by staff reporters]

[Text] Qatar has dramatically released the 30 men it has been holding for 17 days.

Diplomats in Doha, who had been expecting just 17 men to be set free, were suddenly told all the men would be going home.

Within minutes of the announcement late yesterday morning the men - 25 Filipinos, two Britons, two Thais and a Dutchman - were taken from their cells to begin the journey back to Bahrain.

"They were just brought out at very short notice, taken straight to the airport and on to the plane," said a British embassy spokesman in Doha.

The men, employees of Ballast Nedam, Gray Mackenzie and Muharraq Engineering, boarded a scheduled Gulf Air flight to Bahrain.

Waiting at Muharraq to meet them were representatives of their employers, British, Dutch and Filipino governments and a number of Bahrain government officials.

The wives of two of the hostages, British chief engineer Richard Thompson and Dutch superintendent Wim Hoekendijk, met them directly off the plane.

While an official film crew and photographers filmed the homecoming in a private room the prisoners' luggage - including rolled up bed mats - was loaded on to a waiting Ballast Nedam bus outside the VIP exit.

Just over an hour after touchdown the entourage emerged looking well-fed but sombre and keeping tightlipped about their ordeal.

The three Europeans came out a few minutes after the main party and walked briskly to waiting cars.

"We are now going home," said 54-year-old Dutchman Hoekendyke. It was their sole comment.

British surveyor Brian David, Thompson and his wife Sudan all silently got into one car and it them sped off to join the rest of the party at the Ballast Nedam compound in Jasra.

Uncertainty About Resuming Work

GF130538 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English 13 May 86 p 3

[Article by staff reporters]

[Text] Ballast Nedam executives celebrating the return of their abducted employees yesterday said they couldn't tell whether they would finish the work they were doing when the Qataris attacked.

Middle East general manager Jan Kamphuys, speaking at the company's Jasra compound where the men were once again settling in, said "the first phase is over".

The second phase depended on the governments of Bahrain and Qatar resolving their territorial dispute over Fasht Al Dibal, he said, and until that happened it was impossible to say what Ballast Nedam's position would be.

"We have been aiming for the release of the men, and we are very relieved at the outcome of negotiations," he said.

He did not know whether the company would be completing its contract to build a coastguard station for Bahrain on Fasht Al Dibal - the work the 30 were engaged on when the Qataris attacked.

"That is not in our hands. We have no idea whether the work will continue. We will await instructions on how to proceed," he said.

Ballast Nedam's project manager in Bahrain, Pieter Andringa, said there were no plans to move the men out of the Middle East. They were all expecting to return to jobs in Bahrain.

Government Challenged by Religious Parties
LD110947 Kuwait KUNA in English 0813 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, May 11 (KUNA) — A local daily Sunday warned that the Kuwaiti Government will continue facing troubles unless it secured a majority in the National Assembly.

AL-SIYASAH daily explained that such a majority would be secured through either "a political system or arrangements between ministers and deputies."

"Otherwise wrangle will continue between the legislative and executive authorities," the paper underscored.

"When disputes intensified, some people whispered that the assembly would be dissolved and when things became cool, there was talk about strengthening democracy by strengthening the National Assembly, as if the assembly alone was the symbol of democracy," it argued.

AL-SIYASAH noted that "the only losers were the public who were waiting for something from the government or the assembly, but both were busy with each other."

Meanwhile, AL-ANBA' daily said that the government is currently facing a "serious challenge" that touches not only upon "its existence and future evolution as a present government, but rather on meaning of government and ruling."

The paper attacked the religious parties charging them of engineering the campaign to get rid of the education minister, Dr. Hassan al-Ibrahim.

The government is wrong if it speculated that getting rid of the education minister will be the last item in the religious parties demands, the paper went on.

It concluded that the government decision today will determine the fate of Kuwait and will tell its people if it is capable of continuing to shoulder responsibility or if it chose to give up leaving the religious parties to control the government's destiny and later power." [no beginning quotes as received]

The Kuwaiti Council of Ministers will decide today whether to accept or not the education minister's resignation.

Petroleum Minister Discusses Oil Market Problems
PM121110 London AL-SHARQ AL-AWSAT in Arabic 8 May 86 p 4

[Unattributed interview with UAE Petroleum and Mineral Resources Minister Dr Mani' Sa'id al-'Utaybah; date, place not given]

[Excerpts] Question: Now that the recent OPEC conference is over and with nerves relaxed after the 20-day tension of heated discussions, how do you assess the results of the conference and their effects on the oil market?

Answer: It has become abundantly clear that OPEC is still pursuing the same course it initiated after its ordinary meeting last December with a view to getting a fair share of world oil production. The proof is that OPEC's production, which at the end of the conference 2 weeks ago stood at around 17.4 million barrels a day, is now 18 million barrels a day. This reflects OPEC's determination to get an adquate share of the oil market.

OPEC only resorted to this course after it failed to unilaterally solve the oil market problems. The non-OPEC producing states are largely to blame for the current state of the oil market. In the years 1980-1985 they added 6 million barrels to daily oil production, and OPEC allowed that new level of production at the expense of its own production, so much so that by last December the non-OPEC producers were producing at full capacity while the OPEC members only managed to produce 40 percent of their capacity. It was this unjust situation which forced OPEC to abandon its role as a limit producer and enter the oil market as an ordinary producer. If we really want to remedy the oil market and solve its problems then all producers must sit at the same table and distribute burdens and sacrifices among themselves.

Question: Are we to understand from this that OPEC is still determined to pressure Britain and Norway in particular into cooperating with it?

Answer: We consider this to be realistic and effective, and it will continue until all non-OPEC producers respond to the voice of reason and wisdom so that everyone can contribute to the defense of the oil prices structure.

Question: In view of Britain's declared refusal to cooperate with OPEC do you see any possibility of any change in that position through the oil companies operating in the North Sea?

Answer: We do not like to enter a home by the window. We must enter through the door. The North Sea states must therefore bear some of the responsibility for defending the oil market, especially because they are mainly to blame for what has happened to this market and for the price collapse just as they will be to blame for a further prices drop in the future.

Question: The recent conference formed a five-member ministerial committee to contact the non-OPEC producing states. Do you believe that this committee will be able to achieve tangible positive results that would compel the non-OPEC states to cooperate with OPEC in this period?

Answer: That committee is one of the steps initiated by OPEC in an attempt to find suitable solutions to the oil market problems and to emphasize that it is not satisfied with or enjoying what has happened to oil prices and the subsequent loss of royalties. This position was forced on OPEC and is out of its hands. A solution would require more than just OPEC's efforts. We should not expect a solution to be handed to us on a silver platter and within a matter of a few days. More efforts are needed and there should be ample preparations for all future contacts with non-OPEC states.

Question: Last March you had the experience of dialogue with five non-OPEC producing states (that is the joint meeting held between OPEC and the non-OPEC states of Oman, Egypt, Mexico, Malaysia, and Angola on 19 March in Geneva). There was a quasi-agreement that these five states would cut their production by about 1 million barrels a day to support the oil market. How do you assess that experiment and is it possible to achieve positive results in the future with these and other states?

Answer: Our experience with the non-OPEC states is a severe one. True, some states have been positive and responded to our call, but a number of other non-OPEC producing states are still acting as spectators at a time when they are not unaffected by the losses suffered. These states will face major political and economic problems as a result of these losses. What has happened in Norway shows that failure to respond to OPEC's calls is highly detrimental to the governments of these states. As regards the five states we met with in Geneva, they confirmed their goodwill and came to us and expressed willingness to cooperate, but the other states which did not come, and which are more capable of giving and sacrificing more, should respond to OPEC's appeals and share its sacrifices if a quick solution is to be found to the oil market problem.

Question: I go back to the assessment of the results of the recent OPEC meeting. Some observers believe that the success or failure of any OPEC meeting is measured by the rise or drop in oil prices. What effect have the conference results had in relation to the question of stabilizing the market and increasing prices?

Answer: The conference did not discuss the question of prices and so there is no connection between the conference results and oil prices, but we must put it on record here that one of the factors which have negatively affected the oil market was OPEC's loss of credibility. A large number of resolutions have not been implemented and as a result the world no longer believes what OPEC decides as long as the resolutions remain mere ink on paper.

'Big Political Changes' Expected in Libyan Policy

GF121232 Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD in Arabic
9 May 86 pp 1, 8

["Exclusive" report from Rabat]

[Text] AL-ITTIHAD has learned that the Libyan leadership will make big political changes with regard to the modus operandi in foreign and domestic policy. Informed sources said these changes will give the revolution command council more powers to rule. The current revolution command council consists of five members: Colonel al-Qadhdhafi; Major al-Khuwaylidi al-Humaydi; Major 'Abd al-Salam Jallud; Abu Bakr Yunus; and Al- Kharrubi.

One of the changes which will occur in the ruling organs in Libya is giving more powers to the army at the expense of the revolutionary committee. The revolutionary committee, which is an organ supervised by Al-Qadhdhafi himself, used to enjoy greater powers before the U.S. aggression. Since then their role became insignificant as a result of direct personal instructions from Al-Qadhdhafi.

AL-ITTIHAD has also learned that the information organs will witness big changes in the next few days. It is expected that Fawziyah Shalabi will become secretary of the general people's committee for information and culture, succeeding Muhammad Sharaf al-Din.

Libyan media were subject to harsh criticism from the newspaper AL-JAMAHIR, the mouthpiece of the revolutionary committees, coping with events following the U.S. aggression.

It is unlikely that the current Libyan government will witness big changes in its makeup as it is waiting for the convocation of the people's basic congresses which have the power to make changes in the Libyan Government.

'Arab Bashing' Threatens Arab-American Relations

GF121130 Dubayy KHALEEJ TIMES in English
12 May 86 p 6

[Editorial: "Arab-U.S. Relations at their Nadir"]

[Text] Arab bashing is becoming a popular sport in the West, but as in the case of other cruel sports, it is demeaning the perpetrator/player more than the victim and making humane relationships between the two impossible. Speaking to reporters last weekend, Arab League representative to the UN, Mr Clovis Maqsud, expressed deep concern and dismay over a series of hostile actions and statements by both the Reagan administration and the US Congress. He said that since the American air strikes against Libya in mid-April, "we have been sandwiched between the Reagan administration's rhetoric on terrorism, which appears aimed at Arabs in general, and the US Congress' clear attempt to subordinate US policy in the Middle East to Israel's agenda." This raises serious questions about the state of Arab-American relations at the present time.

The Libyan wound had hardly healed before Washington began to consider cashing in on its domestic popularity by targeting Syria and Iran, two countries which have so far successfully defied the superpower. The Reagan administration and Tel Aviv are apparently seriously considering delivering another stab in the Arab back by trying to implicate Syria in "terrorist acts" aimed at paving the way for attacking that country. Resistance to Israeli occupation of the Golan Heights is intensifying, and Israel would like to strike at Syria before it can further strengthen its military capability. The excuse, as usual, has to be sought in allegations of involvement in terrorism. American Vice-President George Bush was quick to charge that "Syria's fingerprints have been on terrorist acts", although as in the case of the so-called 'irrefutable evidence' implicating Libya in the West Berlin bombing, we can be sure that we will never be shown those fingerprints. Now, Britain's Thatcher government has also joined the conspiracy. It has expelled three Syrian diplomats because Damascus refused to waive their diplomatic immunity, although the Syrian ambassador was prepared to allow police to question them on embassy premises in connection with the alleged attempt to smuggle a bomb abroad an Israeli plane at London. As the ambassador explained, the three had not been charged with any offence, and to lift immunity every time police want to question any diplomat would make a mockery of this universally recognised privilege.

The Reagan administration's stance towards Damascus and Tripoli is not surprising since, in the din of its anti-terrorist rhetoric, it seems to be incapable of making a distinction between what is legitimate resistance and an outright act of terror when dealing with the Palestinians (although it has no hesitation in financing, and even participating in terrorist acts in support of the Contras or UNITA). What is curious, however, is the fact that Washington is increasingly uninterested even in countries which have hitherto relied on the Americans' sense of fairness, and their political support and military hardware. Saudi Arabia, by all accounts, has been friendly to the US for decades, but suchis the pro-Zionist mania raging in Washington at the present time that Congress has just rejected by an overwhelming margin a modest Saudi arms deal to defend its own interests on thegrounds that Riyadh had refused to join the Camp David process and that the arms might be used against Israel. The fact is that over the past four decades, the Arab world has suffered from encroachment, primarily from Zionist expansionism, and if we do not reserve the right to use the arms we acquire to defend our territories and our interests, why should we indulge in the luxury of obtaining them. Admittedly, President Reagan has promised to veto the congressional resolution, but few will have forgotten the speed with which the same administration dropped a Jordanian arms deal when it met congressional opposition.

Faced with such hostility in the West, what should be the Arab response. There are still some who desperately hope that there will soon be a return to sanity and a clearer perception of American interests in the Middle East which lately have been so heavily identified with Zionist interests. Mr Maqsud made a moving plea when he said that he believed that there was "a corrective (within the American system) that has been silenced and disfunctioned by the charged rhetorical atmosphere which might be transitional." But this band of optimists will quickly disperse if Washington goes ahead with the congressional verdict against Saudi Arabia and if its Zionist protege attempts to strike against Syria.

'Authoritative' Source on Husayn-Mubarak Talks

GF121055 Manama WAKH in Arabic 0930 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 12 May (WAKH) — An authoritative Egyptian source has said that Egyptian President Husni Mubarak could not reconcile the PLO and Jordan. The source indicated that during his meeting with President Mubarak the Jordanian monarch insisted on adhering to his position on the PLO leadership.

The source told the UAE newspaper AL-ITTIHAD today that the Jordanian monarch's position on the PLO will make the Egyptian policy look bad in Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat's eyes; 'Arafat had received an Egyptian promise to make efforts to restore PLO-Jordanian coordination to the earlier situation. The source added that important issues were discussed during the meeting Mubarak held with the Jordanian monarch. Among these issues were Egypt's readiness to take part in Jordanian-Palestinian meetings as a third party, with the aim of helping the two sides restore confidence in each other. Yet Jordan did not demonstrate a desire to restore contacts with the PLO.

During the meeting, they also discussed a proposal presented by Gaza Mayor Rashad al-Shawwa which included a rejection of the autonomous rule which Israel proposes to implement in the Gaza Strip, a demand to have matters restored to the situation before 1967 in the Gaza Strip — from the premise that Egypt is historically responsible for this region — and included Egypt's demand for withdrawal of Israeli forces, attaining independence for Palestinian institutions, and establishing an Egyptian bank to facilitate trade in the Gaza Strip. Al-Shawwa also asked for acceptance of Palestinian students into Egyptian universities and easing travel between Gaza and Egypt. The Egyptian sources gave no details on whether Jordan accepted or rejected the proposals as presented by the Gaza mayor to the Egyptian president during their meeting in Cairo last week.

Foreign Minister Meets With Visiting Iraqi Official

[Text] Dr 'Ismat 'Abd al-Majid, deputy prime minister and foreign minister, met with Al-Nuri Isma'il, Iraqi Foreign Ministry under secretary, today. The Iraqi official is currently on a visit to Cairo. Developments in the Gulf war, the current situation in the Arab region, and bilateral relations and ways to promote them in various fields were discussed during this meeting.

Al-Majid Comments On Relations With Arab Countries

NC121425 Cairo Domestic Service in Arabic 1230 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Dr 'Ismat 'Abd al-Majid, deputy prime minister and foreign minister, has emphasized that Egypt has always assumed a leading role both in war and peace in the Arab homeland. Egypt has played this role, not out of a desire to impose its will but as the inevitable result of Egypt's cultural, historic, and human reality. He said that this fact reflects the distinguished role Egypt has played in the Arab homeland throughout the history of the Arab nation.

This came in a statement that Dr 'Abd al-Majid delivered today before a meeting of the Consultative Council, presided over by Speaker Dr Subhi 'Abd al-Hakim, while commenting on the council's report on the issue of Egypt and the Arab world. He said that acceptance and favorable response by the Arab masses and public opinion of Egypt's leading role constitutes a firm pillar and solid foundation that must be taken into account, when Egypt's strategic course and future action is drawn up, to achieve the primary goals agreed upon by the Arab people, regardless of casual differences.

Dr 'Abd al-Majid pointed out that casual differences and strifes that have prevailed among Arab countries have not undermined the peoples' determination and will. He affirmed that it is sufficient to view Egypt's cultural efforts in Arab countries that still refuse to establish full official relations with Egypt. This is despite the advanced, cohesive bonds that Arab people have demonstrated with Egypt.

Dr 'Abd al-Majid said that Egypt pursues a policy that does not impose conditions in its Arab relations. Egypt believes that the current stage of Arab awareness cannot be deceived by slogans nor can the tricks of Arab governments deceive people. Arab people are living through a tragic situation and, he noted, the people of Arab countries realize that the isolation of certain Arab rulers from Egypt is the main and direct reason for the current state of disarray, instability, and threats to the entire region.

Al-Baz: Lebanese Sovereignty in Egypt's Interest

NC091244 Cairo MENA in Arabic 1155 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Beirut, 9 May (MENA) — Dr Usamah al-Baz, first under secretary at the Foreign Ministry and director of the President's Office for Political Affairs, has stressed that Egypt pays great attention to Lebanon, but has no ambitions there. He added that the maintenance of Lebanese sovereignty over the entire country is in Egypt's interests.

In an interview with the Lebanese magazine AL-SAYYAD, Dr al-Baz voiced Egypt's opposition to Lebanon's division into small sectarian states, as Cairo is an ally of the Lebanese people. He went on to say: We consider the partitionist trends that have surfaced in Lebanon in recent years to be destructive.

Commenting on the relationship between Jordan and the PLO, Al-Baz noted that the two sides are not only partners in the peace process, but have common strategic interests. He explained: We are trying to keep the coordination between them going in a bid to preserve those points they agree on. This, he said, will allow dialogue and coordination to resume in due time. He expressed the belief that the Middle East peace process can be revived within several months, pending a Jordanian-Palestinian initiative.

Problems on Getting Arab Summit Analyzed

PM090938 Cairo AL-AHRAM International Edition in Arabic 7 May 86 p 13

[Wahid 'Abd al-Majid article: "The Arab Foreign Ministers: Goodbye...Summit Institution"]

[Text] The statement issued by the Arab foreign ministers last Thursday postponing the extraordinary Arab summit has surprised a few people. The prevailing belief, even after 3 May was initially fixed as the date for the summit, was that the real chance of the summit being held was slim. But the implications of the postponment and the tone of the statement raise the question of whether there was a certain flaw in the Arab realization of the role of summit policy. While the statement stresses that "the dangers and challenges facing the Arab nation need still further study, examination, preparation, and consultation," the fear of convening a summit before proper preparations and before solving Arab disputes lest they should exacerbate divisions has become more widespread than ever.

This Arab conception of the question of a summit does not take into consideration the fact that the destructive effects of the dangers that need further studying cannot be postponed until the studying is completed. It also ignores the fact that many parties in this world meet and hold conferences and summits despite the fact that what they have in common is far less than the national ties or, at least, the ties of common and lasting interests that are supposed to bring the Arabs together. An example is the summit of the seven industrial states which belong to three continents that opened in Tokyo on Sunday. They met despite the fact that the differences between them are far greater than those among the Arabs themselves. Yet they neither postponed nor canceled it; on the contrary it is the existence of such differences that call for holding a summit. If there was agreement there would have been no great need to hold a summit.

Therefore, the real problem for the Arabs does not lie in the inability to hold a summit but in the insistence by many countries on clinging to their narrow regional interests and placing them before the national interest as well as in the absence of consciousness in the relationship between regional interest and national interest. This was evident in the insistence by some countries on convening the summit in Sabha and nowhere else as well as on restricting the agenda solely to the question of U.S. aggression against Libya. This is despite the fact that the matter is not separate from other Arab issues such as the question of a peaceful settlement, the Jordanian-Palestinian contacts, the Lebanese crisis, and the Gulf war. Thus on the pretext of further examination of the matter before holding a summit and because of putting regional interest above national interest, the real role that the summit could play is lost. The role is to seek agreement on minimum — not maximum — joint Arab action, which is usually called Arab solidarity. This does not necessarily mean solving all the Arab disputes but simply rearranging the regional priorities so that what is agreed upon as a minimum should be placed before what is disagreed upon.

Obviously there is no alternative for the Arabs after the regional blocs have proved their weakness, even those blocs that embrace the countries that are most cohesive historically and socially, following the clash between Bahrain and Qatar.

This is also evident in the extent of the setback to the idea of the Great Maghreb at the meeting of the North African parties in Algiers last week (the Algerian FLN, the Tunisian Destourian Socialist Party, and the Moroccan Independence Party and Socialist Union of Popular Forces Party) on the occasion of the 1954 Tangiers conference anniversary, whether due to the poor attendance at the conference or to the Algerian-moroccan and the Tunisian-libyan tension dominating the conference's atmosphere.

Most likely the foreign ministers who announced the postponement of the summit paid no attention to this deterioration nor, on the other hand, to the Israeli successes, the latest of whichwas officially receiving the Uruguayan president in Jerusalem and notin Tel Aviv last Friday. This was at the same time as Shamir this week began a Latin American tour with the aim of obliterating the Palestinian role in the absence of an Arab role in Latin America. It is this Arab deterioration that creates more opportunities for Israeli and U.S. strikes, the direction of which observers are now busy predicting.

Perhaps all this will clarify the importance and amount of effort that is still being made at the Arab League secretariat to preserve the Arab house regardless of how effective this preservation may be at present.

If the Arab summit crisis began way back when the fourth Arab summit which was due to be held in Algiers in September 1966 was postponed, it has now reached its peak with the total failure to holdan ordinary or extraordinary summit despite the fact that an Arab country was the target of blatant armed aggression. In the past external threats were sufficient grounds for holding a summit immediately.

Over a period of approximately four years it has been impossible to hold the 13th summit while the Casablanca extraordinay summit in July 1985, which was boycotted by some parties, failed. The gravity of the recent u.s. aggression has failed to arouse the Arab regimes, whose disputes with one another have become the mechanism serving their continuation in power, the objective they place above everything else. Therefore, it is not unlikely that the present attitude of these regimes would destroy the Arab summit institution itself.

'Aziz on Need for Summit, Pan-Arab Security

JN122002 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1830 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Baghdad, 12 May (INA) — Iraq has again stressed the need for convening an Arab summit to discuss issues of concern to the Arab nation headed by the Iranian aggression against Iraqi territory.

Answering questions by members of the Arab and International Affairs Committee of the Iraqi National Assembly today, Tariq 'Aziz, Iraqi deputy prime minister and foreign minister, said that most of the Arab states share Iraq's views on convening an Arab summit conference. The deputy prime minister and foreign minister, who was speaking during the National Assembly's working session within its first term this year, said that the majority of Arab countries expressed the desire to convene an Arab summit to discuss a comprehensive agenda and that this desire was voiced at both the Arab League Council meeting in Tunis last March and the Arab foreign ministers conference in Fes.

He noted that these states feel that the blackmail by the Libyan and Syrian regimes is unacceptable and must be challenged. He said that the Arab foreign ministers agreed to hold another meeting after 'Id al-Fitr [around 7 June] to prepare for the coming Arab summit, which will discuss all issues.

Answering a question by an assembly member about pan-Arab security and its deterioration as a result of the failure to implement the Collective Arab Defense Pact, 'Aziz said that pan-Arab security is at the heart of Arab discussions and consultations within the Arab League, adding that the Arab League Charter and the defense pact were approved by all memebr states.

'Aziz pointed out that, in the past, complaints about the defense pact centered on the Arab states' failure to implement it on a level commensurate with the threats facing the Arab nation. It was argued that the pact was ineffective in confronting Zionism. Any Arab state facing aggression should have expected Arab economic and political support. This took place all the time on various levels and in numerous forms.

However, since the mid 1970's certain phenomena appeared which had not existed before, the first of which was the Syrian forces' entry into Lebanon. These phenomena are now threatening the pillars of pan-Arab security. Following this, in 1978 Israel attacked Lebanon and the Arab reaction was not on the level of the grave situation which had been precipitated. The reason was the confusion resulting from Syria's entry into Lebanon. [Words indistinct] in 1982 when the Zionist army reached Beirut. The confusion which took place as a result of the Iranian aggression against Iraq undermined the bases of pan-Arab security despite the fact that Iraq repeatedly warned against the seriousness of the situation and the consequences of Arab fragmentation. 'Aziz expressed optimism about the growing concern over the importance of pan-Arab security, noting that everyone talks about its importance, but serious efforts are required to reach a unified position.

Answering a question about the Lebanese crisis, 'Aziz said that the Lebanese events are the result of interference by outside elements which hinder any move to solve the problem using the weapons of sectarianism, division, and sabotage. He said that the Lebanese situation is part of the Arab reality and cannot be remedied unless Arab conditions are tackled.

Commander Says War Enters Into New Stage

GF121218 Kuwait ARAB TIMES in English 11 May 86 p 4

[By Iyad al-Badri]

[Text] The Iraqi-Iran war has entered a new stage with the recent declaration of Iraq's President, Saddam Husayn, that the Iraqi forces would chase Iranian soldiers anywhere inside or outside the battle fronts, including the Iranian territories.

This was particularly true when Iraq's Fourth Corps occupied an area of 270 sq kms inside the Iranian territories. This area includes Shaykh Hawi, Khabbana Valley, Shakha and a strategic road. The Al-Siyasah correspondent in the area toured the newly-liberated places and interviewed the commander of the Fourth Corps, Major General Thabit Sultan Ahmad.

The commander said the area was liberated after launching five decisive attacks during April, with the last massive one on April 30.

He said the main aim of those attacks was to push the Iranian forces back and occupy new Iranian land in implementation of the new Iraqi military strategy as long as Iranian forces were occupying Iraqi territory in the Al-Faw area.

He said that Iraqi forces would destroy the Iranian forces anywhere possible inside Iranian territory. He said the massive attack by the Iraqi forces was also a reply to Iranian claims that, after the Al-Faw battles, Iraqi forces could not launch any attack or cross the borders.

Maj-Gen Thabit said the new Iraqi strategy was to remain in any Iranian territory taken. In addition, the Iraqi forces would not stop at this, and there would be surprises on this and other fronts. He said that about 270 sq kms of new Iranian land had now been occupied.

Comparing this with the occupation of Al-Faw by Iran, he said the Al-Faw area would be restored in Iraq's own way according to accurate calculations determined by the military command and which could not be disclosed now.

He said that any battle that took place anywhere on the front would have its effect on Al-Faw. He said that everyone knew that the main weight of the Iranian Army was concentrated at Al-Faw, but now, after the occupation by Iraqi forces of new Iranian territories, the balance of the Iranian forces would certainly be shaken.

He stressed that the Iraqi military operations had a great effect on the Iranian forces because they were compelled to move from one place to another continuously.

The commander said the Iranian forces launched a major attack on the Iraqi forces on May 2, but the attacking forces were crushed completely and prevented from advancing even a meter. He said the area was particularly suitable for the use of equipment and tanks in which the Iraqi forces had clear supremacy. He said the area included very important oil fields in addition to important Iranian oil installations.

Following the successful Iraqi attacks, the Iranian forces were suffering from divisions' and differences of opinion between the regular Army and the so-called Revolutionary Guards.

In addition, the morale of the Iranians had fallen considerably, and Iraq was confident for these reasons, even if the war dragged on. He said that the longer the war, the more divisions occurred among the Iranians.

On the other hand, the morale of the Iraqi forces was good. The last attack was a clear example of this, he said with 16 Iranian divisions and several brigades completely destroyed.

Maj Gen Thabit said the military map had changed in the area after the Iraqi attack because the Iraqi forces were now facing many Iranian cities, including Dezful, Huwayzah, Susangerd, and Dahalran.

Commander on Offensive

JN121155 Baghdad INA in English 1122 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Baghdad, May 12, INA — An Iraqi military commander stressed that the blessed-Ramadan operation, which had been executed by the Iraqi Army 4th Corps forces on the 9th of this month was an abortive [as received] one as the enemy had been preparing for a fresh offensive on Iraq's territories.

Commander of the 4th Corps, Major-General Thabit Sultan Ahmad said, in statements published here today, that the blessed- Ramadan operation, during which Iraqi forces managed to occupy 100 square kms of Iranian territories, was aimed as well at destroying the enemy troops massed opposite east of Maysan sector, then advancing to capture new targets of tactical importance for Iraqi military operations.

Major-General Ahmad mentioned that that operation had fully achieved its aspired goals and purposes, addding that the situation "is now settled in favour of Iraqi forces."

The commander explained that the occupation of 100 square kms of tactically and logistically important areas deep inside the enemy's territories was not the only goal realized by the recent operation, for the forces of the Iraqi Army 4th Corps, the commander added, had gone beyond that to destroy around 75 per cent of the Iranian 16th Armour Division, the bulk of the 58th Division, a Khomeyni Guards brigade, regiments of Khomeyni guards and gendarme and the 82nd Division and forces supporting it.

Jordanian Minister Receives West Bank Personalities

JN121557 Amman Domestic Service in Arabic 1500 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Amman — Minister of Occupied Territories Affairs Marwan Dudin has stressed the government's interest in finding ways for reducing the kinfolk's suffering in the occupied territories and bolstering their steadfastness there.

This came when the minister met separately in the past 3 days with Hebron Mayor Mustafa al-Natshah, Bethlehem Mayor Ilyas Frayj, and Ya'bad Mayor Murawwih Ibrahim. During the meetings, discussion dealt with the situation prevailing in the occupied territories in general and the circumstances of municipalities and the obstacles impeding providing services to the kinfolk there in particular.

Dudin met with several heads of municipalities and rural councils and charity and cooperative societies in the occupied West Bank, as well as with a delegation from the Jerusalem municipality employees' committee. He acquainted them with the broad lines of the 5-year development plan for the occupied Arab territories and stressed that this plan was in accordance with His Majesty King Husayn's directives.

AL-RA'Y on Israel-West 'Coordination' Against Syria

JN110934 Amman AL-RA'Y in Arabic 11 May 86 p 1

[Editorial: "The Clock Cannot Be Turned Back"]

[Text] Israel's threats against Syria escalated yesterday when Hayim Bar-lev stated that Israel will take revenge on Syria if it is confirmed that Syria is involved in the attempt to plant a bomb on an El Al plane at Heathrow Airport. Bar-Lev has thus joined Israeli war minister Rabin in clearing the way for the aggression being prepared by the Israeli military establishment against Syria.

At the same time, it is noted that there are some Western circles working to depict Syria as being involved in the attempt to place a bomb on the Israeli plane. Moreover, these circles did not hesitate to adopt arbitrary measures against a number of Syrian diplomats. By implication, the measures taken by these circles are providing the pretexts Israel needs to implement its aggressive scheme. It appears therefore that there is advance coordination between these sides and the Israeli military establishment and that a certian scenario exists whereby Western sides implement the political and diplomatic moves leaving Israel to implement the military move.

It should be recalled that this coordination constitutes a very serious indication. It is an extension of the coordination which preceded the U.S. attack on Libya and it also indicates a conspiracy against the Syrian military force, which is an important part of the Arab military force. The participation of Western fingers in this coordination is similar to some extent to the collusion which preceded the aggression against Egypt in 1956 but involving different parties and excluding France, and with different roles assigned to each party.

The scenario that is being prepared for an aggression against Syria is a challenge to the entire Arab nation and aims at subjugating it to Israeli-Western hegemony after the U.S. failure to subjugate the region to pure U.S. hegemony. It is certain that those partners will fail to achieve their objective because the hands of the clock cannot be turned back.

Daily Decries Tokyo Summit Statement on Terrorism

JN091155 Amman AL-DUSTUR in Arabic 9 May 86 pp 1, 17

[Editorial: "The United States Between the Temptation of Power and the Voice of Logic"]

[Text] President Reagan has managed to turn Tokyo's industrialized states' summit into a summit about international terrorism. The subject of terrorism dominated all other topics of discussion. Amid the crusade President Reagan is launching against terrorism and terrorists, other world problems disappeared or were about to disappear from the debate of this conference — problems which should have been the main concern of the conferees who represent the strongest and richest countries in the world.

The Tokyo summit did not pay sufficient attention to hunger, poverty, or the foreign debts which burden the majority of Third World countries. Nor did it pay enough attention to the trade imbalance, the drop in oil prices, or to the economic recession threatening many countries with unemployment, political unrest, and military coups. It seems as if these serious world problems should await the removal of the last terrorist from the last capital in the East and West before the big masters give them the required amount of care and concern.

While it is natural to admit that international terrorism has become an important world problem and that efforts should be joined to eradicate it, the Tokyo masters, who voiced their determination to ruthlessly fight terrorism, failed to define it and to determine reasons for it. We frequently said that it is important to link reasons to results concerning the subject of terrorism. Otherwise, military remedies, no matter how violent, will remain incapable of ending terrorism and will be perhaps the reason for its spread and for aggravating the danger.

Perhaps the worst thing in the Tokyo statement about terrorism is that the U.S. Administration thought the statement a victory for its viewpoint and a green light from its allies to continue using military power against those whom it describes as embracing terrorism.

Hence, we heard reports from Washington speaking of the possibility of using intercontinental missiles against Libya. Moreover, we heard threats to Syria made by the highest sources in the U.S. capital a few days ago. There has also been increasing talk about Israeli military concentrations opposite the Syrian Army in the Golan in preparation for a possible aggression that would be impossible for Washington not to be involved in.

This feverish escalation against Arab countries by the United States and its ally, Israel, on the pretext of combating terrorism does not only threaten to blow away the last thread of Arab-U.S. relations and does not only feed Arab rage, which would create an atmosphere for the expansion of violence against U.S. interests, but also may drag the two superpowers into a military confrontation in the Middle East — a confrontation which could have grave consequences for world peace and security.

Regrettably, the immense U.S. power has appeared in the past few months as an unbridled, primitive, and wild power . Any power if not prevented by wisdom from resorting to extremism and deviation will become an energy destroying itself and others. We can only call on the allies of the United States in Europe and Japan to work to correct the U.S.-Israeli wildness in the Middle East.

At the same time, we ask Arab countries to study and analyze this serious change in U.S. behavior toward Arabs and to draw conclusions and prepare for any possibility.

Press on Syrian Diplomats' Expulsion From UK

JN111140 [Editorial Report] Arabic dailies on 11 May 1986 carry on their front pages extensive reports on the expulsion of three Syrian diplomats from the United Kingdom. Under the headline: "Al- Shar' Denies Any Syrian Involvement in the Ebrlin Incident, the United Kingdom Deports Three Syrian Diplomats, and the Syrian Ambassador Says: We Have Offered Our Assistance..But !!"SAWT AL-SHA'B carries a London-detelined news agencies report on the expulsion of the three diplomats and a short report on Syrian Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar's statement denying involvement of the Syrian Embassy in Berlin in the explosion of Arab-German society building. On the three diplomats' expulsion, the report says: "The United Kingdom yesterday ordered three Syrian diplomats to leave the country within 7 days following the refusal by the Syrian Ambassador Lutfallah Haydar to waive diplomatic immunity after the British Government had claimed that they some connection with the Heathrow incident. The British Foreign Office summoned the Syrian ambassador and informed him that the three must leave the country. They are Zaki 'Awad, Ahmad 'Abd al-Latif, and Munir Muna. Syria denied any connection with the incident -- the aborted attempt to put a bomb on board an Israeli airliner in Heathrow Airport last month."

The SAWT AL-SHA'B report continues: "In a statement issued last Thursday, the Syrian Embassy in London said that Syria has become the target of a smear campaign to justify an Israeli military aggression against it. The Syrian statement said that the United Kingdom claimed that Syria is involved in specific terrorist activities in this country at a meeting with Ambassador Haydar on 1 May, during which it asked him to waive diplomatic immunity from the three attaches. The statement added that the Syrians had offered that the three be ques4ioned in the embassy but that the police decided not to accept this offer. A British Foreign Office statement said that the police decided that any questioning under these circumstances would not lead to any evidence that could be used in court and that this would not help in their investigations. Sources close to the British police claimed that the police are looking for possible direct or indirect links between the diplomats and the person accused of conspiring to blow up the El Al plane on 17 April."

After reviewing the case of Nizar al-Hindawi, the report in SAWT AL-SHA'B further says: "The United Kingdom expressed regret over the Syrian decision not to waive diplomatic immunity from its three diplomats. However, observers predict that the expulsion of the diplomats will lead to a dampening of relations with Syria and this will endanger any British efforts to attain peace in the region. The Syrian ambassador made a statement later saying that the United Kingdom had expressed hope that Syria would respond to the request to withdraw the diplomats, adding that a decision in this respect will be taken in Damascus. He added: We offered our assistance and cooperation to the British security authorities to help them determine the party responsible for the aborted attempt at Heathrow airport. He added that the Syrian Embassy has nothing to hide. He also said: We have no information about the activities of any person on British soil and we do not participate in these activities. He said that since the diplomats have not been accused of any violation and since the police only wanted them to assist the police the embassy did not consider it appropriate to waive diplomatic immunity from them. He described the three diplomats as officers or employees and rejected the inference that they are embassy guards."

Under the headline "The United Kingdom Deports Three Syrian Diplomats and Spain Expels the Libyan Charge d'Affaires" AL-RA'Y carries a London-datelined REUTER report dealing mainly with the expulsion of the Libyan charge d'affaires from Spain but the report begins with the issue of the three Syrian diplomats. The report says: The United Kingdom yesterday ordered three Syrian diplomats to leave the country after the Syrian Government refused to waive diplomatic immunity to enable British police to interrogate them on matters dealing with supposedly revolutionary activities." The REUTER report in AL-RA'Y then carries part of the statements made by the Syrian ambassador in London.

Under the headline "The Scenario of the Expected Aggression Against Syria, Damascus Says That the Threat To Use Force Will Not Make Us Deviate From Our Firm Stands, Bar-Lev Threatens To Carry Out a Retaliatory Strike, and the United Kingdom Deports Three Syrian Diplomats" AL-DUSTUR carries a news agencies report from world capitals on Israeli threats to Syria and the deportation of the Syrian diplomats. The AL-DUSTUR report begins as follows: The question of the expected aggression against Syria continues to be dealt with by Western and Middle East circles in a manner that sometimes implies that the aggression will inevitabley take place and at other times that it is merely a war of nerves and a test of intentions. While an Israeli minister has not ruled out the possibility of a retaliatory operation against Syria if its involvement in the attempt to blow up an Israeli plane in London airport is proved, the United Kingdom has ordered the deportation of three Syrian diplomats following Syria's refusal to have them questioned on the plane incident." The AL-DUSTUR report then carries an identical report to that carried by SAWT AL-SHA'B on the issue of the deportation of the three Syrian diplomats.

Poland Ready To Replace France or Senegal in UNIFIL

NC122107 Paris AFP in English 2055 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Beirut, May 12 (AFP) — Poland is ready to replace any country that wants to withdraw from the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL), the Lebanese Foreign Ministry announced Monday. Ministry spokesman Samih Baba said Poland had signalled its readiness to cover for any country which wanted to pull its troops out, "notably Senegal and France." France, whose 1,500 men represent the biggest contingent, has recently said it is no longer prepared to look after the logistics side on its own.

The French ambassador in Lebanon, Christian Graeff, said last Tuesday that France "wanted UNIFIL countries to share the high risk the logistics operation represented." He added that the statement did not mean France was to abandon UNIFIL. Less than a month ago, on April 17, the French Government refused for the first time to accept an automatic six-month extension of the French presence in Lebanon, reducing the term to three months. It justified its action on grounds that automatic renewal of its peace-keeping presence did not accomplish the role for which UNIFIL was created. France has asked the UN Security Council to look at ways of revitalising the effectiveness of UNIFIL.

USSR Solidarity Official Meets Al-Sa'iqah Head

JN121451 Damascus SANA in Arabic 1352 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Damascus, 12 May (SANA) — (Olgar Slemanov), deputy chairman of the Soviet Committee for Solidarity With Asian and African Countries, has denounced the U.S. threats against Syria which is courageously standing before the U.S.-Israeli onslaught. This came when Comrade 'Isam al-Qadi, secretary general of the Popular Liberation War Vanguard Organization — Al-Sa'iqah Forces, received the delegation of the Soviet Committee for Solidarity With Asian and African Countries led by (Slemanov) this morning.

(Slemanov) reaffirmed the USSR's standing alongside the Palestinian Arab people who are struggling for their just rights. He praised the Al-Sa'iqah Forces' militant role in the Palestinian arena. Comrade al-Qadi spoke at the beginning of the meeting. He lauded Syria's principled, firm stands under President al-Asad, who turned Syria into a bastion on which all the conspiracies and intrigues of the United States, Israel, and those who support them will founder. He praised the stands of the socialist bloc countries, headed by the friendly Soviet Union, toward the Palestine question and noted that the Soviet Union has extended and is extending support and backing to the Palestinian people for the sake of their just cause.

Comrade al-Qadi condemned the deviationist, traitorous course led by Yasir 'Arafat which seeks to liquidate the Palestine question. He explained that the differences in the Palestinian arena are political ones and that 'Arafat is responsible for them because he disavowed decisions of the Palestinian National Council, the Palestinian national charter, and PLO objectives.

Comrade al-Qadi concluded: We are struggling to regain PLO unity on bases hostile to imperialism and Zionism as well as to their schemes aimed at liquidating the Palestine question and imposing imperialist hegemony on the Arab region.

Radio Commentaries on UK, Israeli Hostility

Palestinian Broadcast

JN121854 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 1730 GMT 12 May 86

[Palestine broadcast: "Talk of the Return"]

[Text] Brother strugglers: Had it not been for Britain's traditional hostility to Arabs and our knowledge of this hostility, we would have said that Britain's behavior toward Syria is surprising. We are not surprised at all because British Prime Minister Mrs Thatcher thinks it is time for Britain to take revenge on the Arab masses which crushed the ugliest colonialism in the world, British colonialism, by taking revenge on the Syrian Arab Republic.

Britain's chatter about the case of Heathrow Airport in London, or more specifically about Britain's allegations of an attempt to destroy an Israeli El Al plane at Heathrow, deserves no attention. Britain has shown Syria much hostility since the vile, brutal, treacherous strike President Reagan delivered at Libya — a strike which turned into shame, scandal, and even military defeat for President Reagan.

Since that brutal U.S. air raid on Libya, Margaret Thatcher has announced that she will join President Reagan if he initiates aggression on Syria. Hence, the matter was decided even prior to the fabricated case of Heathrow and also prior to the events which took place or were said to have taken place in West Berlin. The issue is not then one of terrorism, even if one who talks about terrorism is a colonialist personality, such as Mrs Thatcher. Is there a terrorism more horrible than colonialist terrorism?

The issue is not one of alleged terrorism or one of alleged combat against alleged terrorism. The issue is one of precise military coordination among Britain, Israel, and the United States in launching aggression on the Arab nation, represented by Syria. We need no proof of this because as soon as Britain provoked Syria by deporting three Syrian diplomats, Israeli Minister Hayim Bar-Lev said Israel will begin aggression, or war, as he put it, against Syria.

It is unnecessary to tell those concerned in Israel that these Israeli threats do not intimidate or worry Syria. This does not mean that Syria is paying no attention to them, but it means that the elements for defending pan-Arab security are placed on maximum alert in Syria. It also means that if Israel attacks Syria, then it will not be pleased and will find something to aggravate its sorrow, expand Israel's graveyards, and bring the glorious memories of the October war back to Israel's weak memory.

Britain's behavior toward Syria is only a British cover for an Israeli aggression on Syria — an aggression which is likely to take place but will certainly be defeated.

On Israeli 'Terrorism'

JN121338 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 1130 GMT 12 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] The enemy leaders' statements during the past 2 days give the impression that Israel has suddenly renounced the policy of threats and that it only seeks to live in peace and tranquility. However, despite these sugar-coated statements, the enemy leaders do not fail to assert that they will combat terrorism with all means available to them in cooperation with Washington and the West European states which were convinced by the U.S. pleas to fight the so-called Arab terrorism.

Thus, what seems to be a change in the language of threats of aggression is in fact a change in form and not substance, because if Israel were not harboring aggressive intentions, or implementing its policy of aggression and expansion to realize the Zionist project of establishing an Israeli entity extending from the Nile to the Euphrates, it would have implemented international resolutions urging it to withdraw from all occupied territory and would have recognized the Palestinian people's national rights.

Israel, described by a UN General Assembly resolution issued during its 40th session as a state which is not peace-loving, does not want peace because peace places on its shoulders certain responsibilities which are opposed to Israel's expansionist plans and which undermine U.S.-Israeli plans for controlling and dominating the region.

If we want to trace the roots of terrorism in our region from the beginning of this century, we will find that the Haganah, Stern, and Irgun gangs were the first to practice terrorism against the Arabs of Palestine before 1948. These gangs were the nucleus of the Israeli enemy army following the establishment of the Zionist entity in 1948 — an entity which practiced and still practices terrorism, aggression, and expansion; which challenged the United Nations and flouted its resolutions; and which is supported by the U.S. Security Council veto and Washington's unlimited aid.

If we recall the Dayr Yasin massacre and the hijacking of the Libyan civilian aircraft over Mediterranean waters, we conclude that terrorism is the core of Zionism, which manifested itself in the form of gangs before 1948 and later in the form of an entity. Zionist terrorism is responsible for all crimes committed against Arabs and for all acts of suppression, injustice, occupation, and genocide which have been rife in our region for decades. Zionist terrorism is responsible for the tension and the dangers threatening the Middle East and international peace and security in this sensitive part of the world.

Activity in Lebanon 'Confirmed'

TA121920 Jerusalem Television Service in Hebrew 1900 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Army sources in Israel confirmed today that the Syrian Army has in recent months built dugouts for tanks in Lebanon, south of the line on which the Syrians are deployed in the eastern sector. The Syrian forces themselves have not changed their deployment since the IDF's exit from Lebanon. Our army affairs correspondent Moshe Shlonsky reports from the studio:

Over the last few months the Syrians in the eastern sector in Lebanon have prepared dugouts for tanks and cannons south of the line where they are currently deployed. It should be emphasized that reference is to dugouts only. The Syrians, at this stage, take care not to deploy their forces south of the area which the IDF had occupied in the Lebanese Al-Biqa' on the eve of the withdrawal. The dugouts are not manned by Syrian forces. The Syrians probably intend to reach the region which they had occupied on the eve of the Lebanese war. A short look at the map here will make it clear that the Syrians are getting very close to the security zone in the eastern sector, when and if they move forces southward, of course.

The land preparations carry a defensive meaning, mainly to prevent an Israeli attempt at a strike in the Lebanese Al-Biqa', or an attack on Syria on its flank. There is here of course a very convenient potential for an offensive initiative; very large armored forces can arrive at the built dugouts within hours.

Israel takes a very grave view of the Syrian fortifications; a message in this spirit was passed on to the Americans. The message was also transmitted to President al-Asad, but has not yet borne fruit. The Americans themselves view the Syrian entrenchment as a defensive move which has nothing to do with the tension which has come to prevail in Israeli-Syrian relations lately.

Editorials Examine Peres Remarks

TA110948 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 0900 GMT 11 May 86

[Review of midday press editorials]

[Text] MA'ARIV writes that many things are unclear in connection with tension with Syria. In the labyrinth of all the talk and conflicting reports, it is difficult to determine whether this tension is real or imagined, or who works to stir it up. Judging by the prime minister's remarks, this tension is merely verbal and there is no actual proof of belligerent moves on the part of Syria. All the political and military bodies are called upon to exercise restraint to calm down the atmosphere while simultaneously maintaining intelligence alertness.

YEDI'OT AHARONOT believes that the prime minister did well in hurrying to curb the rising tide and declare that we have no intention of attacking Syria. Yet Syria must also know that we are aware of the fact that its army is busy preparing dugouts and is carrying out fortification work in the southern part of the Lebanese Al-Biqa'. This requires maximum alertness, but we have no desire to convert this into saber-rattling.

HADASHOT also welcomes the prime minister's statement that Israel is not heading toward war. This clarification can serve to calm spirits, but it still leaves the military option available, if necessary.

Herzog Opposes 'Interference' in Austrian Elections

TA111720 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1700 GMT 11 May 86

[Excerpt] President Hayim Herzog said it is impossible to prove the allegations against Kurt Waldheim without the assistance of the Greek, Yugoslav, and Soviet Governments. Herzog believes we should receive information from these states before we decide to launch a campaign, the results of which are totally unforeseeable.

President Herzog does not believe that interference in the Austrian election campaign would serve the interest of those people who interfere. Our correspondent Haviva Roger reports that the president made these remarks during a visit in Or 'Aqiva.

Shamir Discusses Waldheim, Poland, Tension With Syria

TA121223 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1100 GMT 12 May 86

[Report by political correspondent Shim'on Schiffer]

[Text] Vice Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Yitzhaq Shamir has returned from a visit to several Latin American countries filled with courage, and his answers to questions posed by political correspondents a short while ago are evidence of the fact that he has returned from this trip refreshed. Shamir met with political correspondents, and the first question he was asked, on the Kurt Waldheim affair, was whether he should have refrained from speaking out so strongly against Waldheim. This is in light of the positions voiced recently by the Israeli ambassador in Austria, for example, to the effect that Israel has been embroiled by the World Jewish Congress. Not only did Minister Shamir not retract his remarks, he also said that his opinion is what counts in the Foreign Ministry and that there is no room here for wavering. He again stated that the election of Kurt Waldheim as Austria's president would be a disaster, and it would be a way to exonerate people who participated in Nazi acts. It would pose a dangerous precedent, he said, adding that all the people he met during his visit abroad displayed sympathy with this position which is the State of Israel's position. The government has not held a discussion on what will happen if Kurt Waldheim is elected president of Austria, but the position is very firm.

Another question referred to the earlier report on the agreement reached between Prime Minister Shim'on Peres and Minister 'Ezer Weizman to the effect that following the rotation, Minister Weizman will be appointed a minister in the Foreign Ministry. Shamir reacted by saying: I heard this piece of wisdom on the Voice of Israel this morning; if 'Ezer Weizman protects Israel's interest in the same way that Butrus Ghali protects those of Egypt in his ministry, then I do not care if Minister Weizman sits in the Foreign Ministery. But, he added seriously, one must check whether this falls within the coalition agreement.

Another matter which was raised during the meeting was the expected appointments of a new Bank of Israel governor and attorney general. On this Minister Shamir said two surprising things: The time has come to reduce the attorney general's authority, and proposals on this should be examined. As for the appointments themselves, he opposes the possibility of political deals in this matter. He is against political figures fulfilling these positions; the appointments should be filled by professionals, people who are not identified with one party or another. When he was pressured and asked whether he also objects to the appointment of a Knesset member — and the allusion was to MK Adi Amoray — he said we will object to the appointment of any political personality who is identified with a party or who was active in a party, and therefore professionals must be appointed.

Shamir was asked about ties with Poland and the possibility of Israel and Poland establishing interest offices. He replied that this will be implemented soon.

As for relations with Egypt, he said that the talks between the Israeli and Egyptian delegations on the Tabah arbitral compromis will resume next week. He added that Israel had reached the limit of its flexibility, and therefore the time has come for Egypt to soften its stand.

There were also other questions as to whether he knew anything about secret contacts with Jordan. He replied that if such contacts are held, he knows about them and he is briefed on them by the prime minister.

In general, all Shamir's remarks were totally unambiguous.

Finally, he was asked about the tension and verbal escalation with Syria. He said that at the moment Israel is not interested in a war with Syria. Official state analysts also believe that Syria is not interested in war, and thus the reports in the media should be toned down.

Ethiopia Sends Message on Improving Ties With Egypt

TA120627 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 0500 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] The United States thinks the reports about the intention to settle immigrants from Ethiopia in the territories make it difficult to continue with the operations to rescue the Jews who have remained in Ethiopia. Our political correspondent has learned that U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy said this to Knesset Member Ora Namir at a meeting between the two in Washington.

In this context, our correspondent has learned that the Ethiopian rulers have sent messages to Israel through diplomatic channels stressing their demand that Israel not attempt to improve relations with Egypt at the expense of Ethiopian interests, reference being to the Dayr al-Sultan monastery.

Syrian 'Terrorists' Caught in Lebanon Sentenced

TA120936 Tel Aviv 'AL HAMISHMAR in Hebrew 12 May 86 p 4

[Text] Ten Syrians between the ages of 16 and 30 were sentenced to 6 years in prison, half as a suspended sentence, after being convicted of belonging to Ahmad Jibril's PFLP-GC. The 10 were also found guilty of conducting military exercises and carrying weapons.

The members of the terrorist gang were arrested in December 1985 in southern Lebanon. They were caught unawares by IDF soldiers in the security zone. A short battle ensued during which 3 of their colleagues were killed; the 10 terrorists surrendered. Among the gang members are two officers and a young Moroccan who is married to a Syrian and lives in Syria.

The defendants' attorneys, Walid Fahum and Mahmud Na'mani, requested that the court order the explulsion of the gang members from Israel, but their request was turned down.

Pro-Syrian Activities on Golan Heights Overlooked

TA111319 Tel Aviv 'AL HAMISHMAR in Hebrew 11 May 86 p 19

[Report by Yehuda Tzur]

[Text] Over the weekend the Syrian flag was again hoisted on the rooftop of the local school in Majdal Shams, as part of the celebrations marking Syria's independence.

Since the police and security forces prevented the staging of rallies to mark the anniversary of Syria's independence approximately 3 weeks ago, Syrian flags have been hoisted several times in Druze villages on the Golan and so far no one has been detained for this.

Israel supporters among the Golan Druze are complaining that the security establishment is not doing enough to eradicate the phenomenon and prevent what they call the taking over of the Druze villages on the Golan by Syrian supporters.

Those same sources claim that despite the fact that many dozens of people have violated police orders and shouted pro-Syrian and anti-Israel proclamations, no one has been detained. They add that many walls in Majdal Shams are painted with anti-Israel slogans, and no one is paying any attention.

This week two delegations of students from universities in Samaria visited Majdal Shams to express solidarity with the Druze struggle for their return to Syria. The guests and hosts met in the Majdal Shams student club where they sang nationalist songs and made speeches supporting the handing over of the Golan to Syria and the end of the Israeli occupation on the Golan Heights.

State Comptroller Reports on West Bank, IDF

Council Funds Political Activities

TA130710 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English 13 May 86 pp 1, 11

[Report by Joshua Brilliant]

[Text] The Interior Ministry has been effectively funding the political activities of West Bank settlers through the general-purpose funds it provides to the Qiryat Arba' local council, the State Comptroller said in his report this week on the Civil Administration of the territories.

The comptroller found that Qiryat Arba' spent thousands of dollars in 1983 and 1984 to fund demonstrations, legal protection for settlers and spying on West Bank Arabs and their Israeli sympathizers.

"Every year the Interior Ministry approves a grant to the council to balance its budget," the comptroller noted, and the grant generally provides the bulk of council funds. In 1983, ministry subventions accounted for IS 106,000 of Qiryat Arba's IS 164,000 budget; in 1984, it made up IS 508,000 of the community's IS 874,000 budget.

The council has provided a satisfactory level of educational, health, security and other services, although it dumped its garbage in an unfenced area close to Arab homes, the comptroller said.

The council also paid considerable sums to further the settlers' political goals.

It allocated $10,000 to a Jerusalem lawyer to act on behalf of residents accused of crimes with a "political background," such as vandalizing Arab property in Halhul. It also contributed IS 250,000 to the council of Jewish settlements in Judaea, Samaria and Gaza for legal assistance to residents detained after "reacting" to Arab attacks.

Rabbi Moshe Levinger's long-running one-man demonstration outside the Al-Duhayshah refugee camp south of Bethlehem was aided by a $5,000 council allocation partly designed to publicize his action. This money was allocated over and above other assistance, such as a rented car, food and other services.

The council paid $750 to a private investigating firm to collect information on Bi'r Zayt university near Ramallah and on a committee that supports it. Some of the committee's members are Israeli citizens, the comptroller noted.

Other expenditures included an outlay of IS 600,000 for 30 mattresses for women holding a sit-in in Jerusalem to press for the release of the Jewish terrorists. One month earlier, in June 1985, the council paid for buses to bring demonstrators to Jerusalem to protest against the release of Arab terrorists.

When the authorities found that the employees of the Qiruat Arba' local council owed IS 1.4 million in back taxes, they ordered the council to deduct the tax from the employee's pay cheques. The council did, but also voted to increase the workers pay and did not charge them for the back payments made on their behalf to the income-tax authorities.

Arabs, too, benefited from the lax attitude towards collecting taxes. The income-tax authorities demanded that residents submit tax returns, but only 20 per cent of those approached in the Nabulus area did so, and even fewer in Ramallah. The comptroller found that only "a few hundred people" actually submit returns. In general, however, revenues have increased, he said.

Vocational schools suffered from overcrowding, with classes numbering 50 to 60 pupils, the comptroller found. There are only three vocational schools in the territories, and they do not meet demands. Government supervision of those schools has also been unsatisfactory.

IDF Shortcomings

TA130952 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English 13 May 86 p 6

[Report by Avi Hoffman]

[Text] The state comptroller cast a wide-ranging look at all aspects of the Israel Defence Forces' activities, but, for security reasons, not all the findings were made public and some that were were left deliberately vague.

Among his findings were the poor state of the buildings used by the IDF, the absence of a master plan for the Air Force's expensive computer system, and a lack of clear policy guidelines at the IDF Command and Staff College. There has been considerable delay in the introduction of two advanced fighting craft in the Navy, while another, unspecified, weapon system had suffered from poor servicing and inadequate planning, the comptroller said.

The deployment on the northern border following the withdrawal from Lebanon experienced difficulties mainly resulting from poor supervision. Despite this, the IDF pullback was carried out ahead of schedule. The comptroller advised against using emergency fuel stocks for any purpose apart from genuine emergencies.

The comptroller went back for a follow-up check of sectors he examined previously. He found that the IDF was continuing efforts to broaden professional possibilities for women, but there was still no overall plan for this purpose.

A division that the comptroller visited for his previous report had rectified some shortcomings in the year, but there was no improvement in the professional qualifications of the officers. The commander, artillery and maintenance officers, their deputies and two deputy brigade commanders had not undergone battalion commanders course, nor had five deputy battalion commanders and 32 company commanders completed company commanders course.

What follows are some of the state comptroller's findings in more details:

Deployment on the Lebanese Border

The comptroller — looking into the IDF's deployment on the northern border between May and December 1985, after the withdrawal from Lebanon — found that inadequate supervision and coordination by the IDF led to delays by the contractors employed in strengthening the northern fortifications. This resulted in additional expenses.

The work was hampered by incomplete engineering plans, tardy evacuation of buildings and sites occupied by soldiers, inadequate security measures for workers and failure to clear minefields. Sanitary conditions in the fortifications were poor, and equipment was found to be missing.

The comptroller noted, however, that the evacuation of the Israeli forces was completed ahead of schedule. In fact, by the middle of May, last year, the forces were deployed on the international boundary rather than in July or August as had been planned. The uncertainty of the extent of hostile action necessitated speedy redeployment and this required especially good supervision and coordination. According to the comptroller, a supervisory body composed of senior representatives of the commands involved in the project should have been set up in the field and granted wide powers. This was not done, however, resulting in disruptions.

The comptroller recommended that the IDF tighten supervision of field units so as to prevent similar failures in the future.

Introduction of a Weapon System

The prototype of a specialized weapon system put into operation in 1982 encountered difficulties when used in training.

The problems resulted from a low level of technical reliability, which in turn was due partially because the system was a prototype and partially because of the accelerated wear and tear resulting from its operational testing and use in the Lebanon War. In addition, the upkeep of the system, which was based on service by the manufacturer and partly by the IDF maintenance service, was adversely affected by budgetary problems and other considerations.

The introduction of the prototype into unit training was hampered mainly because of technical faults and because of faulty planning of training programmes and their implementation. Operators of the system were not trained in a field needed to operate the system. The development of a simulator, intended to help train operators, dragged for many years and had not yet been completed.

Deficiencies had been found in regular preventative maintenance while calibration checks needed for the efficient operation of the system were not carried out at the required times.

No provision had been made to ensure that soldiers who may have been exposed to radiation from the system at a level that could have endangered their health were sent for medical examination in time.

Some of the people handling the system were found to lack the required security clearances, and the system was not housed according to field security instructions.

Naval Acquisitions

The Navy acquired two boats of a special type capable of skimming the surface of the sea at great speed and in heavy weather conditions, which cost a total of $100 million. But the comptroller found that the assimilation of the first vessel, purchased from its American manufacturer in Ap[illegible] 1983, was subject to various problems that delayed its becoming operational.

The second vessel, built under licence by Israel Shipyards in Haifa, was delivered to the Navy in July 1985, several years behind deadline.

The comptroller found that the operational and maintenance teams were undermanned. The crafts' crew were overloaded with work, being simultaneously responsible for operational, training and maintenance duties. The crew of the first vessel had not been trained as planned.

Serious delays had occurred in the development, manufacture and installation of certain systems for the boats. Spare parts were inadequate and expensive parts and equipment that broke down were not repaired quickly enough.

The IDF Command and Staff College

The General Staff has not formulated clear policy guidelines nor defined the place of the IDF Command and Staff College in the training and advancement of officers, the comptroller found. Because of this, the impact of the college on the training of command and staff officers was less than it could be.

The lack of a clear definition of which categories of officers should be required to study at the college, and the difficulties of filling the quotas set for field units, meant that the college was underutilized. Officers that needed the college were not sent, while those whose participation in the courses was not essential were.

The comptroller stressed the necessity of speedily completing the ongoing re-evaluation of the objectives of the college's programme of studies. Decisions on the future role of the college, based on the evaluation, should be implemented without delay, the comptroller concluded.

Computerization of Administrative Systems in the Air Force

The Air Force has no master plan for computerization of administrative systems, the comptroller found. Consequently, many systems whose development entailed considerable expense had not met the objectives for which they had been set up. The comptroller recommended that the Air Force establish policy and principles for a computerized administrative network and prepare a long-range plan.

The Air Force also must ensure that proper work procedures were instituted between headquarters, the computer unit and its users to ensure conformity and efficiency in planning, development and use of new systems.

In general, the computer unit provided its services to users in a satisfactory fashion, the comptroller said. However, shortcomings were uncovered in operational and supervisory procedures.

Building Maintenance

In most of the sites he inspected, the comptroller found the condition of buildings, especially old ones, to be in poor condition and improperly maintained. There was no master plan for periodic maintenance of the buildings, which cover 4.5 million square metres of space, not including Air Force and Navy structures. In the absence of a detailed survey and data on the structures there was no way the IDF could base an annual maintenance programme on the proper priorities, the comptroller added.

Standing orders require that buildings be inspected annually. However, such checks had not been carried out for years, the comptroller reported, adding that in the army camps he visited, buildings had wide cracks in the ceilings, leaky roofs and faulty sewage and plumbing.

Because of budget cuts, the construction units have been unable to overcome escalating maintenance problems.

If this situation continued, the comptroller warned, speedy deterioration of even new buildings could expected. In view of the cutbacks in new construction, the comptroller adivsed that activities designed to maintain existing structures should not be curtailed, but rather enhanced.

ALGERIA

Daily on 'No Justification' for Summit Postponement

PM121307 Algiers EL MOUDJAHID in French 4 May 86 p 1

[APS article: "After the Postponement of the Extraordinary Arab Summit"]

[Text] The postponement of the Arab summit scheduled to be held in Fes as a result of failure to agree on the agenda for that meeting illustrates once again the patent inability of those who are responsible for the fate of the Arab nation to face adversity and the almost constant aggression suffered by most Arab countries at both a political and economic level.

While we can already say that this postponement will have serious consequences for the future of the Arab nation, pushed into defensive and almost suicidal positions, it should be stressed above all that there is no justification for postponing an extraordinary Arab summit. This certainly cannot be justified by agenda or timetable questions which are, after all, secondary.

At a time when it is more urgent than ever to overcome the disagreements which are tearing the Arab nation apart, at a time when imperialism — the Arab peoples' common enemy — is increasing in ferocity and launching shameless military attacks, on specious pretexts, against those among us who make the mistake of not fitting into its policy or strategy of domination, we are presenting the sorry spectacle of division for wretched and base motives.

This certainly gives us a heavy burden of responsibility in the eyes of history and of the Arab people's masses in the Maghreb and Mashrek who spontaneously expressed their anger after the aggressions perpetrated against the Palestinian people and fraternal Tunisia in the past, and against the fraternal Libyan people today.

Although all the objective conditions exist for the Arab nation to rally and pool its formidable potential to really face up to the destructive intentions of those who have constantly tried "to keep it under top surveillance" (to cite an Arab colleague), some of us are still using the false excuses which have meant that it has been virtually impossible to hold an Arab summit since 1982.

This is a particularly grave time, because in addition to their inability to unite, the Arab countries are incapable of consulting each other, of jointly adopting the most appropriate measures and the only response which can make those who are attacking them with impunity stop and think. In addition to aiding the aggressor's belligerent positions, this extremely negative attitude really endangers our nation's future. Eventually it is likely not only to permanently jeopardize the security and stability of all Arab countries, but also and above all to deal a fatal blow to our own cultural values.

Algeria, for its part, is more aware than ever of the dangers threatening the Arab nation and the plots being hatched against it, and has constantly worked and will constantly work to smooth out the temporary disagreements which unfortunately perpetuate the division of the Arab nation, exposing it to aggression and domination.

Political Editor Comments on Expulsion of Diplomats

LD130854 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 0740 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 13 May (JANA) — Commenting on the decision by the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison to expel 36 diplomats of the Embassies of Italy, West Germany, France, the Netherlands, Spain, Belgium and Denmark in the Jamahiriyah, the JANA political editor says: This measure was taken in accordance of the principle of reciprocal treatment, and was in response to the arbitrary measures adopted by the European countries against a number of members of the Libyan Arab People's Bureaus in Western Europe under pressure from the U.S. Administration.

The JANA political editor affirmed that had there been any real justification for the West European countries' decision to deport members of the People's Bureaus of the Great Jamahiriyah, we would not have applied the principle of reciprocal treatment. But there was no justification for deporting our brothers.

We have said and continue to say, he added, that these brothers had no connection whatsoever with terrorism; the allegations and claims reiterated by the official circles and information media in the West about Libya's connection with terrorism are unfounded, as we have affirmed repeatedly.

terrorism are unfounded, Western countries that adopted these arbitrary measures against a number of members of the People's Bureaus in Europe to provide a single proof of Libya's involvement in terrorism.

Statements by Italy's Craxi Termed 'Irresponsible'

LD121818 Tripoli Domestic Service in Arabic
1600 GMT 12 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi, speaking in Genoa, criticized the threat made by Colonel al-Qadhdhafi to hit Italy if the latter showed hostility toward Libya. He said that the reaction of Colonel al-Qadhdhafi is an example of an extremist point of view and of anger which goes far beyond the bounds of responsibility. He added that his country wants to avoid an esclation of tension, but Colonel al-Qadhdhafi is taking an intransigent line instead of remaining as calm as the situation required. He added that Libya knows how many friends Italy has in the Western world who would enter the war on its side, and also some Arab states. Craxi said: We answer the threat with an urgent call for initiatives, which include basic solutions, for the sake of peaceful coexistence.

JANA's international affairs editor, commenting on the Italian prime minister's statements stressed that the statements are of an irresponsible nature. We would not rule out that Craxi made the statements under U.S. pressure and because of his fear of U.S. terrorism.

We find such statements by the Italian prime minister to be strange, as he threatens Libya should Libya embark on any legitimate defensive action if it ever becomes exposed to aggression from U.S. bases in Italy. We do not oppose or debate the issue of Craxi's defense of the presence of U.S. bases in his country, but in the event of these bases being used in committing aggression against our soil it is our right to retaliate in the same manner against the territories from which the aggression emanated. We would like to stress on this occasion that the intruders in the Mediterranean are the Americans and Zionists — enemies of the Arab nation and enemies of the peoples of the area which aspires to freedom. We want the Mediterranean to be an area of peace and security and an area free of foreign fleets.

Italy's Defense Minister Questioned on Armed Cells

LD121234 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1155 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 12 May (JANA) — The Italian Defense Minister, Giovanni Spadolini, has admitted that during the period of 1981-83, his government discovered armed party cells which posed a serious threat to the Italian Republic.

Speaking at a Republican Party rally the day before yesterday at (Lecce) in southern Italy, Spadolini said that the might of right and freedom must be enforced and that they should prevail over all forms of extremism.

The urgent question we wish to put to the Italian minister now is: Is the Jamahiriyah also connected with any of the cells of the armed party which the Italian Government discovered at that time? As to the enforcement of the call for right and justice and the need for them to take supremacy over all forms of extremism, the Great Jamahiriyah has repeatedly affirmed these principles and they are the principles it urges the worlds' peoples to uphold because it is the state of the masses [as received] and it seeks freedom for all world peoples.

MAP Cites Arab League's Klibi on Tokyo Summit

LD121312 Rabat MAP in English 1219 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Tunis, May 12 (MAP) — Commenting on the results of the seven major industrialized countries' summit held in Tokyo, Japan, Secretary General of the Arab League Chedli Klibi made a declaration in which he highlighted the absence in these results of true solutions to the fundamental problems facing the international community.

He also noted the deliberate amalgamation of terrorism and the liberation struggle of the Palestinian people whereas the state terrorism carried out by Israel is supported militarily and politically.

The final communique released by the Tokyo summit, the declaration said, arouses surprise owing to the fact that it ignores the fundamental problems facing the international community, including developing countries, and the serious economic depression prevailing in most of developing countries and which are entailed by famine, desertification, the drop in raw material prices and the increase of the foreign debt of these countries.

Recalling that Arab countries had condemned at the summit level terrorism under all its forms, the declaration added, that in pronouncing the condemnation, Arab countries laid emphasis on the necessity of not mistaking the people's right to defend their existence and struggle for their freedom for terrorism. "We also affirmed that aggression cannot be justified by terrorism, or resort to official terrorism at the level of the state to strike on those who react against terrorism acts perpetrated by an aggressor who abuses the peoples' elementary rights", added the declaration.

Meets With Southern Party Leaders

JN121749 Khartoum SUNA in English 1734 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, May 12 (SUNA) — Premier Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi today stated that all obstacles impeding the formation of the new government had been surmounted and that a full agreement was about to be reached.

This came after a meeting held here today between the premier and the southern political parties leaders, including the Sudanese National Party.

The meeting was held to discuss the participation in the government of southern parties and Sudanese National Party, led by Father Philip Ghabbush, and the ministries they scheduled to hold.

In a press statement, Al-Sadiq said an open day would be organized for the Constituent Assembly members, in and outside the government, to meet the premier and discuss with him any political or security questions.

A fortnight meeting will also be regularly held with parties leaders, including opposition leaders, to discuss any political development in the country, Al-Mahdi said.

Discusses Government Contacts

JN121110 Khartoum SUNA in English 1030 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, May 12 (SUNA) — Premier Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi said southerners should settle by themselves the question of regionalism in their regions through diplomatic dialogue.

But he indicated that his government would not alter the current administrative formula in the south till the southerners reach a settlement to this effect.

Al-Mahdi who was speaking to Juba Radio said contacts with Garang movement aims at bridging differences. Contacts are also underway with the Ethiopian Government, he added, in order to disengage any intermingling between bilateral ties and the role of Garang movement. On the absence of the National Islamic Front NIF from government formation, he said the NIF participation gives the government a national character only in shape but in fact it would weaken the government. Because, he added, it would diminish the governments ability to deal with Moslems, the modern society and the international community as well.

On his government's position towards September laws, he said they would undergo a radical change to ensure the religious, political and human rights of all people, no laws should be applied unless through democratic endorsement, he said.

JN121551 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1428 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, 12 May (SUNA) — Prime Minister Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi has stressed the need for the Armed Forces to coordinate efforts to promote moral guidance so that they may carry out their national duties, adding that the elected government will maintain coordination with the Armed Forces to formulate sound political decisions guaranteeing Sudan's security and unity. Thanks People for Rumbek Recovery

EA111250 Omdurman Domestic Service in Arabic 1948 GMT 8 May 86

[Speech by Sudanese Premier Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi on 8 May at the Workers Federation House in Khartoum on the occasion of the world workers centenary — recorded]

[Excerpt] I congratulate you and our Armed Forces on the recovery of Rumbek Town. [applause] And I say once again: We do not want this fighting, for every one killed on either side is a Sudanese and it is our duty to protect and (?preserve) his blood. [applause] But he who shoulders arms against his people must be resolutely faced by the people, for whoever [words indistinct] he sometimes [word indistinct] (?for) the one who has mercy on him. [applause] It is meaningless to shoulder arms against Sudan now, because Sudan now, its people and government, are a group [jamah] that affords an opportunity for the expression of the opinion of each. It protects fundamental liberties: It protects the independence of the judiciary; it establishes government on the basis of representation [niyabah]; it will never assert that the state we are in is right and the state you are in is wrong. On the contrary, it says: Come ye for equal talks between us and you. Such a course does not justify the bearing of arms in opposition, because those who bear arms against this course stand against the people: They stand against rightness: They stand against history. Whoever adopts such a position must face punishment and a harsh confrontation.

There is a group that does not admire all this, but thinks day and night of distorting democracy and of distorting freedom. They raise numerous slogans at night. They soliloquize about dictatorship and how dictatorship is the way for their honor, dignity, and supremacy. This group knows that the worst and (?dirtiest) type of dictatorship is the one that was set up by Jafar Numayri, because he spent all the peoples funds on it, imposed it on them, and imported alien tutelage for it. In spite of this, the people topped Jafar Numayri. Therefore, whoever embarks upon this road will find his way to the kiln of history into which Jafar Numayri went. [applause] Some of them write in newspapers, singing about the glories of dictatorship, some of them hatch conspiracies to distort the appearance of freedom and some of them conspire by night to polarize the enemies of freedom. Whatever happens, the people are lying in wait and God is with us. God willing, He will grant us victory not only over the conspiracies of despotism and distortion inside the Sudan, but, God willing, everwhere, for rightness towers and it is not towered over. Peace and God's mercy be upon you. [applause]

Al-Mahdi Interviews Carried by Kuwaiti Newspapers

AL-QABAS Interview

GF121818 Kuwait AL-QABAS in Arabic 11 May 86 pp 14, 15

[Interview with Sudanese Prime Minister Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi by AL-QABAS correspondent Muhammad Jasim al-Saqr in Sudan — date not given]

[Excerpts][Muhammad Jasim al-Saqr] With regard to the south, there is no doubt that settling the situation in southern Sudan and putting an end to armed operations in the south is one of the most important problems facing the new Sudanese Government, as the continuation of this situation certainly will limit Sudan's capability to face the vast economic problems left by the previous regime. How do you propose to resolve this problem and what is your assessment of the response from Colonel John Garang to a call for a peaceful solution?

[Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi] First of all, I would like to thank AL-QABAS for its continuous stand with the Sudanese people during their crisis.

We are now formulating our move with regard to the issue of the south on three axes:

1. The political axis. We want to hold negotiations and talk about injustices and demands and we believe that it is possible to agree on this. We, on our part, defined eight points of differences and injustices and the Garang brethren and their supporters agreed that these indeed are the issues that need to be resolved after discussion. Thus, the first axis concerns a national constitutional congress where we all would sit down and look into these injustices. In my opinion we have a big opportunity to reach a decisive agreement on these points within a peaceful political framework.

2. The security axis. Among the most wrongful and dangerous things which was left by Ja'far Numayri in Sudan was the weakness of the Sudanese Armed Forces. The people used to believe that at least he was fortifying the Armed Forces. But it was just the opposite. While it is known that he was destructive, it was expected that the Armed Forces would be left out of this dark fate, but this was not the case. He harmed the Armed Forces very badly and this harm allowed all those seeking to challenge security to carry arms and inflict damages. For this reason the second axis in which we are moving is the need to strengthen the Armed Forces in order to close the door to those who want to challenge public order. This, we believe, is a basic issue.

3. The diplomatic axis. This refers to the need to achieve good neighborliness between Sudan and its neighbors in order to restore a balance in Sudan's foreign relations, and so that the neighbors will play a positive role in each other's development and security and not a negative role as during the Numayri era. I believe that these three axes will control our decisive move in solving the problem [of the south]. We believe that the problem is basically due to wrong policies which, God willing, will be eliminated. As the current situation is delicate, we hope that our move will lead to finding a decisive solution.

[Al-Saqr] Can you give us an idea about your approach toward solving economic problems?

[Al-Mahdi] We believe that the foundations of the Sudanese economy — raw materials and manpower — are sufficient, but there are two problems:

1. Our inherited debts. Our plan on this issue is to ask friends and brothers and all those concerned with this matter to suspend the issue of these debts for 2 or 3 years until we can arrange our internal situation; then we can talk to them accordingly. We do not want the creditor brothers to think that we are neglecting our commitments, but the destruction that we inherited stipulates that we first treat the goose that lays the golden eggs. We must treat this sick goose before talking about the gold that it will lay. The initial issue that we will face and in which we want to achieve a kind of balance is the issue of time in order to arrange our economic situation. Then we can talk about our commitments in light of the results of this arrangement. This is an important problem and a balance with respect to it must be found.

2. Sudan's role as a beggar country. Numayri turned Sudan into a beggar state. This was a big and grave mistake because even begging has its price. Nobody gives you anything without imposing political shackles. The resulting economic damages can be bigger than what you get from him.

For that and various other reasons we want to end Sudan's role as a beggar state. We believe that there is a basis for action which is in Sudan's favor and will help it to achieve a healthy national economy. Certainly we realize that we are suffering from the frailty of our intrinsic capabilities and although we want to overcome this frailty, it is necessary first to solve certain problems. There are basic problems that must be solved, the first being oil. While Sudan has enough oil to satisfy its domestic needs, at present we are in need of a party to provide us with oil. We will resolve this issue shortly. There are various solutions: A party could lend oil to us on the condition that we repay it with oil. Such party would certainly know that we have the oil with which to repay it. A tripartite agreement between us and the lending country and the company producing the oil can be signed as a guarantee on the basis that this is a trade and not a grant; a trade until it is possible to produce oil.

[Al-Saqr] What are the convictions of the new government regarding relations with Egypt and the Camp David accords, particularly since Egyptian-Sudanese relations exist while all other Arab countries have boycotted Egypt? What is your stand in this regard?

[Al-Mahdi] Certainly the Camp David accords harmed Egypt, the Arabs, and the Muslims. The accords were to the advantage of neither Egypt nor the Arabs and this remains our conviction. We believe it is necessary to achieve a balance based on a minimum level of Arab commitment and Arab solidarity and all the obligations and commitments of any Arab side should be based on this minimum level. In reality we believe that there is a conviction in Egypt — its government and people — that the Camp David accords did not achieve what was expected of them, and only enabled Israel to attack the Arab nation and continue this attack. Our concern is to support this awareness and support reconsideration in the hope of ending this alienation through Arab solidarity on which obligations and other commitments will be based. I personally believe that Arab interests now require that two things be carried out before anything else. First, the Gulf war must be ended and second, a balance must be achieved that has a kind of Arab solidarity which surpasses Camp David and in which there will be an embodiment of the official and popular Egyptian awareness that this agreement did not serve the expected goals.

[Al-Saqr] Relations between Numayri's regime and Libya were very bad, but after the uprising relations improved. Will relations between you and Libya strengthen? Did the U.S. attack have any effect on Sudanese policy, particularly since you have good relations with the West?

[Al-Mahdi] We preserve all our relations. Our relations with Libya will not be on the account of other relations; neither will our relations with Egypt be on the account of another relationship; nor will our relations with the United States be on the account of another relationship. First of all, Libya is a neighbor and we believe in good neighborliness with all our neighbors. Numayri's mistake was that he neglected this fact and entered into hostilities with our neighbors. Second, the United States is a big country and we should have relations with it in the international arena. We establish relations with the United States, Libya, and all countries without agreeing to follow their political or international trends. We believe that success in our relations with others is based on our independent stand and acknowledgement of the rights of others to seek mutual interests. We will not allow anybody to force us to stand with their policies and convictions against others, no matter who they are. If one errs against another or attacks another, we condemn it. For example, the Government and people of Sudan condemned the U.S. bombardment of Libya. We have the right to tell the one who makes a mistake that he is mistaken and the one who is right that he is right. At the same time we establish relations with them not on the basis of being subjected to them but on the basis of mutual interests.

AL-ANBA' Interview

GF091459 Kuwait AL-ANBA' in Arabic
8 May 86 pp 22, 23

[Interview with Sudanese Prime Minister Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi by Ahmad Hanqah in Khartoum — date not given]

[Excerpts] [Ahmad Hanqah] How do you view Libya, which has been trying to propose unity with Sudan since the beginning of the uprise?

[Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi] Our government will decide our stand toward the proposed unity, which is very acceptable in principle. However the Libyan unity project is loose. The Sudanese people have the choice to accept it or to turn it down. The Sudanese parties which have different programs will also have their word on this matter shortly.

[Hanqah] You have talked about Arab solidarity. What about the ongoing Gulf war? Does it have any effect on this solidarity?

[Al-Mahdi] As you know, Sudan has entered a new era of democracy. As we have astonished the world by building the edifice of democracy and freedom and by eliminating our differences to save our nation homeland, we are capable — with God's will — of consolidating the solidarity and cooperation among the Arab countries as soon as possible. Our new government will make use of all the instruments of success with the help of others to end the Gulf war. This war is exhausting the resources of the Muslims and limiting their capabilities. Zionism is glad of the continuation of this war. We Muslims are capable of rising above the wounds to successfully halt this war. Believe me, the possibility of reaching an agreement is greater than disagreeing. This will be the start. My government is ready to undertake this great Islamic duty, because without achieving success the cooperation among the Arab and Islamic countries has no meaning.

[Hanqah] Will the presence of Israel in central African countries bother your country?

[Al-Mahdi] The presence of Israel as a hostile entity is indeed a worrying matter. Who does not worry about Israel? The entire world is worried about Israel in different ways. As long as Israel is our primary enemy and our struggle is a fateful one, we must be cautious in dealing with those who establish relations with this entity. Israel had greater influence in Africa before 1973 than today. However, we were not greatly affected, because the Arab solidarity was our shield at that time. Nevertheless, Israel has managed to introduce new means of communications and infiltration, while we retreated from. In fact, the presence of Israel in Central Africa is a very annoying matter to us. However, its presence in northern Africa is more annoying and more dangerous.

[Hanqah] The Palestinian issue is lost now. What is the stance of your government toward it in light of the current developments?

[Al-Mahdi] The Palestinians are our brothers and our cousins. We toppled Numayri by historical revolution. The decisive factor which angered the people is the issue of the Palestinian people. The trial of the CIA agents in the Numayri regime is the least we can present to the Palestinian people. We respect the independent Palestinian decision. This decision must not be toyed with, pressed, or seduced in order to achieve any goal that has no relation to the main issue of liberating Palestinian territories.

SUNA Interviews State Council Member on Islamic Law

JN121805 Khartoum SUNA in English 1740 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, May 12 (SUNA) — The State Council member Dr Pacifico Lado Loleik today stated that he would submit his resignation if it could prepare a suitable atmosphere of understanding on southern Sudan.

Inteviewed by the SUDAN NEWS AGENCY (SUNA) Mr Loleik said there was no fixed standard for the representation of the south in the constitutional institutions and the population one was controversial.

As for Shari'ah laws, Mr Loleik asserted that Muslims constitute the majority in the country and that they could be governed by Shar'ah, but, he added, they could not impose it on us. Therefore, a formula guaranteeing peaceful coexistence should be reached, he echoed.

Over the controversial issue of the Islamic legislation which was introduced by the deposed President Numayri in 1983, Loleik voiced his idea that these legislations must not be applied in all parts of the country.

There must be a federal secular constitution in the country while the north Muslim part would have the right to apply the Muslim legislations, the Supreme Council member said in his interview with SUNA.

Over the initiative unleashed by some southern parties over ignoring the leader of Sudanese People's Liberation Army (SPLA) Loleik expressed his objection to the call and voiced that dialogue is the only solution for the southern and constitutional question.

Loleik on the other hand added that tribalism had been an important faction in the complication of the southern question.

National Party's Ghabbush Interviewed

PM090830 London AL-MAJALLAH in Arabic 7-13 May 86 p 11

[Interview with Sudanese National Party Leader Philip Ghabbush by Nura Fakhuri and Muhammad Ahmad Hisham in Omdurman; date not given]

[Excerpts] Question: You were jailed after last July's incidents. You were held responsible for what happened but then, 4 months later, you were released. Nothing was published about the investigations and we still do not know who was responsible. Why was the name of the person who was really responsible for the mutiny not announced?

Answer: That, regrettably, is the problem. The real culprit has to remain secret. The authorities were confused. Since, previous to that incident, I was charged three times, they thought that whenever any movement occurs in Sudan Philip Ghabbush must be responsible and so they arrested me. As to why I was kept in prison for such a long period after it was ascertained that there was no evidence against me, they had a reason for keeping me there. The Sudanese National Party was a new party growing very rapidly. The reason for my imprisonment was to impede the party's role so that other parties could have the field to themselves.

Question: You did not join the alliance's delegation which went to (Kukudam) to negotiate with Garang. You were accused of having links with Garang yourself.

Answer: That is what is being said and that is also why I was thrown in prison. The truth is that we have no links with John Garang but we agree with Garang's declarations in the general policy context. We, however, are quite distant from his ideology.

Question: There was an attempt on your life a few months ago and you showed Transitional Military Council Chairman General Siwar al-Dhahab the weapon that was to be used to kill you. Who has an interest in killing you?

Answer: As you can see, my door is open. That is why the National Front hired three people for 3,000 pounds each. Two of them were military and the third civilian. They were told: Kill him. There were three attempts. I am still threatened to this moment.

Question: What form of government would fulfill your ambitions.

Answer: We do not believe in autocratic rule. We are nationalists and we have suggested that the government in this current period should be a nationalist one comprising all Sudanese elements. We do not want an autocratic or coalition government.

Question: It seems that Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi will form the new government and we hear that you will be part of the opposition.

Answer: Yes we will be in the ranks of the opposition.

Question: Why?

Answer: Because he formed a Cabinet once before and achieved nothing. He will also achieve nothing in this new government.

Question: It has been reported that the parties have stored quantities of weapons. What is your information on this matter and do you expect violence of some kind?

Answer: That is a possibility. I do not deny it but I want to emphasize that we are democratic and are committed to the election results.

Question: Some Sudanese people believe that your opposition will be dangerous because you operate in extreme secrecy and because you are influential among a large number of deprived and poor people in Sudan.

Answer: Let the picture in your minds be as they have painted it. We lean toward peace but, like camels, we endure and we ruminate pain until it explodes.

Question: Is the explosion point drawing near?

Answer (with loud laughter): Not yet but, generally speaking, this is the secret of the job.

Garang: 'Effective Part' Needed in Government

EA121535 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in English 1300 GMT 12 May 86

[Excerpt] The SPLM-SPLA leader, Colonel Dr John Garang de Mabior, has addressed a new batch of recruits from Equatoria at the movement's general headquarters. In the course of his statement, the SPLM-SPLA leader heartily welcomed the recruits into the movements ranks, praising them for their efforts and revolutionary spirit which, he said, has made it possible for them to endure all difficulties and cross large distances in order to come to the SPLA and participate in the struggle.

Speaking on the objectives and principles of the SPLM-SPLA, the movement's leader pointed out that the creation of a new Sudan was a task that required tremendous sacrifices. Such sacrifices, he said, had to be made because liberties and rights are not granted but have to be taken. The pursuit of freedom and basic rights, Col Dr John added, was what had prompted the Sudanese masses to rid themselves of the colonizers and was what continues to prompt them to do away with the hegemony of the ruling minority clique of Khartoum.

The SPLM-SPLA leader said that the movement was capable of deterring and repulsing the enemy, no matter how powerful and tyrannical he became.

The SPLM-SPLA leader went on to say that the SPLM-SPLA had consistently rejected being part of the small exploitative governments in the country. We are fighting for establishment of a new Sudan, in which all Sudanese citizens would stand equal, regardless of distinctions which stem from race and religion.

Col Dr John Garang de Mabior concluded his statement by saying that no government that comes to power in Khartoum would enjoy stability unless the SPLM-SPLA was an effective part of such government.

Following the meeting Essebsi made the following statement: I have reported to the president of the Republic about the current international situation and new developments, particularly the accusations of terrorism against a person claiming to be a Tunisian.

On this occasion, the president reaffirmed Tunisia's established principles of denuncation of terrorism from whatever source and whoever the culprit might be.

The president has asked the Tunisian ambassador in France to get in touch with the French authorities to verfiy the true identity of the suspect and the truth about his implication in this case. He also asked him to offer the help of the Tunisian departments concerned to the French authorities in their search for the truth.

The president is following with concern the developments taking place which indicate an Israeli intention to launch an aggression on Syria on flimsy pretexts and overt manouvers. This demands that international forces work to safeguard security and to stand up to the warmongers and threateners of peace.

[Excerpts] The militant people of Benin this afternoon welcomed an illustrous guest. PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat is paying an official visit to our country. This visit, it must be stressed, is a testimony of the solidarity of our people with justice-, freedom-, and peace-loving people.

His Excellency Yasir 'Arafat was welcomed on arrival by our great comrade in arms, President Mathieu Kerekou. Present at the Cotonou international airport were members of the ruling organs of our party and our revolutionary state, members of the party's mass organizations, a detachment of the people's armed forces, and a large crowd of militants. ['Arafat in Arabic followed by French translation] First of all, I am happy to be here in this friendly country. [Text] President Mathieu Kerekou this morning held discussions with the Burkinabe minister of territorial administration and security, Comrade Ernest Nongma Ouedraogo. After the audience, Comrade Ouedraogo answered some questions from members of the press. First of all, he stated the subject of his discussion with the head of state, and then touched on Beninese-Burkinabe cooperation.

[Begin recording] [Ouedraogo] I have actually just been granted an audience by the Comrade President Kerekou. I delivered to him a message of friendship and fraternity from his counterpart, the comrade president of Burkina Faso [Captain Thomas Sankara], and briefed him on the purpose of my mission here. You know that Benin and Burkina Faso have quite a long border, and it is in the framework of the demarcation of this border that I am currently visiting Benin.

[Unidentified reporter] Can you tell us precisely the status of the cooperation between your country, Burkina Faso, and our country, the People's Republic of Benin?

[Ouedraogo] Well, cooperation between Burkina Faso and its sister revolutionary neighbor is at its best. On the political level, there is no problem. On the economic level, we have pursued actions since 4 August 1983 — the date when the National Council of the Revolution came to power — to redeem Burkina Faso from its landlocked state which, as you know, is a country without an outlet to the sea, and this causes it a lot of problems. Therefore with Benin we have undertaken to rehabilitate, or rather to build the Porga road. Recently, a Burkinabe delegation came here and had the opportunity to work with the comrade minister of equipment and transport, and I believe that in a few days' time, (?a delegation) will leave Cotonou for Ouagadougou — all these come under the strengthening of the cooperation between our two states. [Begin Hafyana recording] We have been sent here by the Libyan (?leader) Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi to his brother, President Mathieu Kerekou. We would like first of all, to express our thanks and our gratitude on behalf of our spiritual (?guide), on behalf of the Libyan people, on behalf of our the Libyan revolutionary committees, for the stand adopted by President Kerekou, the Beninese nation, the Beninese people who wholeheartedly and unequivocally condemned the barbaric aggression carried out by America against the people of the Jamahiriyah. In the same way, we also appreciate the revolutionary courage — the authentically revolutionary courage — manifested and confirmed by President Kerekou's standpoint. [Words indistinct] fully convinced that the aggression of American imperialism against Libya (?constitutes also) another colonialist and imperialist aggression against the Beninese revolution. Photo Exhibition on U.S. Attack on Libya Opens

[Text] The official opening of the photo exhibition organized by the Libyan People's Bureau on the U.S. attack on the towns of Tripoli and Benghazi, was held yesterday afternoon at the Libyan Cultural Center. Present at this ceremony were the Grand Chancellor of the Golden Star of Burkina Faso, the comrade national general secretary of the Committees for the Defense of the Revolution [CDR], the comrade commander in chief of the High Command of the People's Armed Forces, and Brother Sayid Hafyana, the Libyan emissary to Burkina Faso.

After the cutting of the inauguration tape, Comrade Emmanuel (Bayie), president of the Liaison Bureau between the CDRs and the Libyan People's Revolutionary Committees [PRC], stressed in his address the courage of the Libyan people who are determined to safeguard their gains against anything.

Brother Sayid Hafyana, who was awarded the Silver Medal of the Torchlight of the Revolution on this occasion, also spoke to the participants and expressed satisfaction with the Burkinabe support to the Libyan people, which was recently manifested after the U.S. attack on Libya. He greatly commended our people for their determination and clearsightedness in carrying out the struggle for independence and dignity with all the peoples in struggle. He said that the Libyan people would always stand at the side of the Burkinabe people wherever this would be necessary. Let us listen to him.

[Begin Hafyana recording] (?Thank you for paying me so much honor), actually speaking, I do not deserve all this simply because I am a revolutionary and in Libya there is revolution. I am convinced (?of the need to foster relations) between the Burkinabe revolution and the Libyan revolution because it is the conviction of the leader of the Libyan revolution, Brother Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, and it is the conviction of all the revolutionaries in Libya. Why? Simply because the 4 August revolution was launched in Burkina Faso to fight. What? To fight colonialism, reactionaries, and those who want to stop the historic march forward of the Burkinabe people. This is an example for our alliance, the alliance of the two peoples, the alliance of the two revolutions. (?There is a similarity because the objectives of your revolution are in line with the conviction and the revolutionary commitment of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi and of his people). In front of you, the revolutionary people of Burkina Faso, I consider the medal awarded me as awarded to the Libyan people, the Revolutionary Committees Movement. I really want to thank you all and also to say that the struggle being conducted by the Libyan people is the (?same) as that being conducted by the Burkinabe people. [end recording]

Sir Dawda Jawara Calls for Cease-Fire in Gulf War

AB092140 Dakar PANA in English 1345 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Banjul, 9 May (GINS/PANA) — Gambian President Sir Dawda Jawara, who is the chairman of the Islamic Peace Committee, has appealed to Iran and Iraq to observe an immediate cease-fire for the duration of the forthcoming month of Ramadan.

In a message addressed to the leaders of the two countries, through the secretary general of the Organisation of Islamic Conference, President Jawara urged the two countries to cooperate fully with the Islamic Peace Committee.

In this way, he said, the peace process could be renewed with a view to entering into substantial and meaningful negotiations.

The president also reiterated that he had placed himself and the good offices of the Islamic Peace Committee constantly at the disposal of the two countries and hoped that a meeting between the committee and the authorities in Iran and Iraq can be arranged soon. He said the Islamic Peace Committee strongly deplores the fact that the unfortunate Gulf war, now in its sixth year, continues to claim more and more human lives despite repeated appeals for a cease-fire. He noted that the precious lives lost since the outbreak of the war could have been spared for the greater cause of the entire Islamic Ummah, particularly the Palestinian question and the mounting aggression against Muslim states.

The Peace Committee chairman said this war between two Muslim nations threatens to deal a serious blow to the dignity and unity of Islam, and its prolongation contributes to the weakening of the solidarity of the Islamic Ummah.

On bilateral matters, the two leaders expressed their satisfaction with the excellent relations existing between the Republic of Niger and the PLO and examined ways and means to strengthen the cooperation and solidarity between the Niger and Palestinian peoples.

On the situation in the Middle East and Palestine, the chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, His Excellency Yasir 'Arafat, briefed His Excellency Seyni Kountche on the recent developments in the region as well as on the PLO activities and role at the Palestine, Arab, and international levels. The Niger head of state once again pledged to the chairman of the PLO Executive Committee the sympathy and solidarity of the Niger people following Israel's air raid against the PLO Headquarters in Tunis, an act which constituted an unprovoked aggression against a people struggling for the restoration of all their fundamental inalienable rights. They reiterated their endorsement of the appeals made by the summits of the Islamic countries and the Nonaligned Movement for a settlement of the conflict through negotiations.

Examining the grave situation in southern Africa [words indistinct] of that regime, the two presidents appealed to the international community to maintain and step up pressure with the view to putting an immediate end to apartheid and bringing about in South Africa a free and democratic society and the accession of Namibia to independence. In the same vein, they recalled the essential responsibility of the United Nations concerning Namibia and they (?called for) the immediate implementation of Resolution 435 of the Security Council.

They expressed the hope that the international conference (?against) South Africa due to take place from 10 to 15 June 1986 will result in measures and resolutions that will bring about a new era of peace and justice in that part of the African Continent.

Noting with strong disapproval the solid and multiform ties between Israel and racist South Africa, the two leaders expressed the need for the members of the OAU and the Arab League to team up in order to cope with that [word indistinct] criminal alliance which is directed against their common interests. In this regard, they deemed it necessary to convene a second Afro-Arab summit conference with a view to strengthening the cooperation between Arab and African countries and to making it possible for them to [words indistinct]. Opening the meeting, Minister Amega stressed the common links that unite Ghanaians and Togolese, in whose interest it is necessary to consolidate their relations. After criticizing the growing selfishness of some countries because of economic problems, Minister Amega expressed delight at the two countries' determination to take their people out of underdevelopment.

[Begin Amega recording] The numerous problems our world is confronted with today force states, which are not careful enough, to withdraw within themselves and become very selfish. As I mentioned earlier, Ghana and Togo, who grew aware of their joint destiny at an early stage, based their relations of good-neighborliness on bilaterial, multilateral, and cultural cooperation through the exchange of students of our respective universities, and our membership in the Association of African Universities which is headquartered in your country.

In the economic sphere, our determination to raise our level of development encouraged our two states to take part in the implementation of several projects including the Cement Company of West Africa, and ECOWAS. Moreover, our membership in ECOWAS shows, if necessary, the importance that our heads of state and government attach to the development of our subregion as well as the remarkable clear-sightedness with which they saw the urgent need to build a subregional economy on a solid and realistic base.

In the political sphere, Ghana and Togo can boast of their good relations based on frequent consultations on a continent where antagonistic interests and ideological struggles often create absurd conflicts and hotbeds of tension. Whereas in other parts of the world border disputes lead to armed confrontation, we can feel proud of the wisdom of our governments in creating a Ghana-Togo joint commission for border demarcation between the two states. Very recently, in 1984, our states associated Nigeria and Benin to this commission and signed three agreements aimed at controlling and facilitating the movement of persons and goods across our borders. [End recording]

The Ghanaian secretary for foreign affairs, Dr Obed Asamoah, expressed his gratitude to the Togolese Government for convening this meeting. In Dr Asamoah's opinion, today's meeting will enable both countries to consolidate peace between them.

[Begin Asamoah recording in English followed by consecutive translation into French] This meeting is not the first of its kind. We have had several in the past, and it is in the context of regular consultations between our two governments in order to ensure peace, stability, cooperation, and regular social intercourse between our people. Whatever other frameworks of cooperation we may have, for example, in the context of quadripartite treaties, we believe that it is essential that Ghana and Togo meet regularly on a bilateral basis, and we hope that this meeting will continue the progress that we have been making at solving the problems between our two peoples. [End recording]

ANGOLA

ANGOP Considers Namibian Independence, Cubans

MB121332 Luanda Domestic Service in Portuguese 1200 GMT 10 May 86

[ANGOP commentary: "Linkage Has a New (?Formula)"]

[Text] According to the international press, the racist South African minister of foreign affairs, Pik Botha, told his country's parliament that U.S. aid to the Angolan puppets might have brought the prospects of Namibian independence back to square one.

The statements of the racist minister would have come as no surprise had it not been for the subtle manner in which they seek to disguise the old and obsolete linkage [preceding word in English] policy which seeks to make attainment of Namibian independence conditional on the withdrawal of the Cuban internationalists from Angola. In fact, Botha's statements, deliberately made at a moment when an international conference on Namibia was held in Brussels, amount to the same old tune of the Cuban withdrawal from Angola, though with a difference. Now it is being claimed that the Angolan Government will insist on such a presence because of U.S. aid to the puppets.

This clear [word indistinct] maneuver enacted by the racist regime with a view to keeping international public opinion busy with [words indistinct] in the solution of the southern African problems is not fortuitous. On the one hand racist South Africa, which is becoming politically, militarily, and economically worn out in view of the support it has given UNITA since 1975, wishes at all costs to attribute to others the causes of the present impasse in the solution of the Namibian problem. Despite such a maneuver, South Africans feel more at ease in internally repressing patriots fighting with great courage against the continuation of the hideous apartheid regime. Proof of this is a recent event in Pietermaritzburg, in eastern South Africa, where an ANC group entered a hospital and released one of their fellow countrymen about to be sent to the racist dungeons. This event, occurring right under the regime's nose only 4 days before the great 1 May strike, exemplifies the agony of the racist regime in South Africa. Therefore, there are no doubts that the South African republic is a country plunged into an unprecedented crisis; its economy is going through a new and precarious phase. Its direct involvement in aggression against the People's Republic of Angola as well as its support for UNITA puppets has also cost it dearly.

Washington's assistance to UNITA, far from showing a dispute with Pretoria — and this would have been unrealistic — was to a large extent a shot in the arm trying to keep a decadent regime alive.

On the other hand, it has become clear from Pik Botha's statements that they seek to create the impression that the Angolan Government could be blamed for the delayed implementation of UN Resolution 435 on Namibia, now been set for 1 August. At least this is a conclusion that can be drawn from Botha's statements when he claims that the People's Republic of Angola has lost all interest in negotiating the withdrawal of internationalist contingents. What South Africa and its allies once again seek to achieve is an impasse in a solution to the Namibian problem.

The People's Republic of Angola, on one hand, and the Frontline States and the five Portuguese-speaking African countries, on the other, have already adopted an unequivocal stand on the matter. The presence of Cuban troops, according to the Angolan Government statement of 8 March 1986, has nothing to do with the independence of Namibia and does not constitute a threat to South Africa or any other neighbor of the People's Republic of Angola. Instead, it represents a deterrent to aggressive designs from abroad. The statement also reaffirmed Angola's goodwill in gradually withdrawing Cuban troops from southern Angola, provided that the four minimum conditions for the security of Angola and its citizens are fulfilled, namely the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of South African forces occupying a part of our territory, the immediate application of Security Council Resolution 435 leading to the true independence of Namibia, an end to all South African actions against Angola, and an end to all of logistical support for the UNITA puppet gangs.

The most recent summit of the Frontline States has also reaffirmed its rejection of the attempt to link Namibian independence to the withdrawal of Cuban internationalist forces from Angola, and condemned the present impasse in solving the Namibian question. A similar stand was adopted by the five Portuguese-speaking African countries. In fact, while stressing expectations surrounding the authentic implementation of the South African statement on Namibian independence as of 1 August 1986, the Luanda Declaration also makes an appeal to the United Staes to review its attitude in supporting organized terrorism and to unconditionally support the right of the Namibian people to self-determination and independence.

The People's Republic of Angola once again repudiates any attempt to involve new factors in the solution of the Namibia problem, which constitute a diversionary maneuver designed to perpetuate domination of the country by the racist South Africans. The People's Republic of Angola wants southern Africa to be a zone of peace and prosperity, where true cooperation among the peoples of the region and between this region and the rest of the world may prevail without discrimination or interference in the domestic affairs of the respective countries. The sole cause of the present conflict in the region and the factor that prevents the fulfillment of these principles is the outdated and obsolete apartheid regime, the abolition of which has long been a necessity. Only thus will we have peace, progress, and well-being for our peoples.

The struggle continues! Victory is certain!

UNITA Reportedly Willing To Talk With MPLA

PA121524 Paris AFP in Spanish 1504 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Lisbon, 12 May (AFP) — The National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA, armed opposition to the Luanda regime), has announced "its willingness to talk with Angolan authorities with a view to national reconciliation." A communique from the UNITA Central Committee received today by the AFP office in Lisbon which refers to a meeting held from 1 to 9 May in the "liberated territory" of Angola, states that the dialogue with the MPLA (ruling party) of Angola, must be conducive to the "formation of a government of national union and to the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Angola."

The communique signed by Jonas Savimbi, leader of the movement, and dated in Jamba (general headquarters of UNITA in southeastern Angola), warns Lusakan authorities "to put an end to the movements of Angolan and Cuban troops in Zambian territory." UNITA criticized recent statements by Brazilian President Jose Sarney during his official visit to Portugal in which he condemned foreign support of the "unconventional forces operating in Angola."

The UNITA Central Committee, the communique added, also broached the consolidation of its armed forces, "strengthened by new sophisticated means." Observers in Lisbon believe that the allusion to these "sophisticated means" may be related to the delivery of Stinger surface to air missiles from the U.S. Government.

Machel Claims 'Bandits' Infiltrate Sofala Province

MB120735 Maputo Domestic Service in Portuguese 1700 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] President Samora Machel today once again stressed the strategic importance of Sofala province in the general economic development of the country. Speaking at a rally held in Beira city, the supreme leader of the Mozambican revolution pointed out that, in view of this, the enemy has infiltrated armed bandits in the province, establishing a central base for those criminals in this region of the country. At the rally, which served to transfer power from the outgoing leader of Sofala province, Marcelimo dos Santos, to the new governor, Francisco Masquil, Samora Machel stressed the responsibility of the Mozambican people as a whole in fighting armed banditry with a view to reestablishing peace and calm in the country. President Samora Machel has already returned to Maputo.

Renamo Claim of Capturing Namaacha Refuted

MB121659 London BBC World Service in English 1515 GMT 12 May 86

["Focus on Africa" program]

[Text] MNR rebels in Mozambique claimed at the weekend to have occupied the town of Namaacha on the border with Swaziland, about 80 km west of Maputo. It is the latest in a series of claims by the MNR which usually pass without official or unofficial comment from the Mozambique authorities, but on this occasion, it seems, there is no shortage of people willing to refute the rebel claims. From Maputo, Dan Moiane cabled this report:

Reports from overseas that the MNR attacked the border town of Namaacha took residents of the town by surprise. Contacted by telephone, the management of one of the main hotels in Namaacha said that (?there was) nothing out of the ordinary that had taken place in the town. Traffic between Namaacha and Maputo has continued as normal for the past weeks, and the traffic carrying goods from neighboring Swaziland have also been moving without any apparent hitch, and no traveler has arrived in the Mozambique capital with a story to back up the MNR claim. I spoke to relatives of people living in Namaacha and the surrounding area. They expressed surprise at the MNR claims, saying that in phone calls to their relatives in Namaacha over the past week, they heard nothing of any rebel capture or even attacks on the border town. If the MNR rebels had entered Namaacha a week ago, it would have been a hard job for the Mozmabicans to hide the facts. The town is important for cross-border travelings and across the frontier the residents would surely have heard of any attacks on the town.

The official military authorities, for their part, dismissed the claims outright as lies an a conspiracy against Mozambique.

SOUTH AFRICA

Heunis Announces Government Structural Changes

MB121133 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1118 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 12, SAPA — Wide-ranging changes to second and third tier government in South Africa, including the abolition of development boards for blacks and other local level development bodies on July 1 to coincide with the scrapping of provincial governments in their present form, were announced today. Speaking in debate on his budget allocation, the minister of constitutional development and planning, Mr Chris Heunis, announced:

— details of the abolition of provincial councils legislative authority and the introduction of "non-racially restricted" state president appointed executive authorities to deal with general affairs matters at the middle tier;
— the abolition on July 1 of the 13 development boards for black townships and the transfer of personnel to provincial administrations pending other allocations in the civil services;
— the abolition of the Transvaal Peri-Urban [perimeter-urban] board on July 1 and its incorporation into Transvaal's provincial administration;
— the eventual rationalisation of Natal's Development and Services Board with Regional Services Councils [RSC]; and — retention of the Cape's Divisional Council System for a few years before their replacement by RSCs but a transfer of their personnel to the provincial administration on July 1.

The proposed changes to provincial and local government, described as "rationalisation of great importance," would be contained in legislation to be published soon. Altogether, about 40,000 officials would be involved in the changes but the government had committed itself to ensuring their security and job tenure. Mr Heunis said the provinces' administrations and structures would remain as they were now, but with two major differences.

Firstly, there would be the abolition of provincial councils as elected legislatures and, secondly, there would be a "transfer of functions" to be exercised by the executive authorities. Provincial administrations would in future only deal with general affairs and the process of transferring own affairs functions of education, health, and local government had already started. Provincial administrations would continue in Cape Town, Bloemfontein, Pretoria, and Pietermaritzburg for the four provinces, with administrators and executive committees both appointed by the state president.

Because provincial administrations would now only deal with general affairs, there would be no restriction on the race groups from which members of the executive committee could be appointed. The administrators would be politically responsible to parliament and a joint standing committee would be created for this purpose. Financial responsibility would fall to the provincial secretary, who would be accountable to the standing committee on public accounts.

Other general affairs functions would be transferred to provincial administrations from central government, but specific details of this were not available yet. With provincial administrations officials incorporation into the civil service, the sphere of the civil service commission would be expanded.

Outlines Joint Executive Authority

MB121233 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1232 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 12, SAPA -- Provision would be made in a bill to be tabled soon for any province to form a joint executive body with a self-governing national state, the minister of constitutional development and planning,Mr Chris Heunis, said today. Replying to debate on his budget vote, he also said he had received instructions from the government to devolve to the provincial level, as soon as possible, all those executive functions under his control which directly affected black people. Mr Heunis said the provincial system "as we know it" would come to an end on June 30 this year and a "more streamlined provincial system representative of all communities" would come into force.

Although the broad guidelines of the new dispensation were announced in May last year, it was only recently that decisions were taken on the details. Parliament would in future exercise overall political control of the provinces, Mr Heunis said. The appointments of the administrators and executive committees would be of a political nature "and will take careful account of the particular characteristics and population makeup of each province."

A mechanism was also provided to divide the existing provinces within the existing provincial boundaries should this prove necessary. Existing provincial officials would be transferred to the public service with effect from July 1 with protection of salaries, pension rights and accumulated leave. There should be "no disruption" in this changeover, as it was only the statutory basis for their employment which would change. The provisions of the coming bill on the re-organisation of provincial functions would ensure that they would not be penalised.

The disappearance of a legislature at provincial level would require certain changes in financial administration, and the con-stitution and the exchequer and audit act would be amended to allow for these. The provincial secretary would remain the chief official and accounting officer and, as with other heads of departments, would account to parliamentary committees. Mr Heunis said that to facilitate cooperation between provincial administrations and self-governing territories apart from Natal and KwaZulu, the bill provided for the creation of "similar joint executive bodies in other regions." To ensure that the new provincial authorities had a large measure of autonomy, a general power to issue proclamations would be vested in the administrator. Those proclamations would have to be tabled in parliament.

A theme of the bill was the government's commitment to get "the various communities in our country" as close as possible to the process of making and carrying out decisions. In line with this objective of maximum devolution of executive powers, the bill would provide for powers currently entrusted to a minister to be assigned to an administrator. There were also provisions allowing the administrator to transfer powers to third tier government.

The government had already announced that the future provincial authorities would receive "additional functions which will make them important executive organs of the government sector." Investigations were still under way on details of this devolution, and it was not possible to release much more information at present.

"As regards my own department I wish however to now make it clear that the execution of functions at present handled there will be transferred to the appropriate institutions as soon as possible. There is no good reason why most executive acts associated with the administration of the Physical Planning and Group Areas Acts should not be devolved to the provincial levels or even lower where they can be carried out closer to the community." The proposed abolition of development boards meant that about 40,000 employees would no longer fall under the control of his department. "It is also the government's intention that all executive activities which my department presently administers and which directly affect the interests of black communities, such as the administration of black local authorities, housing, welfare and socio-economic development, should as soon as possible be placed under the direct control of black political decision-makers. At the same time it is intended that these functions should be executed at a lower government level. Nothing in the new provincial system prevents members of any community from occupying positions in that system."

Mr Heunis said he had received instructions from the government to "devolve as soon as possible all those executive functions under my control which directly affect black people, to the provincial level." "The proposed provincial dispensation acknowledges that executive acts and administration find best expression in a regional context which will advance decentralized government and yet re-affirms parliament's sovereign policy-making role."

The director-general of Mr Heunis' department, Dr Andreas van Wyk, said at a press briefing today that while the proposed bill made provision for joint executive authorities between the provinces and the self-governing states, it made no provision for joint legislative authorities. While the bill would provide for a redemarcation of the provinces, no decisions had been taken on the matter. He also said that the division of health services between general and own affairs was "still being hashed out finally."

No Replacement of Influx Control

MB121449 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1446 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 12, SAPA — The government did not intend to replace influx control with new regulations under a different name, the minister of constitutional development and planning, Mr Chris Heunis, said today. Replying to points raised during the debate on his budget vote, he said there could be "no suggestion" of such a plan. There was a difference between squatting and informal settlement. Squatting was the illegal occupation of land and would not be allowed under the government's new urbanisation policy. However, informal settlement, where people lived in homes according to their means and upgraded those dwellings gradually, would be encouraged.

Community development programmes were needed in many cases and such plans had begun in the Port Elizabeth/Uitenhage area and other parts of the eastern Cape, as well as in the Pinetown region and Crossroads, near Cape Town. The private sector would become more involved in the provison of housing, with employers helping their workers to build homes.

Report on Prepared Text of Tutu Vienna Speech

MB120515 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0006 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Vienna, May 12, SAPA — The South African press has sold its soul in exchange for immediate realisable advantages — mainly financial ones — Bishop Desmond Tutu said in a speech prepared for delivery at the International Press Institute (IPI) conference in Vienna but released in Johannesburg before his departure.

The archbishop-elect of the Anglican Church in South Africa said in the opening address of the IPI conference that it is his contention "that the white English and Afrikaans press is guilty...of having abandoned its birthright for a mess of pottage."

Calling it the "Esau complex" after the old testament account of the brothers Jacob and Esau in which the latter sold his birthright for an immediate need to be satisfied, Bishop Tutu said this complex refers to a penchant to work for short term interests while "foolishly abandoning a longterm advantage." He said the longterm advantage abandoned by the press in South Africa could not immediately be envisaged and probably involved considerable inconvenience, and "you cannot as it were put a price to it."

"Our South African press... the white English and Afrikaans press — is guilty by an large of having abandoned its birthright for a mess of pottage. (It is) investing its considerable resources in serving shortsightedly short term interests and quite irresponsibly seems to have lost of longterm concerns. It may seem to be a harsh judgment, but it is not hyperbolic to state... that our South African press has done a Dr Faustus on us, it has sold its soul in exchange for immediate advantages, mainly financial ones, which goes hand in glove with with popularity in the white community," he said.

Bishop Tutu said he qualified his generalisation by using words such as "by and large" and "on the whole" since it would otherwise give the impression that all SA newspapers have been "totally spineless... and guilty of this disservice to the SA community." He said there had been some newspapers, of which one or two are still in existence, which had been true to the "best traditions of outstanding journalism."

He mentioned by name the now defunct RAND DAILY MAIL and the SUNDAY EXPRESS as well as the DAILY DISPATCH and the SUNDAY TIMES when it had been under the editorship of Joel Merwis. He mentioned by name also editors of the other above mentioned papers such as Laurence Gandar, Ray Louw Allistair Sparks, and Donald Woods. Woods, who was eventually banned and fled South Africa and is now living in exile, probably found himself in this situation because of his "persistent enquiries" into the "mysterious" death of black consciousness leader Steve Biko, Bishop Tutu said. He singled out the SUNDAY TIMES under editorshop of Joel Merwis for its coverage of the "info scandal" and the RAND DAILY MAIL for its "persistence" which led to a judicial inquiry into the shootings at Langa last year — an inquiry which brought to light that the account given initially by the minister of law and order, Mr Louis le Grange, was "less than accurate."

Bishop Tutu said the latter inquiry showed that the South African Police in a quarter of a century had learned "precious little of crowd control." "Even in eastern bloc countries such as Poland the police are able to deal with rioting crowds without inflicting hardly mortal injuries. In South Africa is has seemed that since black lives are cheap, it did not really matter how much fatalities took place," he said.

Speaking on the fact that the South African press is a great deal more freer than most other countries on the African continent, he said it was a "deliberately cultivated aberration by the South African authorities who have wanted the outside world to believe that things were not so bad." "It is a phenomenon much like the South African ploy of declaring our government to be rabidly anticommunistic or to dub black freedom fighters terrorists, knowing that in the West the reaction to these buzz words is throughly Pavlovian. It is all part of a carefully cultivated public relations exercise," Bishop Tutu said.

He described the more than 100 laws by which the SA press is "hamstrung" as a "veritable minefield" and said, as he mentioned among the examples how official comment was needed on matters of security and the police force, that such a method might give the specific agency time to "cover up their tracks" and asked how it was possible to probe allegations of police brutality under such conditions. He also said the SA public is kept in "dangerous ignorance" about the views of someone like Nelson Mandela who may not be quoted but who is a "crucial factor determining what sort of country we will have come liberation." "What I am at some pains to stress is that our press, or certain sections of it, do have to be commended for seeking to uphold the glorious traditions of a free press. Some editors and other journalists have paid a heavy price to keep the public informed. The SA Government has kept making ominous noises about furhter curbs on the press. So you realise that your colleagues in South Africa labour under quite formidable handicaps," the bishop told the IPI.

Further Report

MB120530 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0031 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Vienna, May 12, SAPA — South African newspapers tend to identify their immediate interests with white interests and not with the longterm interests of the nation as a whole, the archbishop-elect of Cape Town said in a speech prepared for the opening address of the International Press Institute [IPI] in Vienna. Bishop Desmond Tutu of Johannesburg released his address to SAPA before his departure to Canada for a visit to an Anglican Church meeting there en route to Vienna.

In his address Bishop Tutu re-iterated remarks recently made in South African when he addressed a conference on the "Church in Crisis" about the difference in perspectives and experiences of whites and blacks, but constantly referred to the role of the media in forming or challenging these differences. The media is "constantly serving sectional interests even though their disclaimers to the contrary will be vehement and loud," he said. This tragedy is compounded by the fact that the electronic media represnted in SA by the SABC is "really an extension of the propaganda arm of the Nationalist Party." He recounted the recent criticism aimed at the SABC by the Afrikaans Johannesburg daily DIE VADERLAND — "which could be said to come from the same stable" — and the SABC response which called into question the patriotism of the newspaper instead of responding to the accusation by refuting the charges, in in the bishop's view. "Anything goes where patriotism is concerned, including lying or not exactly telling the truth," Bishop Tutu said. He said he was "deeply saddened to see how our newspapers which should be our salvation ... serve us so ill ... given the fact that the SABC would not know what to do with the truth if ti stared it in the face."

Having earlier in his speech said that the SA English and Afrikaans press has sold its soul for immediate advantages which are mainly financial, he said it was "distressing" to see how the newspaper dealt with the disinvestment issue. He levelled criticism at the fact that most opponents to disinvestment are whites and that they are motivated not by fear of personal consequences but said "blacks will suffer so much" — a motivation which he is sceptical about. He added that the newspapers do not then "describe the true reality."

Bishop Tutu contended that whites viewed all criticism against South Africa, even by South Africans, in the context of patrotism — "a patriotism very narrowly conceived." "Very few in the white community want to be labelled unpatriotic ... and I think the white newspapers because of financial considerations have to pander to these pseudo patriotic feelings among whites. They are then telling white people what they masochistically want to hear: that they are an embattled people and that there is a hostile world out there which is going to be satisfied with nothing less than ... the whites to be replaced by a black Marxist revolutionary regime. It is just another aspect of the white laager mentally at work," he said. He said most whites believe SA is in the "throes of rapid change in our land and this leaves them all rather breathless." He said that blacks dismissed the changes as "peripheral to their major concern or as being merely cosmetic" — sentiments which gets many whites "hot under the collar."

He re-iterated the difference in perceptions, illustrating this with the differences in life-styles especially during the state of emergency when he saw whites playing tennis on flood-lit courts at night while blacks regularly experience roadblocks, armoured vehicles in the townships, birdshot, live ammunition and teargas. Having said that in South Africa "you caould say with a generalisation with substantial validity that we have a deeply polarised society between white and black" to such an extent that the groups are so separated that it could be said they inhabit different planets, Bishop Tutu added: "Apartheid has succeeded with devastating effect to make us aliens to one another." "We are really world's apart with hardly any communication work mentioning ... Whites know little about black anger which makes black youths believe they could die before liberation came — and frighteningly not caring ... The white community was naturally frightened. If I was white I would be frightened too."

He referred to political power sharing — the only fundamental change acceptable to blacks — and said if he was white he would need "considerable grace" to oppose a sociopolitical and economic system with such substantial privileges (for whites). He praised God for the many whites who do oppose apartheid.

He returned to the media's role where there is such a "serious breakdown in communications" between people living in the same land and whose continued survival depended on the acceptance that they had to co-exist. "A far heavier responsibility then lies with the media to provide the means of that much needed communication, more so than in normal societies," he said.

On special black editions of white newspapers, he had this to say: "Sadly many of us felt that items of news which featured in the black edition should have been published for white readership but often they did not feature in the white edition." White newspapers, he said, have "by and large fallen down very badly in executing this formidable communications exercise." He said with the demise of the RAND DAILY MAIL this position has become worse and that the gap is perhaps being filled to a limited extent by the year-old WEEKLY MAIL.

He again said those papers which try to describe the "harsh realities of SA .. have either been closed or are in grave danger of closure which makes those that survive even more eager to serve white interests." "These newspapers fear that if they consistently told whites in an unambiguous way that the problem was (nowhere else) but here in South Africa, they would (have) put paid to their chances of succeeding financially."

Bishop Tutu said these newspapers did not seem to believe that the "present dispensation is on the skids" and that there may be a "day of reckoning when every institution and everybody will be judged harshly about whether they advanced or hindered the liberation process." He re-iterated that in this respect most white newspapers have done a grave disservice to the people in not helping whites "to prepare for the inevitable."

He also spoke of what he called the "need" to have an enemy and said "some of us have helped fit the bill." He said he has been identified by the newspapers as public enemy number one and almost all (newspapers) have found the shortcut to popularity with their readership is to do a bit of "Tutu-bashing." "These papers do not point out what we actually do — without being big-headed about it, we stand between our motherland and disaster — nor that many of the young impatient blacks think we are obstacles to the revolution." He said that when he speaks out against violence, including black-on black killings, some black youngsters reject this stand. "He (Tutu) is always stopping us finishing what we have started," he said in quoting the black youths' rejection of a non-violent stand.

Saying he does not mind even harsh criticism, he nevertheless singled out a national English Sunday paper for "peddling stuff (that is) vicious and belongs in the gutter press" on reports relating to himself and the recent elections of his church of its new archbishop. "...The disgrace to journalism is that such despicable attempts should have been made (in attempting to influence the outcome of the elections)," he said.

He added that reading SA newspapers it could be thought that SA was going through a period of calm and stability, while an average of three people have died daily in unrest-related incidents and troops are being used against the civilian population, children are boycotting schools and the Rand has been "battered daily and business confidence is plummeting." What we have on SA front pages are descriptions of a rebel rugby tour telling whites things are back to normal and makes them believe the sports boycott has been breached, he said. "We can have these hulks gambolling on our playing fields and no one need know that people are being petrol-bombed by vigilante groups which appear to be functioning with the connivance or active support of the police. That even children are being detained and on the admission of the SA ambassador in London (Dr Dennis Worrall) some are tortured ... (a) damning and quite horrendous admission. It is the worst case of 'out of sight, out of mind.' But it is dangerous ... a situation will not go away just because you ignore it. And yet our papers delude our people in thinking that that is so. And so they are lulled into a false sense of security and you won't be thanked for awakening them out of it, and our papers are loathe to do this because they may lose advertising and go under," Bishop Tutu said.

He mentioned the bias of the media during the 15-year bush war in Zimbabwe which left white Rhodesian totally unprepared for and "devastated" at the election victory of Mr Robert Mugabe over the media favourite Bishop Abel Muzorewa. "We seem to experience a deja vu situation. Nearly all the white media is determined to champion the cause of a certain political leader ... the higher his stock with the white community, the lower he sinks in the estimation of most blacks," Bishop Tutu said. "They refuse to accept that in a free election Nelson Mandela is going to win hands down without having uttered a word in more than twenty years."

"And so you weep for your motherland which has such a tremendous potential to be great, which has some wonderful people, black and white, who intend to see the birth of a new South Africa come about and who give you great hope for the future of our motherland. From all this you will realise that I have the highest regard for a free, fair and courageous press and just wish to goodness that our white newspapers would awake to the tremendous service they could render our country if they stopped trying to be Esau" (in reference to the Esau complex he mentioned earlier), Bishop Tutu ended his address to the IPI.

Editors Defend Positions

MB121721 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1707 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 12, SAPA — Editors of some Johannesburg daily newspapers, approached today by SAPA to comment on Bishop Desmond Tutu's charge that the white English and Afrikaans press is doing nothing to bridge the gulf in communication between the black and white communities, defended their positions.

Bishop Tutu, speaking to the International Press Institute's annual conference this morning in Vienna, said, among other things, that the white press in South Africa "has sold its soul" for immediate advantages which are mainly financial. He also said this press told its white readers only what it wanted to hear, forgetting that there might one day be a "day of judgment" when all will be asked what they had done to hinder or encourage the "liberation process."

Acting Editor-in-Chief of THE STAR, Mr Rex Gibson, said: "I can only speak for THE STAR which I believe is doing an effective job of acting as a bridge between black and white but not a perfect one. We constantly strive to improve that communication. I believe that better newspapers in South Africa also seek those aims." On the issue that important news items in black editions are often not found in "white" editions — a factor also criticised by Bishop Tutu, Mr Gibson said: "THE STAR's policy is that important news, especially political news, should appear with roughly similar prominence in all editions."

BUSINESS DAY editor Mr Ken Owen responded by saying: "All newspapers tend to give expression to the perceptions and convinctions of the communities they serve. I am sure that if Bishop Tutu is right he and his community will in time produce newspapers to give expression to their perceptions and convictions. They will then not need to rely on the media which he criticises."

The editor of Johannesburg's Afrikaans daily, BEELD, is at present on leave and could not be reached for comment, while the another Nasionale Press [National Press] editor, Mr W. Beukes of DIE BURGER in Cape Town, declined to comment and said through his secretary that he would do so in his own newspaper.

Preskors [Press Corporation] editor of DIE VADERLAND, Mr Harald Pakendorf, however, commented by saying among other things that it was true that there was a communications gap between the different communities. "Bishop Tutu is asking for something that is not easy to realise in practice. Newspapers have a specific market which it addresses — in the case of DIE VADERLAND it is the Afrikaans readership." He said however that his paper also dealt with both legitimate as non-legitimate demands of the black community in making these known as well as dealing with the situation blacks find themselves in. "It may be so that we are not doing it fully enough. But I doubt whether Bishop Tutu reads VADERLAND so regularly that he could judge the situation. However, accepting Tutu's criticism I wonder why he finds it impossible to turn inwards and ask the obvious question: What is the black press doing to explain the white situation to its black readers?" The answer is that it is doing nothing. In fact you can read nothing about the white society in the black press whereas you can read a great deal of the black society in the white press. "However, this is not an accusation aimed at Bishop Tutu but should rather be seen as a question to which we should all address ourselves — and that is how to we address the communication gap between whites and blacks. Admittedly though, there is no black press in the sense that there are blacks owning black newspapers. Had this been so, I guess we would have found an even blacker black voice than we do at the moment and that too should concern us as much as it concerns Bishop Tutu," Mr Pakendorf said.

Nel Says Report on Alexandra 'Exaggerated'

MB121806 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1756 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 12, SAPA — Reports that Alexandra township was tense and simmering during a crime prevention drive by the security forces at the weekend were exaggerated, the deputy minister of information, Mr Louis Nel, said in a statement today. Officials from the Bureau for Information had been present during the drive, and on the basis on their report he wanted to congratulate the security forces, who had acted in a restrained, calm and friendly manner. This was borne out by the cooperation and the peaceful mood of the residents of Alexandra throughout the operation.

It was clear that claims by the Alexandra Action Committee that they were in complete control of the area were false and mere propaganda. Judging from certain newspaper reports following the operation it is clear that a propaganda campaign is now again being waged against the security forces. In these reports it is alleged that the township was besieged, that it was sealed off, and that the situation was tense and simmering. One report even referred to Alexandra as resembling a war zone. These statements are exaggerated. Alexandra was not sealed off — residents could freely move in and out of the area. The township was not besieged and a calm atmosphere prevailed during the operation. It is also not true that taxis were not allowed to operate and that the taking of photographs was prohibited. In fact special failities were made available for the media to accompany the security forces and to obtain first-hand and on-the-spot information, including photographs.

Mr Nel said the influence of radicals had now notably been restricted. Although the operation had been scaled down since the weekend, the security forces would remain in the area for as long as necessary.

General Malan Dismisses Rumors of Attack

MB121555 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1545 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] House of Representatives, May 12, SAPA — Rumours of a conventional military assault on South Africa between June 16 and 20 this year were "nonsense," the minister of defence, General Magnus Malan, said today. Speaking in his vote of the budget, he said that for purely military and logistical reasons, such an attack was highly unlikely in the foreseeable future. However, people who engaged in these types of rumour should not think that the defence force was unprepared or incapable of dealing with a conventional threat.

The SADF had been engaged in conventional and semi-conventional warfare for the past 20 years and had not once come out of an operation with a "bloody nose." He said the Republic of South Africa was facing the most vehement and wide ranging onslaught in its existence but it was not a revolution. Those who contended that a revolution was underway either did so for their own propaganda purposes or were ignorant of the conditions in South Africa.

However, a revolutionary conflict was being instigated from beyond the country's borders. In these circumstances the SADF had to create "protective mechanisms" so that the political, social and evolutionary processes could continue. "I believe that this political process has to be expediated to defuse the attacks of our enemies and their instruments."

The Soviet Union had gained a foothold in Angola from which to give support to SWAPO and the ANC. In the past few years it had increased its influence in Angola where between 40,000 and 50,000 surrogates were now deployed. This meant that with the Angolan army, 140,000 troops were now in the area.

South Africa, on the other hand, had repeatedly stated it was not interested in the territory or any other country and the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, had suggested the formation of a joint security body to control regional conflict in southern Africa. Russia had responded by increasing its surrogates in Angola by 5000 to 10,000. Angola was now "awash" with sophisticated weaponry including aircraft and radar networks aimed at preventing South Africa attacking SWAPO bases.

'Struggle' Must Expand to Encompass White Areas

EA121249 Addis Ababa Radio Freedom in English to South Africa 1930 GMT 11 May 86

[Station commentary: "A Call to Take the Battle to the White Suburbs"]

[Text] Compatriots, for nearly 2 years now we have kept the momentum of struggle in our country unabated. Through concerted struggle and sacrifice we have maintained the offensive against the apartheid regime, rendering vast parts of our country, particularly the black townships and ghettos, ungovernable, and the apartheid system unworkable. In these months we have suffered a heavy toll on our part and also on many of our patriots and leaders from the bullets, truncheons, and batons of the heavily armed fascist troops and police.

Today, there is death everywhere in our country. More and more funerals of our patriots in townships have bred more and more funerals. Our townships have been sealed off and brutal massacres unleashed on us by the Pretoria troops. Townships like Alexandra, Kagiso, Mamelodi, Athlone, Crossroads, Lingelihle, Craddock, Guguletu, Nyanga, KwaNobuhle, Soweto, and now Tembisa have seen fierce long-running street battles between our people's defence committees, our youths and students armed only with petrol bombs, and the fascists' heavily armed troops and police.

We have seen the 6-day war of Alexandra, the Trojan horse massacre of Athlone in Cape Town and other scenes of brutal massacres, all taking place in our black townships. All taking place far from the eyes of our white compatriots who are still deluded into believing that all is well in our country. The flames that have been smoldering for the past 20 odd months in the black townships have not made any much sense to them than just that they are sporadic wildcat actions of black radicals.

The fascist regime has continued to hide the truth from our white compatriots deceiving them into believing that it can still continue to safeguard their white privileges and their undemocratic rule of our country. The regime has managed to carry out massacres for 6 days in Alexandra without our white compatriots knowing the real truth of the brutality committed by this regime that they continue to support, in a township that is only a street away from them.

The brutal shootings at Munsieville and other townships by white vigilantes and police have all been hidden away from the eyes of our white compatriots. They continue to live in a dream world while the black townships are in flames. This false illusion of believing that their future lies in the defence of the white minority rule at all cost must now be exploded and be wiped out of the minds of (? the white community). It is our responsibility, countrymen, to awaken our white compatriots from this dream world. The time has come for our white compatriots to know the real truth of what is happening in their backyards in the black townships, where they are safely kept away from [word indistinct]. They cannot continue living in an oblivion when the world is (? falling) all around them. Now is the time for us to make all efforts to make it impossible for the apartheid regime to continue maintaining the war only in the townships. The war must now be taken into the white areas of our country. The arena of battle must now be not only Alexandra, not only Kagiso, not only (Kwindiza) and Soweto and Guguletu, not only Crossroads and Athlone, but must now be centered on Lower Loteni, Johannesburg and other areas like See Point, Cape Town, Durban and all the suburbs where our white compatriots are being safely kept away from knowing what is happening in their own country.

The time has now come, countrymen, for our white compatriots too to be involved in the struggle for the creation of a new democratic nonracial South Africa. They, too, must now be part of this fight to rid our country of the evil scourge of apartheid. They must be made to realise that apartheid will never end on its own. The Nationalist Party's reform package is not aimed at abolishing white minority rule and establishing a democratic South Africa but to entrench this evil apartheid and white minority rule, to perpetuate the repression and oppression of the black people of the country. This is why, on our part, we the black people, will never be satisfied by anything else (? that) Botha can (? come about with) as so-called reforms so as long as he does not address himself to the central and fundamental issue of political power in our country.

So long as he refuses to become realistic and accepts our right to govern ourselves, too, so long will the struggle will [as heard] continue till we finally defeat him and his illegal regime. There is no other way out. There is no middle road. Our white compatriots have a role to play in shortening the suffering that our country is going through as a result of the obstinacy and obduracy of the Pretoria rulers.

This they have to realize and we, the oppressed black people, must now take it upon ourselves to awaken them and bring them onto our side. To mobilize them to stand side by side with us in defeating this monster that is bleeding our country to death. Now is the time, countrymen, to take the struggle into the white areas for that is the only way that will bring the reality of our country to them to see.

New Group To Protect 'Law-Abiding' Blacks

MB121622 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1558 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Krugersdorp, May 12, SAPA — A mysterious and secret organization purporting to protect rights of law-abiding blacks surfaced in the west Rand this morning when leaflets introducing the organization to the black public were distributed throughout the black residential areas. An organization calling itself the "Brotherhood of Blacks" said in the leaflet that it was responsible for its distribution to make it publicly known that it was in existence. The leaflets were anonymous and had no address. The organization says its aim is to protect "our moderate brothers" against comrades, necklaces, stayaways and all political activists.

Convenience Store Strike Settlement Announced

MB130516 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0234 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 13, SAPA — The Commercial, Catering and Allied Workers Union of SA hammered out an agreement with Pick'n'Pay management this morning under which a R85 per month across-the-board increase was finally settled to bring to an end the strike at the supermarket chain. Announcing the agreement, Pick'n'Pay's personnel director, Mr Rene de Wet, said the increase would be effective from March 1 this year. The agreement came at the end of negotiations which continued to this morning since yesterday afternoon. Workers went on strike to back demands for a R90 per month across-the-board wage increase.

"The wage dispute between Pick'n'Pay and the Commercial, Catering and Allied Workers Union of South Africa was successfully resolved," Mr de Wet said in a statement to SAPA. The company is pleased that the resolution of the wage dispute came about at the negotiating table and considers the settlement to be confirmation that negotiation can eventually triumph over violence and industrial strife." He said all stores would be trading normally from today.

Sao Tome Resistance Group Asks S. African Help

MB091018 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1005 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Walvis Bay, May 9, SAPA — The National Resistance Front of Sao Tome (NRFST) would accept military aid from South Africa and training by the Angolan rebel movement UNITA to depose the communist government of the Sao Tome president, Mr Pinto da Costa, a spokesman for the NRFST said in Walvis Bay today. The spokesman, Mr Sergio Cortoso, 25, arrived with 75 other NRFST members in the South African port enclave on the SWA/Namibian coast on Wednesday last week after they had been given hours to leave the Cameroon on April 19. The 76 refugees spent 12 days at sea in a 50-foot fishing vessel, the Tindon, which carries a Libreville registration, L1112. For the last five days of their voyage, they were without food and water, and when South African naval vessels found them they were drifting helplessly on the Atlantic Ocean off Walvis Bay without fuel and with no radio contact.

Mr Cordoso told reporters today that they were awaiting a message from their leader, Mr Manuel Alfonso Rosario dos Santos, who was "somewhere in Europe" and was in contact with the South African Government, who was considering whether to let them stay. The regional representative of the department of home affairs, Mr F. Gibson, said he did not know when a final decision would be taken on the future of the 76 men, who were virtually all without travel documents. It was also not known whether any conditions would be attached if they were allowed to stay, either in South Africa or in SWA/Namibia. Mr Cordoso said the NRFST leadership had been in contact with UNITA leaders in Portugal.

Asked whether the NRFST would wage an armed struggle against the Sao Tome Government, Mr Cordoso said "our dream is to get (military) assistance, but if the South African Government says no, we will not get help from other African countries."

Mr Cordosa said the refugees still remembered conditions in Sao Tome before their island republic off the African west coast was granted independance by Portugal in 1975. The main objective of NRFST was to restore the economy of Sao Tome to a free-market system, and to oust foreigners from their country, including Angolan soldiers, Cubans,and Russians. Mr Cordosa said there about 100,000 people in Sao Tome and "the people are waiting for us." There were about 450 members of the NRFST outside Sao Tome who were scattered in various countries. The NRFST leader, Mr Dos Santos, had been sent a telegram from the refugees at Walvis Bay.

Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report]

Nuclear Power Program Frozen

Johannesburg THE SUNDAY STAR in English for 11 May reports on page 1 that South Africa's nuclear power program has been frozen until at least the end of the century, giving Natal a reprieve from the prospect of a nuclear station being built on its picturesque north coast. A "well-placed source" has conceded that had the accidents at Three Mile Island and Chernobyl occurred before South Africa embarked on its nuclear power program, the reactor at Koeberg might not have been built. An ESCOM [Electricity Supply Commission] spokesman said "the decision to freeze the nuclear power programme was taken some time before the Chernobyl accident." "It is apparent," the report says, "that official thinking has reverted to the lines of using the country's enormous coal resources for future power stations."

Farmers Prepare for War

A report on page 2 says farmers from Steelpoort in the northeastern Transvaal are "swallowing hard — and preparing for 'all-out war.' " There are no laborers to pick their fields of cotton. The farmers "seem genuinely perplexed at the attitudes of once-loyal labourers who are now frequently hostile." "The farmers claimed 'ANC pamphlets' had recently been distributed demanding minimum wages for the labourers of not less than R5 a day. THE SUNDAY STAR established that the average wage for farm labourers in Steelpoort is about R2 a day." UDF sources deny any knowledge of farmers being forced to buy ANC or UDF permits, "but the UDF has made no secret of the fact that it has been attempting to politicise farm workers in the area over the past few months and encouraging them to demand fair treatment from their employers."

Boost for Aeronautics Industry

South Africa's military aeronautics industry is poised for a boost with the unveiling of a sophisticated aircraft, a report on page 6 says. The final model has been completed for the Eyrie, a remote-controlled attack and reconnaissance aircraft with a wingspan of 4.88 meters. "Specially modified, it can also detect radiation and has equipment capable of nuclear, bacteriological, and chemical sampling." It also has "low heat output, to avoid heat-seeking missiles; an almost-silent engine, a fibreglass body and low-contrast camouflage. The Eyrie carries four 70 mm rockets and three cameras."

ANC Talks Urged

Writing in a column on page 11, John d'Oliveira says President Botha "has nothing to lose (except a few right-wing supporters) by cutting through the Gordian Knot of South African politics and agreeing to a Cabinet delegation talking to the ANC — without any preconditions — about what is needed to stop the violence." "Sooner or later, Mr Botha (or his representatives) must talk to the ANC. The sooner it happens, the better it will be for all of us and, if it happens on Mr Botha's initiative, the better it will be for him. If Mr Botha balks at unconditional talks with the ANC, let him at least talk to Nelson Mandela." "If Mr Botha and Mr Mandela could talk together, man-to-man, about possible compromises that might alleviate the unhappy situation in this country, it would send signals which would improve the credibility of Mr Botha's reform programme and which might open doors to further discussions."

Hope for EPG Visit

In an editorial on page 14 THE SUNDAY STAR says "it is all too easy to clutch at straws of hope, but in a sense South Africa stands at a watershed this week. The critical moment comes with a new visit by the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group [EPG] starting on Tuesday. Improbably, the EPG emerges as a means of getting the Government and the ANC into a negotiating situation." Unbanning the ANC and releasing Mandela "are no longer the outlandish ideas they once were." "On both sides of the EPG-Pretoria dealings complex games of bluff and double-bluff are afoot; the path remains strewn with obstacles. Yet there is no better alternative in view except more of the same dreadful cycle of violence, near-anarchy in the townships, near-police state repression, near-paralysis of the Government. On this score alone, the EPG's flicker of hope deserves to flourish."

Doubts About Bill of Rights

Writing on page 14 of THE SUNDAY STAR, Dennis Davies, associate law professor at the University of Cape Town, says "there is a deeply held belief in influential political groups that a Bill of Rights is but another method of preserving white leadership, this time in the form of a veto over any actions of a Parliament in which whites would not have a majority of the votes." Not surprisingly, therefore the view exists that any Bill of Rights introduced unilaterally by the government to be used "not to extend democratic freedoms but to protect group rights (meaning whites' rights to separate schools and separate residential areas) would have little chance of contributing to the attainment of a peaceful political equilibrium." However, if all interested political parties, including the ANC, could negotiate on a bill, "it is possible that agreement could be reached on a document having genuine legitimacy and popular acceptance."

Bill of Rights Could Attack Apartheid

Writing on the same page, political correspondent David Breier says University of South Africa constitutional lawyer Professor Marinus Wiechers believes "a Bill of Rights for South Africa is on the cards and will play a vital role in destroying remaining apartheid laws such as group areas, separate schools and race classification as well as detention without trial." "He said the expected Bill of Rights would not be a meaningless piece of paper but would form the base for an attack on remaining apartheid laws through judicial review." "Professor Wiechers said the constitution itself could probably not be directly attacked by a Bill of Rights but it could be indirectly attacked in a piecemeal fashion if the courts questioned the laws on which the constitution was founded, especially race classification on which representation in Parliament was based." But "he said it wrong to think of a Bill of Rights as an instant cure for all South Africa's ills. 'A Bill sets a target. It is something to aim at, like the Ten Commandments,' he said."

'Disinformation' Campaign

David Breier writes on page 13 of THE SUNDAY STAR "Review" section that "if we are to believe all the signals from London and Cape Town over the past week or two, Nelson Mandela will be released, the African National Congress will be unbanned, the South African Government will talk to the ANC, and all our problems will be over." Why do these great expectations abound? "What is happening is a complex and subtle campaign of disinformation and creative public relations by the British Government, the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group [EPG] and the South African Government. Each wants to achieve certain clear short-term goals over the next few months." The South African Government wants to avoid further economic sanctions. It is not trade with the Commonwealth that matter so much but trade with Britain "which is vital for South Africa and important to Britain." How do the two avoid being precipitated by the EPG into sanctions? "By making South Africa seem as reasonable as possible and no longer the intransigent government of old." South Africa "is therefore taking a new softer line in public on the ANC. The EPG wants to put pressure on South Africa to talk to the ANC, so it, too, is advertising an imminent breakthrough. Optimists hope that between the two, a miracle could happen and the Government could really begin talking to the ANC." But the bubble could burst. If the EPG report is against sanctions South Africa could revert to ANC-Bashing politics. If the EPG recommends sanctions at any time unless the government talks to the ANC, then South Africa's bluff will have been called. The EPG's upcoming visit could be aimed at "trying to sift the bluff and double bluff from the truth." For while rumors of negotiation are in the air, the reality is different. The minister of law and order asked, after the ANC had sprung one its cadres from the hospital in a shootout, how South Africa could negotiate with such people.

'Ku Klux Klan' Action

The "Sullivan on Sunday" column on page 14 of THE SUNDAY STAR "Review" section says "a breath of wonderfully fresh air is blowing through the National Party's Cabinet room." "It is almost as if Ministers have been released from the strait jacket of that silly apartheid policy which made our politics mad for so many years." Noting Foreign Minister Pik Botha's statement on power-sharing and Education Minister Gerrit Viljoen's statement that he would be happy to have a black taking his place in the cabinet, the column says nevertheless "among all this good, clean and fresh wind in politics, there is a foul and evil stench. It is the emergence of Ku Klux Klan action in South Africa." "It makes much sense, this call by the people of Alexandra, for whites to go to the township to see the police in action at first hand, and to place themselves between the besieged community and the police and the army. What the people of Johannesburg should do is swap their homes with the people of Alexandra for just one week." "It would do wonders for understanding in this, Johannesburg's 100th year."

Lack of Business Confidence

Progressive Federal Party Member of Parliament Harry Schwarz, writing on the same page, says "after applying policies which reduced consumer demand and fixed investment expenditure, increased bankruptcies and created mass unemployment which fueled unrest, now the Government is expressing its concern that the much needed upswing in the economy is not showing adequate signs of life." The newly announced monetary growth targets mean little when the increase in the money supply is below the aggregate of the current rate of inflation and growth in the domestic product. "The reality is that the low level in increase in the money supply (particularly M3) is because there is little investor or consumer confidence." "And are we not forgetting that an important reason for the lack of business and consumer confidence is the continuing unrest?" "Whether we like it or not, politics and economics go hand in hand and nothing is worse than political instability." There is a lack of confidence and "confidence cannot be artifically created by juggling with interest rates or giving a few cosmetic tax concessions." "There must be a return to stability, internal unrest must be seen to be waning. This means, too, confidence that those who rule us have workable plans for long-term political solutions."

Zimbabwean Lessons for RSA

In his "Africa View" column on page 20 of the "Review" section, Gerald L'Ange says "ever since white rule in Rhodesia gave way to black rule in Zimbabwe, whites in South Africa have tended to look across the Limpopo for portents of what might lie ahead for them." Not everything they see will ease their fears — certainly not the latest statements by Prime Minister Mugabe reiterating his government's intention to scrap the parliamentary seats reserved for whites in the independence constitution. Mr Mugabe's obsession with achieving political uniformity in Zimbabwe is an approach popular among African governments trying to forge viable states out of the ethnic jumbles left by the colonial powers. The autocratic, one-party state appeals to African politicians as an effective tool for homogenizing the multiple tribes that inhabit most of the former colonies. "Because eliminating tribal differences is vital to this approach, it tends not to attach importance to protection of minorities. It is an approach supported by the African National Congress, which has called for a united, non-racial South Africa. The implication is that white South Africans need not worry about being discriminated against by a black majority government because it would be colour-blind." "As white South Africans look for a new political system reconciling their aspirations with those of the black majority they might find it difficult to accept they will not need special protection."

Political Deaths

"The death toll in political violence in South Africa reached 1,559 at the end of April, the South African Institute of Race Relations said in Johannesburg today," Johannesburg SUNDAY TIMES in English on 11 May reports on the first page of its "extra" section. "Whereas 149 people had been killed in the last four months of 1984, the figure for the first four months of 1986 was 531, the SAIRR said. The figure for 1985 as a whole was 879."

Memorandum on Squatting

On page 3 of the same section, the paper reports that a memorandum attached to the Abolition of Influx Control Bill says the government accepts that "freedom of movement to and in urban areas" should apply " 'on a non-discriminatory basis for citizens of the Republic of South Africa, taking into consideration the distinctive settlement circumstances of communities in the Republic.' " The Government said that its urbanization policy would not make distinctions based on race or color, that influx control and passbooks will be abolished and that "universal measures to combat nuisances such as disorderly squatting" will be more effectively enforced. The memorandum says that as some local authorities do not have the ability to handle squatting, the bill gives the state president the power to entrust the execution of the Squatting Act to any " 'particular authority or functionary' " within the jurisdiction of that local authority.

'Comrades' Mistake

A report on page 4 of the same section says that a Bophuthatswana man "was burned to death by 'comrades' who mistook him for his brother, a policeman." The "comrades" had been looking for the policeman for a long time but were afraid to attack him in the daytime because he might shoot. They therefore attempted to attack him when he was asleep but got his brother by mistake.

EPG Plan

An article by Political Correspondent Max Du Preez on page 2 of the regular newspaper discusses the initiative of the Eminent Persons Group [EPG] and says that "reports this week indicated that the ANC itself may be more amenable than before to giving the EPG initiative a chance. The fortnightly newspaper NEW NATION, edited by Mr Zwelakhe Sisulu, son of jailed ANC leader Walter Sisulu and a man highly regarded in ANC circles, reported on Friday that the ANC 'is considering a truce deal made by the EPG in a bid to halt the escalating violence.' " In Cape Town, "government sources indicated this week that the Cabinet had not yet defined its bottom line on the EPG proposals. In this respect, the role of the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, is likely to be crucial." Foreign Minister Pik Botha is the leader of the school that believes that everything must be done to keep the initiative alive. However, Cooperation and Development Minister Chris Heunis has taken a stand against foreign involvement in the negotiations.

Government Housing Plan

Norman West reports on the same page on the government's housing plan to cater to the influx of blacks to urban areas. "Part of the government's plan is to upgrade 120 black towns and to purchase large tracts of land to develop for black individual ownership."

Town Rebuffs President

Carolina, the eastern Transvaal town celebrating its centenary, "has rebuffed the State President by withdrawing its offer to grant him the Freedom of the Town," Nel Hooper reports on page 5. The president had already accepted the town's offer of the award. However, "members of the Conservative Party, assisted by a member of the National Party, outvoted the National Party-controlled town council, withdrawing the invitation because the State President 'is a political figure.' " According to the former town clerk who dealt with the problem, " 'basically it was a fight between the National Party and the Conservative Party. The Conservative Party won when a member of the National Party supported the motion to withdraw the invitation to President Botha.' "

Guns in Steelpoort

Allan Soule and Samkelo Kumalo report on page 7 that Steelpoort residents are demanding increased protection from the army because of raids by " 'radical communist agitators' who regularly cross the border on night-time sabotage sorties." There has been a dramatic increase in the number of unrest incidents in the past 4 months. One farmer, who said he knew his name was on a hit list, said: " 'We are still a part of the "old volk" and will not tolerate subversion in this area.' " Pointing to Lebowa, he said: " 'If they want war, its war they'll get.' " Another noted that three elderly people had been murdered and seven attacked. All able bodied men have been called to join a commando unit, but threats have been made to burn their farms while they are away at military training.

Stanger Goes Multi-Racial

"In a mere five minutes and without acrimony, an all-white town council this week took a quiet but historic step — it unanimously voted to become multiracial," Ticks Chetty reports on page 10 of the SUNDAY TIMES. Stanger, north of Durban, is awaiting provincial permission to go ahead. It would be the first South African town to be run by whites, blacks, coloreds and Indians. The idea was proposed by a Solidarity Party MP Yunus Moolla, who said: " 'It is my firm belief that no central government reform will succeed unless an acceptable solution is found at local government level. The government has been talking about granting people the right to exercise thier local option. So, if the government genuinely believes in this, it would give Stanger's proposal its wholehearted support.' "

'Mixing' Showdown

"Two Natal cities are heading for a clash with the Government — they want to open residential areas to all races," Denyse Armour reports on the same page. The Durban City Council's management committee resolved to ask the government to delegate to it the authority to decide on segregated areas and the Maritzburg City Council is investigating establishing a non-racial suburb near Scottsville. The area, formerly designated as a future industrial site, would be aimed at providing housing for the middle class. The vice chairman of the Durban City Council management committee said the country and city had been harmed by the " 'iniquitous' " Group Areas Act and that the government needed to be pointed squarely toward " 'dismantling this unjust machine.' "

Moderates on Campus

Stephan Terblanche reports on page 16 on the battle between moderate students and rightwing students at the University of Pretoria, where "moderates dealt the right a devastating blow this week when they forced the Tuks [University of Pretoria] Student Representative Council (SRC) executive committee to temporarily suspend the activities of the ultra-rightwing Afrikaner Studentefront (ASF) [Afrikaner Student Front] pending a decision on the ASF's total expulsion from the campus." This came 2 weeks after the launching of the moderate Youth Power Organization, which plans to hold meetings with the Inkatha Youth Brigade. Moderate students claim the rightwing students "have cleverly hijacked key organisations such as the SRC" and the rightwingers have been accused of launching a sex smear campaign against a moderate woman student leader, dragging a National Party student official from bed in early morning and leaving him handcuffed outside, organizing rowdy demonstrations, threatening moderate students with violence, manipulating Christian zealots, and destroying rival posters.

Growth of AWB

Max Du Preez reports on the same page that "the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging (AWB) [Afrikaner Resistance Movement] is enjoying a highly successful recruiting drive among whites — and succeeding in its efforts to hijack the Conservative Party. The AWB — some senior government sources believe — could soon prove to be a more serious threat to peace and stability in a new South Africa than revolutionaries of the left." Serious concern about the group is mounting in government and National Party [NP] circles. A government source said that the AWB has more than trebled its membership this year, and current strength is estimated at from 50,000 to 100,000. The NP thought the AWB would scare off conservatives. However, "NP leaders now agree that their approach to the AWB was wrong and that it actually served to further aid the movement." The NP is preparing for a showdown in Pietersburg on 22 May with a speech by Foreign Minister Pik Botha, who "has never failed to draw thousands of supporters and generate great enthusiasm with his open, tough approach." More seriously, the AWB reportedly has strong support among lower-ranking policeman, and the "AWB-SAP cross membership could be extremely dangerous in tense township situations."

SUNDAY TIMES on EPG Negotiation

The paper's editorial on page 18 says that "South Africa's salvation will come, if at all, by a hesitant process of act and omission, not as a quick fix from outside." Discussing the EPG's proposals for a compromise, the paper says that in the interest of those who have died or would otherwise die, "it is time for a breath of realism." The ANC's options are as narrow as the government's and failing to negotiate will keep it in the trenches for years. On its part, the government must "commit itself to some genuine horse-trading." Although the country's solutions will be crafted by South Africans, if the EPG "helps to open the smallest chink in the armour of suspicion its return this week should be welcomed. It could be a last chance for South Africans to help save themselves from themselves."

Chris Heunis Column

In the second in a series of articles, minister of constitutional Development and planning Chris Heunis writes on page 18 of the SUNDAY TIMES that "a serious programme for change in South Africa must not only provide a vision of a future South Africa — it must also answer the key question of why and how." A reform program must have analytical, prescriptive, and strategic elements. The government's main elements of its reform program are that all peoples form one nation but it is a nation of minorities, all must be able to participate in politics through elected representatives, all groups must have the right to manage their own affairs, domination of one group by another must be eliminated, a consensus on power-sharing is needed, respect for law must be maintained, and the integrity and freedom of country must be protected. He believes this can only be achieved through democratic methods using parliament and the National Council.

White Homeland

Tertium Mybrugh writes on page 19 that "the idea of a 'white homeland' may not, after all, be such a silly idea. It may, in the end, be the only way in which ultra-conservatives, afraid of change and therefore an obstacle to constitutional progress, can be parked out of the way while the rest of South Africa gets on with the business of constructing the post-apartheid society." In the past the type of people who have advocated the idea have made it disreputable. However, it is now quietly being given consideration by "serious observers." The idea is that if whites believe they are being painted into a corner and have no choice but to give into a multiracial society or fight, they will fight. Because of the destructive power of rightwing backlashes, "it might be expedient to provide them with a third choice: to opt out, even if only for the time being, so that they can have time to adapt to the reality that the world has changed around them." Although this may not be the most desirable course to follow, "given the scale of the problem, it is worth a thought."

ANC-NP Interests

David Willers writes on the same page that P.W. Botha and Oliver Tambo may find it in their own interests to make a deal at this time. Botha faces a serious challenge from the right and the young black youths are saying the ANC has become too middle class. Hence they both represent the "bourgeoisie" flanks of African-Afrikaner nationalism. A problem with the EPG deal is that the government is afraid that Mr Mandela's release will lead to such a sponteneous outburst that force will have to be used to restore order. In that event, Botha wants the West to pledge to resist calls for sanctions. Another problems is that the ANC and Pan-Africanist Congress [PAC] are saying they cannot agree to their unbanning without the unbanning of the South African Communist Party, which Mr Botha is unlikely to agree to do. Furthermore, the ANC does not want to be seen to be dealing with the PAC on equal terms. However, the EPG hopes that "like two old men (both are over 70) sitting on the stoop in the sun with a lifetime of quarrels behind them, the ANC and the National Party may soon be sharing tobacco from the pouch."

Stimulate Exports

Cees Bruggemans writes on page 12 of the paper's BUSINESS TIMES that South Africa cannot afford to follow a deflationary policy like West Germany because it has no developed social security infrastructure. Nor should it stimulate the economy across the board, as that would simply increase inflation, increase consumption, and increase imports. "We are simply exporting too much capital and too few goods. We do not notice that while the economy is kept in check." To increase exports, thereby earning more dollars, the state must "take the responsibility for setting up a framework within which reasonable risk and return relationships will initiate entrepreneurial projects," as private companies have been too timid to take the lead. The state should not pick the winners: the expertise for that is in the private section. "It can be harnessed through well-considered economic policies. The opportunity is now. Will somebody please grab it?"

Iran-Iraq War

Iranian forces "crushed" an Iraqi attack in the northern Hajj 'Umran area 14 May, killing 200 Iraqis and downing seven Iraqi helicopters. Iran announced in military statements reported by IRNA. Further south, Iranian warplanes launched raids on Iraqi armored vehicles in the Faqqeh sector 14 May, according to IRNA. An Iraqi communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio claimed that an Iranian F-4 was downed in the East Maysan sector 13 May, but an Iranian spokesman cited by IRNA "categorically" denied this claim, asserting that all Iranian planes returned safely from raids in the Faqqeh sector that day.

In Baghdad, Iraqi President Saddam Husayn met with visiting Jordanian King Husayn 13 May for talks that covered Iraq's "sound situation" in the face of the "criminal Iranian aggression," Baghdad radio reported. The two leaders also discussed bilateral relations and the Arab situation.

As for the Gulf, a Tehran radio commentary maintained that the U. S. statement of concern about attacks on shipping is designed to prepare the political ground for launching "aggressive contingency measures" against Iran.

Israel

Prime Minister Shim'on Peres, in an Independence Day interview with IDF radio, asserted that Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad has recently committed "cardinal mistakes." Asked about Syria's involvement in the 17 April attempt to blow up an El Al plane, Peres said the Syrians "have denied that this decision was made by the central government." A katyusha rocket attack hit the Galilee panhandle 13 May, injuring three people, Jerusalem radio reported, adding that security forces think the missiles were fired from an area outside Israel's security zone in southern Lebanon.

Libya

Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi stated in a 12 May speech carried by JANA that the Tokyo summit was a failure and that economic sanctions against Libya will rebound on the states which have imposed them. Sanctions provide Libya with an opportunity to end its economic dependence on the capitalist markets of Europe and Japan, to dispense with "false" consumer products, and to become self-sufficient in agricultural production, Al-Qadhdhafi maintained.

As for the row with Spain over alleged Libyan links with Spanish extreme right-wing elements, Tripoli radio said the Foreign Liaison Bureau summoned the Spanish ambassador to inform him of Libya's "absolute denial" of Spanish media reports on the issue. A commentary by JANA's political editor asserted that Spain has chosen to "fabricate" the story as a result of its "full partiality to the U.S. hostile stand." In another development affecting Libyan-Spanish relations, AFP noted that members of the "Call of Jesus" group held by the Spanish authorities have admitted receiving money and orders from the Libyan People's Bureau in Madrid.

In Havana, Libyan special envoy 'Ali Hudayri stated that his talks with the Cuban authorities will cover "measures that will allow us to confront North American terrorism," according to the Spanish agency EFE.

PLO, Jordan, and Egypt

Commenting on King Husayn's recent meeting with Egyptian President Husni Mubarak, Fatah deputy military commander Khalil al-Wazir told the UAE's AL-ITTIHAD that the Jordanian monarch rejected Mubarak's proposal to hold a Jordanian-PLO summit under Egyptian auspices, Radio Monte Carlo reported. The PLO has little hope of resuming political cooperation with Jordan soon, he asserted, but it is "premature" to say that Mubarak's mediation efforts have failed.

Qatar-Bahrain

Qatar has told civil airlines that it is prohibiting air traffic over areas of dispute with Bahrain, particularly Fasht al-Dibal island, Kuwait's AL-SIYASAH reported. The airline companies were informed that the changes in civil air routes are due to military air activities.

Pakistan-DRA

Pakistan lodged a strong protest with the DRA over a number of recent cross-border attacks by DRA forces that caused casualties inside Pakistan, Karachi radio reported. The protest concerned several recent air raids as well as a 13 May artillery attack that killed 14 people and wounded over 20 others in Kurram Agency.

As for the UN-sponsored Pakistani-Afghan indirect talks in Geneva, Karachi radio said progress is being made and more important issues are being discussed. A Pakistani spokesman cited by the radio noted that talks will be held on a timetable for withdrawal for foreign forces if a consensus is reached on the principles of the fourth instrument of the proposed comprehensive agreement.

PLO's Al-Wazir Says King Husayn Rejects Meeting

JN131517 Paris Radio Monte Carlo in Arabic 1500 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Khalil al-Wazir, also known as Abu Jihad, deputy commander in chief of the PLO forces, affirmed today in a statement to the UAE newspaper AL-ITTIHAD that King Husayn of Jordan rejected a proposal by Egyptian President Husni Mubarak in Aqaba last Sudany calling for a Jordanian-PLO summit under Egypt's supervision.

Sees 'Little Hope' of Resuming Ties

JN131833 Paris Radio Monte Carlo in Arabic 1730 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Abu Jihad [Khalil al-Wazir], deputy commander in chief of the Palestinian revolution forces, has asserted that King Husayn rejected a proposal to hold a Jordanian-PLO summit under Egyptian auspices. He said that President Mubarak made this proposal to the Jordanian monarch when the two met in Aqaba the day before yesterday.

In a statement to the UAE newspaper AL-ITTIHAD, the Palestinian official said that the PLO has little hope of resuming political cooperation with Jordan soon but that it is premature now to say that President Mubarak's efforts to effect a reconciliation between Jordan and Yasir 'Arafat have failed.

Abu Jihad held the United States and Israel responsible for the current rift between Jordan and the PLO, adding that the two states succeeded in placing the two sides on a deadend path.

Abu Jihad also said that Jordanian and Palestinian officials are doing their utmost to preserve their fraternal relations and avert the problems and reasons for tension that might arise from time to time.

USSR Responds 'Favorably' to 'Arafat Request

LD131306 Rabat MAP in English 1208 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Paris, May 13. (MAP) — Soviet leaders have favorably responded to a request by PLO chairman Yasir 'Arafat asking them to contribute to an inter-Palestinian reconciliation, affirmed a senior Palestinian official.

According to PLO representative to Romania, quoted by the Paris-based magazine KUL AL-ARAB, the last meeting between 'Arafat and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev ushers a new phase in the Mideast crisis. This meeting, he added, had crowned intensive Soviet-Palestinian talks, mainly those undertaken by head of PLO's Political Department Faruq Qaddumi.

The Palestinian official also pointed to a certain softening in Syrian attitude towards the PLO as a factor favoring such a reconciliation.

PNC Speaker on Algerian Role in Palestinian Unity

JN131826 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1715 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] PNC Speaker Shaykh 'Abd al-Hamid al-Sa'ih has praised Algeria's role in entrenching the unity of all the Palestinian groups under the leadership of the PLO. In a statement to AFP in Amman yesterday, he said that most of the Palestinian groups welcomed Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid's call last month in this regard.

Joint Resistance Forces Attack Israeli Positions

JN131818 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1715 GMT 13 May 86

The joint forces fired 107-mm katyusha rockets at another Zionist military position in the southern part of the western Al-Biqa' today. The rockets hit their targets accurately, killing and wounding many Zionist soldiers.

The joint forces also detonated remote-controlled explosive charges under a Zionist military patrol on the Dayr Mimas border road, destroying a military vehicle, damaging another, and either killing or wounding many soldiers.

Iranian-Libyan Policies 'Harm' Arab World

LD140857 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 0810 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, 14 May (KUNA) — The Kuwaiti paper AL-SIYASAH today calls on the Arabs to establish solidarity among themselves in the face of the Zionist enemy and his anti-Arab nation campaign, pointing out that the world sides with Israel "because we have harmed ourselves as a result of the actions of some stupid people among us: the stupid among the Muslims and the stupid among Arab politics."

The paper stresses the need to do all that is useful in the present time, through the realization of the will of the Arab peoples "for the rallying of its ranks away from all accursed and mad ideologies that are filled with thoughts of madness, raving, and slogans of immitation and non-realism." The Kuwaiti paper attacks the Iranian and Libyan policies, saying that these two policies have helped "harm" the Arab and Islamic worlds. The paper expresses its belief that the Iranian and Libyan policies have contributed to the campaign being launched by the West against the Arabs as a prelude to dealing a blow either to Syria or Libya.

Reagan's Veto Power Noted

GF140653 Riyadh Domestic Service in Arabic
0600 GMT 14 May 86

[From the press review]

[Text] Under the title "Reagan, Congress, and the Missiles Deal", the newspaper AL-NADWAH says editorially: His Highness Prince Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz has affirmed that the Kingdom will be free to take any action and to purchase arms from any country whatever and at any time, and that friendly West European countries will be an alternative from which the Kingdom will acquire its arms requirements if the U.S. missiles deal fails. This new affirmation by His Highness Prince Sultan came in a press interview published today, Wednesday, and follows his highness' statement last week in which he noted that U.S. President Reagan has the right of veto in order to confront the congressional stand in accordance with U.S. Constitution and laws. The Kingdom previously faced a similar situation years ago and was able to surmount it by a campaign in Congress to convince the congressmen and senators of the Kingdom's just stands.

Alternative Sources Mentioned

GF131500 Doha QNA in Arabic 1415 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] London, 13 May (QNA) — Prince Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz, Saudi second deputy prime minister, minister of defense and aviation, and inspector general, has said that friendly West European countries would be an alternative source from which his country could acquire its arms requirements if the U.S. missile deal fails. In a statement to the Saudi weekly AL-MAJALLAH to be published tomorrow, Wednesday, Prince Sultan said that his country is free to act and purchase arms from any country at any time. In a reply to a question concerning the strong opposition by the U.S. Congress to the missile deal, Prince Sultan stated that he was expecting such opposition in light of previous experience. He said that his country's government has high hopes in what he called the good administration of President Ronald Reagan for whom Saudi Arabia harbors every appreciation and hopes that he will be able to overcome this opposition. The Saudi minister added that Congress members may have their domestic reasons but they must understand that the kingdom's stand stems from its national interests.

King's Role in Bahrain-Qatar Dispute Praised

GF140819 Riyadh Domestic Service in Arabic
0600 GMT 14 May 86

[From the press review]

[Text] With God's grace and by virtue of the efforts of His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz, the transient crisis between fraternal Qatar and Bahrain has been contained. During a cabinet session, his majesty the king praised Qatar's and Bahrain's responsiveness which helped to establish positive stands concerning the border disagreement and acting together to find permanent and final solutions.

The newspaper AL-JAZIRAH comments editorially on the Kingdom's conciliatory role. It says: The Kingdom's role has always been and continues to be a conciliatory role proceeding from a constant conviction in Saudi political thinking, namely that all forms of old, new, and transient disputes between any two fraternal Arab parties are marginal disputes that do not affect the essence of eternal ties or exceed their diminutive size to harm joint Arab interest.

Second Part of Interview With UAE Oil Minister

PM131354 London AL-SHARQ AL-AWSAT in Arabic
9 May 86 p 4

[Second and last part of unattributed interview with UAE Petroleum and Mineral Resources Minister Dr Mani' Sa'id al-'Utaybah; date, place not given]

[Excerpts] Question: It is clear from the market movement that many OPEC member states are trying to market all their current production and are beginning to give discounts or incentives to make that possible. Some sources say that the UAE will soon announce new discounts in the oil prices for its customers. What is the real situation?

Answer: As long as there is no official price every state markets its products as it deems fit and at whatever prices it can get in the oil market. The UAE will market what it intends to produce at whatever prices it can get in the oil market. It is the market which determines the price. The same thing applies to the other producers.

Question: With the fall of prices to the 10 dollar level some oilfields in the United States, Canada, and the North Sea are out of production. Do you see that as having a positive effect on the oil market?

Answer: Estimates of the drop in the U.S. and Canadian production are exaggerated. The total loss of U.S. producers is no more than 65,000 barrels a day, which is insignificant bearing in mind the drop in prices to 10 dollars a barrel. The federal and local authorities in the United States are making great efforts to help the small producers by changing many laws. That has helped the producers to continue to produce despite the fact that oil prices are much lower than production costs. The U.S. authorities are also considering buying the products of these oilfields at prices close to production costs and putting these products in the strategic oil reserve. That is why we should be objective and frank and we should not exaggerate the achievements of the past 4 months of low oil prices. We should not imagine or delude ourselves that we have taken a bigger share from the non-OPEC producing states. We must realize that if we want to force thesestates to reduce their production levels then we must pursue that competition and keep the oil prices at very low levels for a longer period.

Question: Some circles link the relative rise in oil prices to the Chernobyl reactor fire in the Soviet Union. Do you agree?

Answer: Not at all. That is not true. The rise in prices is a temporary one. We would like it to be permanent and continuous, but that is wishful thinking. Actually the market is very sensitive. It is affected by any statment or political news. We do not believe that what happened to the nuclear reactor influenced the oil market or increased prices. What has influenced the prices in the past few days is the drop in U.S. reserves of oil products.

Question: How do you explain the split within OPEC reflected in the fact that there was a majority and a minority at the latest OPEC meeting and the fact that three states had reservations regarding the majority decision on fair quotas? How will this rejection affect OPEC's strength?

Answer: Differences of opinion among members are natural. They have existed since the foundation of OPEC, but we should accept the proverb that differences of opinion do not harm the cause. In fact there is wisdom in differences of opinion. What is important is that the majority view should prevail if we want our OPEC meetings to be democratic. That is what happened at the recent conference.

Question: The problem of quotas will certainly make itself strongly felt at the forthcoming Brioni conference. Have the member states held any consultations before they have to deal with this difficult problem at the conference?

Answer: Regrettably, so far no significant efforts have been made in preparation for important decisions at the Brioni meeting. So there is still a long way to go, and if we are to take important decisions there must first be a clear response from the non-OPEC producing states before the next step can come from OPEC. The ball is now in the court of the non-OPEC states. By that I do not mean the five states which have cooperated with us and which we fully appreciate. I am referring to the producers who have not come and who have not shown any willingness to cooperate with us.

Question: It was hoped that the Tokyo industrial summit would discuss world oil prices and production in an attempt to help stabilize the oil market, but the opposite happened and the oil problem took a back seat to the other political problems. What is your opinion?

Answer: We know that this issue lost its priority in the eyes of the industrial states. It might have taken priority if the situation were reversed, that is, if the oil prices were very high. Had that been the case the leaders of these states would have placed the issue at the top of their agenda. With the present collapse what would they discuss? I believe they expressed joy and happiness at the current low oil prices.

Saudi Clinches Egyptian-Israeli Arms Deal

NC140840 Beirut AL-SAFIR in Arabic 13 May p 9

[Text] Cairo, AL-SAFIR. Saudi businessman 'Adnan Khashaqji has intervened to clinch an Israeli-Egyptian deal which had been stymied by new obstacles.

The deal includes 60 "Gazelle" helicopters, which the Arab Organization for Military Industrialization produces in Egypt in cooperation with France. The deal also includes a number of army personnel carriers, armored cars, medium-range cannons, mortar guns, 20,000 semi-automatic rifles, and 12,000 machineguns.

Israel had wanted to buy these weapons from the Arab Organization, but its request was turned down. The organization based its refusal on the fact that a portion of its capital includes Arab investments and that a deal with Israel would close Arab markets for its products. Israel then suggested that the Egyptian Government should buy these weapons from the Industrialization Organization and sell them to Israel.

Khashaqji acted as the middleman in this deal. He bought the weapons from the Egyptian Government, which had purchased them from the organization. He then sold them to Israel.

AL-SAFIR has learned that the consignment was shipped from the Al-Adabiyah Port south of Suez on the Red Sea last Tuesday. Small ships were used to transfer the weapons to Greek ships on the high seas. The Greek ships then sailed to the Israeli port of Elat.

According to Egyptian security sources, the weapons, with the exception of the Gazelle helicopters, were reconsigned from Elat to an African port, which the sources did not name.

Cairo Magazine Interviews Egyptian Economy Minister

PM131914 Cairo MAYU in Arabic 5 May 86 p 16

[Interview with Egyptian Minister of Economy Dr Sultan Abu 'Ali by Sana' al-Sa'id in Cairo; date not given]

[Excerpts] Question: Is it possible, within the context of the call to reform the economy, to implement a comprehensive economic program similar to the Marshall plan which the United States carried out in Europe and Japan after World War II and which the major industrial states would finance?

Answer: There is nothing new in bringing up the question of the Marshall plan once again; the late President Anwar al-Sadat had come up with this idea before. Indeed there must be greater international cooperation so that there will some kind of international social justice and sharing in the benefits at the international level. We should not forget that when the first and second oil revolutions occurred in the early seventies the Arab oil countries offered about 5 percent of their annual revenues as aid to the developing countries in Asia, Africa, and Latin America. This represents the highest level ever of any aid given by the industrial states to the developing countries despite the fact that the standard of living in the developed countries is much higher than it is in the Arab countries. Therefore with the present drop in oil prices to approximately half the previous level in less than 6 months and in view of the profit, surplus, and benefit gained by the developed countries, especially the European countries and Japan — a surplus estimated at 120 billion dollars — an attempt at least should be made to strengthen the world economy by giving real aid to the area in order to help development. There is no doubt that this would be in the interest of the developed countries as well, particularly since they are suffering from recession. The aid they would give would increase demand for their exports and provide work for their factories and the various means of production in them. The result of all this would benefit the whole world.

Question: This means that you favor the project despite the fact that some people have expressed doubts about it on the grounds that the one who recently proposed it was Shimon Peres and, therefore, the benefit would primarily be for Israel and not for the countries of the area.

Answer: As I said to you, the idea is not new since the late President al-Sadat proposed it before. For this reason I wonder how it could be at the expense of the Arabs or against their interest if it is carried out. Before making any judgements we should first resort to reason. The UN international development contract has called for an increase in the aid provided by the industrial states to 0.7 percent of these countries' national income. Unfortunately the flow of aid has decreased rather than increased. At present it is less than 0.3 percent. Therefore, increasing aid is a necessity and a right for all the world to enjoy, including the developing countries.

Question: If the proposal is actually carried out will it save the Egyptian economy in its entirety?

Answer: I believe that the Egyptian economy has many inherent potentials and resources on which we must rely primarily. Nevertheless, providing tangible aid is bound to improve the situation and make it more manageable.

Question: Is it in any way easy to ensure that the United States will increase its aid to us despite the apparent deficit in its budget which might compel it to reduce its foreign aid?

Answer: The United States has begun reducing aid for 1986-1987 by approximately 4.03 percent. It appears that this is the prevailing trend. For this reason I say that in the long term we must rely on the Egyptian economy and its potentials. As President Mubarak says, only the Egyptians can build Egypt. Egypt cannot live on aid forever. We welcome aid and we welcome increases in it, but we must take into consideration the fact that every country that gives aid has its own internal circumstances and is governed by restrictions and rules. There is a close cooperation between us and the United States and so we hope that the aid given to us will not be adversely affected or reduced in the coming few years during which we have increasing obligations. Within the framework of cooperation we hope that the aid will continue and will increase. We are encouraged by what Mr Peter McPherson, USAID Director, said recently — that the Congress will ask that aid to Egypt should not be reduced. However, we should develop the Egyptian economy and the Egyptian people must make a greater contribution so that self-reliance will be the mainstay.

Question: Libya has caused an economic problem for Egypt by dispensing with the services of some Egyptian workers. With the drop in oil revenues in the Arab oil countries are you aware of the number of workers that will be dispensed with?

Answer: We are following the current developments in the area and understand the conditions that govern the behavior of every state. Every state has a sovereign right to manage its economy; this is an undeniable right. We too exercise sovereign rights to deal with our economic conditions.

Question: Does this mean that you do not know the exact number of workers that will be dispensed with by the Arab countries?

Answer: There are no precise data. The decision on the number of those whose services will be dispensed with is based on the prevailing conditions. So far we do not know whether the drop in oil prices is a temporary or permanent factor in this regard. There is also the Iraq-Iran war, the question of reconstruction, and the need for manpower. Saudi Arabia, for example, announced that it will dispense with the services of 600,000 foreign workers; part of those will be Egyptians. If we estimate the number of Egyptians working abroad to be 2 to 3 million workers, the number of those estimated to return will be about half a million. Their return will have a positive aspect in that they will meet the shortage we are suffering from in agriculture and in some of the skills. This would increase production. As for the negative aspect of their return, it would be a reduction in remittances, but this can be offset by local production.

Question: Your visit to Moscow at the end of March was mainly an attempt to reschedule the military debts, which are estimated at 3 billion dollars.

Answer: This is not true. My recent visit to the Soviet Union was not specially for this purpose. Rather it was within the framework of economic and trade cooperation, including debts.

Question: What was the actual situation you agreed upon with the Soviet Union? Is it true that the Soviet Union has refused to reschedule the debts?

Answer: This matter was discussed within the context of the economic and trade relations between us, relations which continued to exist even during the freeze in diplomatic relations between the two countries. These relations have been reactivated after several rounds of negotiations and exchanges of views. The recent meeting was agreed upon at the meeting held in Cairo in July 1985. The March negotiations were a new round of talks that included the questions of the trade protocol, economic cooperation, and debts. As for the amount of debts, it is estimated at 2.04 billion rubles. But at the same time we have an accumulated credit in the trade account estimated at 1 billion rubles. Therefore, there are interrelated and interlinked issues. The Soviet Union put forward certain proposals and so did Egypt; these are being studied by both countries. The time has not yet come to reveal the details. It is agreed that a Soviet economic and trade delegation will come to Egypt. A date for the visit is to be fixed soon so that a fresh round of talks can be held.

[Text] In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. The tremendous efforts that our people have exerted throughout the years of the revolution under their wise leadership are now bearing fruit, thanks to our striking force that protects Iraq and humiliates its enemies in all fields of combat.

The following is a roundup of operations for last night and today:

1. We have ascertained that during the triumphant offensive launched by the IV Army Corps sector east of Maysan against enemy positions opposite our forces on 9 May, the enemy lost the following to the Al-Rafidayn Forces: 1,584 killed and the destruction of 26 tanks, 8 106-mm guns, 10 heavy-caliber (Dimitrov) machineguns, 4 medium-caliber machineguns, 17 vehicles, and 21 ammunition dumps.

In the same sector, two enemy F-4 planes attempted to penetrate our international border at 1340 [0940 GMT] today, but our air defenses intercepted them and shot down one plane which was seen falling in flames in front of our forces on the enemy side. The other fled.

Our units also destroyed one infantry position, killing its occupants; one 106-mm gun; one vehicle; and one observation post.

God bless the faithful men of the IV Army Corps.

Our units opened heavy fire on enemy positions opposite them in the VII Army Corps sector and destroyed one excavator, three infantry positions, three ammunition dumps, and one medium-caliber machinegun. They also destroyed one machinegun, killing those manning it, and damaged one grader. A vehicle was also destroyed.

[Excerpt] O proud Iraqis, your V Army Corps which you have known to be a flow of fire to purge our land from the vileness of the enemies and a comrade of the zenith, mounting the mountain peaks over the enemies' corpses, plentiful in courage, flowing in determination and sacrifice, has today achieved a new great victory. It plunges a deadly spear into the enemy's side, and restores to the beloved homeland proud peaks, whose place is in the heart, and which are located at the northeastern gateway in order to block in the face of the enemies and the enemies' agents a door which their black dreams have long been to turn it into an opening for their greed and sabotage. It is the (Gardamand) Peak, O Iraqis, whose importance you know and realize its effect on the arena of operations. It is the (Gardamand) Peak which embraces the clouds and overlook Haj 'Umran basin on our northeastern borders. It is a peak which completely guarantees our country's and forces' security in that region.

By virtue of the wise directions of the leader of victory, the great Saddam Husayn, and the efforts and determination of men, it has returned to you, O proud Iraqis. Your strong, valiant soldiers are now on top of it, planting Iraq's flag there. It has returned to the embrace of the homeland, proud of men who have scaled its heights and liberated them.

Death moved forth and flowed before them to your enemies, O Iraq. With support from our mighty, heroic artillery and our gigantic Air Force, and the valiant Army's air power, and in an arduous, hard battle, in which the determination of men was evident as they carried the love of the people, land, and leader, our sons embraced the heights to liberate the (Gardamand) Peak, and to liberate with it the peaks of (Godo) and (Garnagu) at the same time and with a mighty effort which will remain a cause of pride for our Army for all time.

Our enemies were turned into torn corpses and fleeing remnants. Large numbers of them were taken prisoner by our forces. The situation on the mountains was settled completely in favor of Al-Rafidayn soldiers.

Congratulations to you on your splendid victory, O proud Iraqis. From your Army, you have a promise of men that the fate of the enemies in any inch of the homeland which they desecrate will be more bitter and cruel. A homeland which is led by Saddam Husayn, and which comprises such a manner of men, will remain dear, secure, free, and proud in spite of the enemy. Long live the great people! Long live the inspired leader! Long live the heroic Army! God is great! Death to your enemies, O Iraq!

Crude Oil Imports Increase, Cost Reduced

JN100922 Amman AL-DUSTUR in Arabic

[Text] Amman — AL-DUSTUR — A report issued by the Energy and Mineral Resources Ministry shows that Jordan's oil imports from Iraq constituted one-third of Jordan's overall crude oil imports during 1985.

The report shows that the overall cost of Jordan's energy imports reached $603 million in 1985, while in 1984 it was $612 million.

The report adds that despite the increase in the quantity of imported crude oil by 4.5 percent, the cost was reduced by 1.5 percent because the price of crude oil dropped by a dollar for each barrel. Meanwhile, the ministry also continued to import heavy oil.

Hizballah Justifies Kidnapping of Americans, French

NC131240 Paris AFP in English 1232 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Beirut, May 13 (AFP) — Hizballah, the pro-Iranian Party of God, on Tuesday condemned the fresh wave of kidnapping of Lebanese nationals in West Beirut, but said the taking of French and American hostages was justified in view of "specific circumstances." In a statement published by the press, the Islamic fundamentalist group said kidnapping was to be condemned, especially when it concerned civilians such as doctors and academics.

It was a reference to a series of recent abductions of teachers in the predominantly Moslem western sector of the capital. The kidnapping last Wednesday of a Christian academic at the American University, Nabil Matar, sparked off an indefinite strike by teachers and students at the college, once the most prestigious in the Middle East.

"His abductors are not true Moslems, but cheap mercenaries or agents of intelligence services hostile to the Islamic situation", the statement from Hizballah said. In contrast, it said, "we have not condemned the kidnapping of Americans or French because these abductions took place in specific circumstances, whereby the United States and France attempted to drive the oppressed up against the wall, take away their freedom and their right to determine their future."

"This situation left them no other choice than these means, to which we have found justification," it said. "Our position in this affair does not imply that we approve of the blind kidnappings which have taken place recently in West Beirut, whether they involved a retired Frenchman, a teacher, a doctor, a journalist, or a Lebanese or foreign student," the statement concluded.

Nine French nationals, five Americans, and Irish teacher and two Cypriot students are still on the list of missing persons in Lebanon, believed to be hostages of the Islamic Jihad Organisation. Two British language teachers and a U.S. librarian last month were found shot dead, in apparent retaliation for the April 15 U.S. raid on Libya.

[Text] The expanded Christian meeting, which was held at the headquarters of the National Liberal Party this evening, ended at 2115. Speaking on behalf of the conferees, Deputy Khatchik Babikian said that the other Christian parties, which did not attend today's meeting, will participate in the study and preparation of a Lebanese peace plan, which is now being formulated. Deputy Babikian said that the plan will propose a national solution that will be put before the various Christian parties and will then be proposed to the Muslim parties. He added that there was almost complete agreement on the theories and commitment to a future concept that will ensure the interests of the Lebanese and end the state of war in Lebanon.

Replying to a question, Deputy Babikian said: This is a plan that is being proposed by the Christian side. The plan contains a national solution, and we are working to achieve a formula that will crystallize the Christian concept and then the Lebanese national concept, both Christian and Muslim. I believe that the matter is clear and does not need any further explanation.

Foreign Minister Denies Role in Terrrorism

[Telephone interview with Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar' in Damascus by AL-QABAS correspondent in Bonn 'Adil Ilyas, published in AL-QABAS in conjuction with DER SPIEGEL — date not given]

[Excerpt][Ilyas] Your Excellency, West Europe, especially West Germany, is full of rumors and bad news about Syria.

[Al-Shar'] Well, first tell us about this campaign.

[Ilyas] We want to know from you. Why is this campaign being waged? Our first question is: Do the Syrian authorities or any official Syrian organ know the Jordanians who are being detained in prisons in West Berlin for interrogation? Do you have any role in any terrorist operation?

[Al-Shar'] We have affirmed more than once that Syria has no connection with terrorism. The Syrian Embassy in Berlin also confirmed the same thing and denied any connection with the issue. We were surprised by the statement issued by the judicial spokesman in West Berlin on the involvement of the Syrian Embassy in this case.

[Ilyas] But the German authorities say that the accused confessed that they received the bomb which was hurled at the Arab-German Friendship Society Center from the Syrian Embassy in East Berlin.

[Al-Shar'] This is absolutely not true. The embassy has no connection with the issue. We are basically surprised by such an act against this center. If it is true that two people are involved in this operation then they are connected with parties that are hostile to Syria.

[Ilyas] What are these hostile parties? We want to know them.

[Al-Shar'] I cannot specify now, because investigations which are continuing in Germany are supposed to reveal what I am saying. As for us, we have officially made a request to the FRG Government to participate in the investigations to discover the facts of these false allegations.

[Ilyas] You summoned the FRG ambassador to the Foreign Ministry in Damascus late in the night several days ago and asked him to convey an important message to his government in Bonn. What did you say to him and what did the message contain?

[Al-Shar'] I told him the same thing that I have just told you. In brief, we said in the message that we denounce these allegations and that we wanted to take part in the investigations.

[Ilyas] Why do you want to take part in the investigations? Does this mean that you do not trust the German authorities who are handling the investigations?

[Al-Shar'] We demanded participation in the investigations because we have a lot of suspicions that some forces and parties hostile to Syria are behind this accusation.

[Ilyas] We still do not know what you mean by parties that are hostile to Syria. Do you mean the United States or Israel or both of them?

[Al-Shar'] You certainly know that the current Israeli-U.S. campaign against Syria is aimed at intimidating Syria and at using combating terrorism, which we condemn, as a pretext to attack Damascus and to launch an aggression against Syria. Several statements have been issued by U.S. and Israeli officials in this direction.

[Ilyas] The summit of the industrial countries in Tokyo referred to Libyan involvement in terrorism and did not mention Syria.

[Al-Shar'] Excuse me, we are not speaking about statements in which Syria was not mentioned. We are speaking about open U.S. and Israeli statements. These statements are aimed at intimidating and panicking Syria. We would like to affirm that we in Syria will not submit to terrorism and that we will resist any aggressive act against us. We in Syria have repeatedly condemned all forms of terrorism, especially against civilians. We in Syria have suffered and are still suffering from the issue of terrorism.

[Ilyas] I think you mean the bombs that exploded in Syria recently and victimized many people.

[Al-Shar'] Yes, this is what I mean.

[Ilyas] Who was behind these bombs?

[Al-Shar'] The Israeli intelligence service. I want to affirm that using the slogan of combating terrorism to threaten sovereign states, especially Syria, in this stage is well known. Our people know well that the United States and Israel are preparing for aggression by mobilizing and misleading Western public opinion through allegations and claims that Syria is involved in the terrorist acts that are currently being carried out in some West European countries. While categorically denying these claims we believe that these statements represent one of the forms of terrorism directed against the countries which are pursuing policies that do not please the United States and Israel.

[Ilyas] Do you expect a U.S. strike on Syria? Where?

[Al-Shar'] Honestly speaking, our confidence in our people, Armed Forces, principled positions, intrinsic potential, our Arab nation, and our friends all over the world provides us with the ability to repel any aggression. We will cause a very big defeat for the aggressors. We do not rule out that with the help of the United States Israel will launch an aggression against Syria. It should be made clear that Israel has created and established terrorism in the Middle East region, because it is a country that is based on terrorism. Leaders of known terrorist and criminal Zionist organizations are still on top of political and state authority in Israel.

[Ilyas] There is no doubt that you mean the enemy's foreign minister, Shamir? Isn't that true?

[Al-Shar'] Yes. From among all countries of the world, the United States has exercised state and declared terrorism. Several documents have revealed the role of the U.S. CIA in terrorist operations against some Third World countries. Israel and the United States are the last countries in the world which have the right to claim that they want to combat terrorism. There are many ways to combat terrorism. Syria has expressed its readiness more than once to participate in a joint action in this direction and has exerted considerable efforts to combat all acts of terrorism against the lives of innocent civilians. However, we say that national resistance against occupation is a legitimate resistance and is not a terrorist one. Resistance should continue only against foreign occupation forces.

[Ilyas] But Syria is accused of housing extremist organizations such as the Abu Nidal [Sabri al-Banna] group and the group of the so-called Islamic Jihad which is supported by Iran and stationed in Al-Biqa' under the control and supervision of the Syrian Army. Syria is accused of being responsible for the terrorist acts and operations of these groups.

[Al-Shar'] The Syrian Army cannot be responsible for these terrorist operations. There are groups of individuals exercising terrorism and violence in various parts of the world who are not necessarily backed by states. I can give you several examples: Baader-Meinhof in West Germany, the Red Brigades in Italy, the Action Directe in France, the Red Army in Japan, and so forth. Tell me what countries are backing these organizations? It is not necessarily the case that there are countries backing and supporting these terrorist organizations. As I said, Israel and the United States want to usurp the legitimate national rights of the Palestinian people and want to maintain the Israeli occupation of the West Bank, Gaza Strip, Golan, and southern Lebanon. They are using the slogan of combating terrorism to maintain this Israeli occupation and to subjugate the Arabs forever so that they will not demand Israeli withdrawal from the occupied Arab territories. This is the Israeli-U.S. objective.

TISHRIN Examines Defense of Security, Desire for Peace

JN100752 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic

[From the press review]

[Text] Under the headline "Syria is Special," TISHRIN says: The security of Syrian citizens is an organic part of the security of Syria and this homeland which has never failed to pay the tax of pan-Arab duty in the form of blood, sacrifice, and heavy burdens and tasks. Like the security of this homeland, the security of the Syrian citizen is special. No one will be allowed to prejudice or undermine this security. The good, generous Syrian people are enduring a great deal for the sake of their nation's cause and future and are paying the tax of steadfastness and challenge with full courage.

The Syrian people are ready for what is demanded by Syria's lofty pan-Arab stand in order to hold the Arab head high and to provide the means for the battle with the Israeli enemy. This is to preserve the honor of the homeland and the Arab nation, which considers Syria the only savior and hope for overcoming the state of disintegration and coercion being experienced by our great homeland.

The paper adds: The Syrian people are the entire homeland, with its lofty stands, steadfastness, sacrifices, developed military structure, and legitimate ambition to achieve strategic parity. No one on earth, whether a state, a regime, or an organization, has the right to tamper with Syrian security. Those behind such a hand will be hanged. We will seize all the engineers and perpetrators of the crime so that the citizen's security will be a part of the security of this proud homeland, which will raise its nation's head high. No one can curb Syria's loftiness and pan-Arab chivalry.

Desire for Mideast Peace Emphasized

JN140702 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic

[Press review]

[Excerpt] Under the headline "War and Peace," TISHRIN says: The Tel Aviv leaders are day and night reiterating that Israel does not wish to launch an aggression against Syria and that the Syrians are trying to drag it into launching such an aggression. The Israeli leaders have reiterated these words several times and their media are repeating them tirelessly everyday. If the Israeli leaders are really avoiding a war in the region why are they screaming threats against Syria? If Israel really wants peace why is it rejecting the road that leads to a real peace in the region represented by an international conference comprising all parties, in addition to the United States and the Soviet Union, under UN aegis?

Syria has emphasized its desire for a just and comprehenisve peace in the Middle East. It expressed its definite desire for such a peace by accepting the notion of holding an international conference. However, the U.S. and Israeli rejection of this notion affirms the incredibility of their stands, further alienates the chances of peace, increases tension in the region, and keeps it under the shadow of war despite the repeated Israeli peace statements. Syria is seeking a just and real peace that restores rights to their owners. However, Syria's desire for peace should not be interpreted as weakness or a gap through which capitulation can be imposed on Syria and the Arab nation. In as much as Syria is seeking peace, it stands solidly against the hegemonic and capitulatory schemes and attempts to liquidate the Arab cause. Syria will continue to work for peace until it is attained. In the meantime, it will continue to bolster its own capabilities in order to confront all and the most difficult eventualities. Syria will be able to defend itself well in case it is exposed to any aggression and will inflict unexpected losses on the enemies.

Peres Discusses Syria, El Al Incident, W. Bank

'Not Sure' Syria Seeking Confrontation

TA131920 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew 1500 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] In recent diplomatic exchanges, Syria argued that its involvement in the attempt to blow up the El Al plane was not authorized by President al-Asad and the central administration in Damascus. This was disclosed by Prime Minister Shim'on Peres in a special interview to IDF Radio on the occasion of Independence Day. The prime minister disclosed that Israel had conveyed to Damascus, through the United States, messages relaying its dissatisfaction with the Syrian Army's movement southward in the Lebanese Al-Biqa' area.

[Begin recording] [Peres] I am honestly not sure that at the moment Syria is seeking to engage in a confrontation with Israel. It is sometimes difficult to fathom the Syrian moves or their motives, including its encroachment. What happens is that an encroachment that to us seems like a major operation [last word in English] might appear to them to be a routine matter, or deployment that is far less sensational than we think. There is always a danger of conducting a dialogue among the deaf, of misinterpreting things, or of giving them excessive weight.

[Commander Nahman Shay] In other words, merely winking at each other is not enough.

[Peres] Certainly not, which is also why we are not making do with that. But the distance from winking to the wielding of clubs should allow time to elapse thereby making it possible for the parties to consider things.

[Correspondent 'Oz Frankel] You intimated that perhaps Al-Asad is not in control of things in Syria. But, as you said, we have always praised him while here he appears to have taken a step that seems nearly crazy: He tried to blow up an aircraft with 400 passengers on board.

[Peres] I think he controls things in Syria, but I do not think he is doing so correctly. I believe that he has indeed committed cardinal [last word in English] mistakes recently.

[Frankel] How do you explain the attempt to hit the El Al plane? Is this some sort of reaction to the interception of the Libyan aircraft a few months ago?

[Peres] The Syrians have denied that this decision was made by the central government. We tend to believe that it was not a mere coincidence, but that they may have misjudged the act and its possible outcome. At any rate, I am not an advocate of Syria. [End recording]

Later in the same interview, the prime minister noted that he has reservations about the portion in the State Comptroller's report dealing with the purchase of an energy-producing nuclear reactor. On another matter, Peres said he would be happy to work with 'Ezer Weizman in the Foreign Ministry after the rotation.

Al-Asad 'Leader of Terrorism'

TA131256 Tel Aviv HADASHOT in Hebrew 13 May 86 pp 12, 13

[Interview with Prime Minister Shim'on Peres by Sarit Yishay-Levi, Dan Ben-Amotz, Tzvi Gilat, and Ilan Kfir on 9 May in Peres' Jerusalem office, entitled: "On Sectarianism, Faith, and Arabs"]

[Excerpts] Kfir: According to your political foresight, will the West Bank still be in our hands in the year 2000?

Peres: Look, there is more than one solution to this issue. This is something on which I am not going to make predictions. I am not a prophet. One of the solutions may be a federation. This type of solution might be easier for all sides to accept than a territorial solution. It would include division of rule and a partnership. I am not prepared to predict which approach will serve as a solution to the dispute.

Gilat: Can a solution be reached without talking to the PLO?

Peres: I would phrase that differently. I do not believe a solution can be attained with the PLO. To date one Arab leader has spent a year trying to conduct negotiations with the PLO and thought he had achieved an understanding, but in the end he got up and said it is impossible to conclude a deal with 'Arafat. I would say that a solution cannot be attained without the Palestinians. But the PLO, in my opinion, is still the greatest obstacle on the road to peace.

Ben-Amotz: But if the Palestinians, in democratic voting, decide that the PLO represents them, will you accept this?

Peres: Yes. But for free elections there must be an end to the shooting, because if every moderate Arab who runs for election gets a bullet in his head, there will be no elections. I know that you like Damon Runyan's stories: A bunch of guys are sitting and playing with unmarked dice. One of them gets up and says: "How will we know who wins?" Then one takes out a gun and says: "Go on playing, and I will tell you." I do not see that as democracy.

Yishay-Levi: Are you opposed to meetings between Israeli citizens and PLO members?

Peres: Yes. I think that gives the PLO power and brings nothing in return. It is public relations for the PLO.

Yishay-Levi: Do you favor putting Israelis who meet with PLO members on trial?

Peres: In general, in any democratic country, anyone who speaks with the enemy must be given approval to do so. If he is not given approval he is put on trial. This involves not only the PLO, but all the countries that are in a state of war with Israel. For example, Uri Avneri wanted to go to Jordan. I said: Go. Therefore, anyone who wants to speak with an organization that has declared war on Israel must ask for permission from the institutions authorized to give it.

Kfir: Are you disappointed with the fact that for 18 months King Husayn has not made the moves you anticipated?

Peres: I am not disappointed. I know that anybody who sets out on a journey has to be prepared for difficulties, for disappointments. And I am not disappointed by the fact that Husayn has announced that nothing can be done without him. I do not think Jordan is a partner in the PLO's war of terrorism, on the contrary. This is one of the things on which we have reached agreement with Jordan. I think that the approach to Israel has changed, not only inside Israel, but throughout the Middle East. It has not been typical for Arab leaders to speak about Israel and Israeli leaders with respect. I think that the approach includes both violence and its opposite, moderation.

Ben-Amotz: After your meetings with Husayn does he appear to you to be more courageous and wise now?

Peres: If you would only excuse me from the need to draw conclusions from meetings that nobody has said have occurred, I would say that Husayn, in my opinion, is remarkably sincere. He is a serious leader. He is also under abnormal pressure. The war between the Iraqis and the Iranians is a genuine danger to the existence of his country. He has his own worries.

Kfir: In you opinion, is personal terrorism deterring him?

Peres: A man who has suffered from personal terrorism is more aware of the matter and more deterred by it. His book, which is entitled A Head on One's Shoulders, shows that he is living very uneasily.

Kfir: Does it appear to you that the success of [word omitted in text] has averted wars to which we might have been exposed over the past year or 2?

Peres: Look, one of the problems I have in my post is to avoid turning into an egocentric man. You are constantly asking me personally, as though I were some sort of Hercules who stands up and does everything. I believe I am contributing my share toward preventing war.

Kfir: Have we faced any situation over the past 2 years that could have deteriorated into war?

Peres: There is always that danger. Take, for example, the current exchanges of words with Syria: another, and yet another, and yet another statement, and another statement. Suddenly you find yourself at war.

Kfir: What is your message to Al-Asad, in view of his warlike statements?

Peres: First of all, I say to him: Dear Friend, if you do not want to get into some sort of clash, deescalate your statements. We are sending him messages of this type. For instance, there was the matter of the missiles in Lebanon and the fact that the missiles were removed from Lebanon. The introduction of the missiles into Lebanon was something we were concerned about. Altogether, it is very difficult to work out the thinking of one man. There is no Syria. There is Al-Asad, and he is one man who holds all his cards close to his chest.

Ben-Amotz: Are you saddened by his meeting with Husayn?

Peres: No.

Yishay-Levi: Would you like to meet with him?

Peres: I am not too sure about that. This is because I think that what characterizes Al-Asad is that, from the strategic viewpoint, he is the most extreme of all of them. From the tactical viewpoint he is the most moderate of them all.

Yishal-Levi: As his rival, are you not interested in meeting with him?

Peres: It interests me. Altogether, I am in favor of meeting with them all. I would certainly meet with him.

Yishay-Levi: Because of your personality you met with Husayn and a dialogue was created. Another prime minister will replace you and perhaps the same chemistry that you had with Husayn will not work.

Peres: Let us say that everything you said is correct, I did not say it is correct.

Yishay-Levi: Do you not have a feeling that you are wasting your time, that nothing will come out of this?

Peres: Look, I am acting in accordance with a mandate. I was given a limited mandate and this is part of the limitations.

Kfir: In your opinion, is Al-Asad heading terrorism, together with Al-Qadhdhafi?

Peres: I think so. Al-Asad is much more of a ruler than Al-Qadhdhafi. He will now try to get out of the net he has spread under his own feet. He is now beginning to understand that terrorism brings with it a punishment. Up to now there has been a situation allowing for terrorism without punishment. When he smells the odor of punishment, I guarantee you that he will get out of this business. Therefore pressure must be put on him to stop being one of the leaders of terrorism. That is what the Americans are doing. Apart from that, I have no leanings toward competing with Reagan. Reagan has already warned him.

Gilat: Up to now Israel has always followed a policy of retaliation. Does what you say mean that the retaliation policy has failed so far? Until U.S. intervention?

Peres: No. I will not deny that there are things the Americans can do and Israel cannot do. The United States can use economic pressure. It can use the European countries. I admit that retaliatory actions alone are not sufficiently effective.

Kfir: Cyprus is about to release the three assassins.

Peres: That is a scandal. At this stage we must warn everyone possible, Cyprus and its friends.

Yishay-Levi: If Waldheim is elected president of Austria, should we lower the level of diplomatic relations with Austria?

Peres: In my view, we must first of all make sure of the facts. A country cannot permit itself the luxury of writing articles. A country must stick to firm, confirmed ground. And therefore, before there is any talk about what the reaction will be, we must clarify just what the issue is. For these reasons I asked the Ministry of Justice, our minister of justice, to examine just what the material is that we have at our disposal, what confirmed conclusions can be drawn from this material, and only after that will we react. We must not begin first of all with a reaction and afterwards grasp the facts.

Chief of Staff Views Syrian Moves, IDF Manpower

TA140523 Jerusalem Television Service in Hebrew 1900 GMT 13 May 86

[Interview with Chief of Staff Lieutenant General Moshe Levi by Army affairs correspondent Moshe Shlonsky, in the chief of staff's office — live]

[Text] [Shlonsky] Mr Chief of Staff, good evening and happy Independence Day.

[Levi] Good evening and happy holiday. I would like to take the opportunity given to me to send greetings to all the people of Israel and the IDF and wish us all a happy holiday. I would like all of us today to share a feeling of pride for achievements we have scored, and a proper appreciation for the efforts that have been required and will be required in the future to preserve these achievements.

[Shlonsky] Is there any news regarding the two soldiers who are missing in Lebanon?

[Levi] Unfortunately, we have no substantial news. We try to track down all the soldiers that are missing, we have engaged in contacts about them. We examine evidence and search for them, but regretfully I have no information. It would have given me great pleasure, if not tonight, at any moment to sound the good word that we have resolved the problem of the missing soldiers.

[Shlonsky] The question of the Syrian entrenchment in the Lebanese Al-Biqa' has again made headlines over the past 24 hours. How do you regard this activity: Is it grave?

[Levi] The issue was raised because the media broached it over the past 24 hours. One must understand that the Syrians are carrying out activity. They are building up their forces and have employed a series of moves to improve their situation vis-a-vis Israel. We have been monitoring these steps and we react appropriately, although we do not always provide a military answer to their moves. After all, not every step warrants an immediate military development. This is how I view this developemnt on the Syrian side. They are preparing a better infrastructure for their deployment, and we are cognizant of the implication of this deployment there, once it occurs, and we will be able to answer it in a variety of ways.

[Shlonsky] As chief of staff, do you regard this as a concerning development?

[Levi] The development involved greater Syrian readiness, more preparations for war. Fortifying for war means being better prepared for war, and the closer this is to you the closer the readiness for war against you is. No forces have deployed there, but this can be done, so I regard this process as another step in this Syrian process which I described earlier as their way of building up power, organizing, training, procuring, and carrying out fortification activity.

[Shlonsky] Do you actually regard this as part of a strategy, which includes, for example, surface-to-air missiles as the first step to follow?

[Levi] It is not only I who should regard this as part of a strategy. The Syrian president has said that this is the road he is pursuing. He is building up his forces, establishing them, intending ultimately to achieve through force, and only through force, the same goals he thinks are Syrian goals, namely greater Syria, Syria versus the Palestinian problem, and Syria vis-a-vis the problems of the Golan and Lebanon. In other words, this is a strategy in which steps are constantly being taken in a way which, from the Syrian point of view, should serve their purpose.

[Shlonsky] Mr Chief of Staff, last week you listed a whole range of reasons to explain the Syrians' nervousness. Is the situation calmer or more peaceful now?

[Levi] I do not know. As I said last week as well, the crisis is not of a military nature. One of its aspects is terrorism, and indeed the Syrians have been found to be directly involved in terrorist attacks, some of which are very grave, this in addition to the infrastructure and assistance they provide to the terrorist organizations. No doubt anyone who is engaged in such things feels that he can be the target of attacks or some sort of punishment for having done what he did. Compounded by internal activity, namely the battles that took place between the United States and Libya, and the whole political process involved, then no doubt that from their point of view, the Syrians have good reasons for concern.

[Shlonsky] But what about us?

[Levi] We have no reason to fear. As always, we must be prepared in case the Syrians exercise the options they have. We have been doing this all along, including recently. Our reaction was not dictated by the media-generated rise and fall of tension. We reacted following an assessment of the facts we had at hand.

[Shlonsky] Mr Chief of Staff, with your permission, let us now deal with the IDF itself. The IDF is currently faced with the problem of recruiting good people as career soldiers. How can you expect to hire the best if it is commonly said that only the mediocre remain as career servicemen?

[Levi] I have never said that only the mediocre stay in, and I think it is a statement that does the situation and the people a great injustice. I believe this is the result of a misunderstanding of what we want to express, and sometimes indeed the way you phrase things involves offending many people.

We need a lot of good people. Security is still the cornerstone of the existence of the state, and we can use military power in every direction and that includes the efforts toward peace as well as stability. That is why lots of efforts should be directed toward a greater military strength, and this is actually happening. First, we have the personnel in the form of the regular service, the reserve duty. These are tremendous efforts and they constitute an unbelievable asset. This way, each individual assumes the responsibility he has to shoulder. The connecting link is the career service. In order to attain the highest possible level there, we must have a lot of good people. There are in fact a lot of very good people in the career service, but we need more. However, here we are in competition with the great many attractions outside the army, certainly to people who work in the technological fields who can gauge these attractions in very tangible terms, as well as to personnel at the command level who sometimes find the atmosphere a deterrent against remaining in the army. However, as I have said before, the primary problem in terms of career service lies with us; we must stand up to this overall challenge and turn it into the personal challenge of more and more people, thereby spurring them to action and retaining them.

[Shlonsky] As chief of staff, you must be the head of the army whose resources have suffered the worst slash. Do you think this is the right time for the IDF to make a leap forward, or are the main efforts directed at preventing a relapse?

[Levi] No, this is not a question of preventing a fallback, nor is it a question of a leap forward because I believe the circumstances preclude leaps. Things constantly change, so much so that the future battlefield is beginning to assume dimensions far different from that to which we have been accustomed. At the same time, the risks exist and readiness and routine security measures are also required. Therefore, we must do everything that will lead us to the appropriate level of readiness in the future. This should be done by taking steps that would not result in some gap, which would be precisely what our enemies would be waiting for. Of course the difficulties imposed by the budget cuts are a burden. I also want to add that the needs exceeded the budget allocations even before they were slashed, because needs increase. The problem now is to maintain a reasonable build up rate in the future. We are not talking about remaining where we are, but we are also not talking about a revolution because we are not discussing theory; we are dealing with a state of readiness that must provide ongoing solutions under conditions that can be seen as characterizing an interim stage.

[Shlonsky] Finally, Mr Chief of Staff, it has been nearly a year since the IDF pullback from Lebanon. Do you think that the way the security strip was conceived justified maintaining it?

[Levi] I referred to this before. I believe it has proved its value even beyond the early expectations. I have also said a number of times that this, however, only applies to the past and that in order for it to prove valuable in the future, too, we must display the same kind of sensitivity — with less shouting, perhaps — that characterized discussions of this subject when it was first raised and when the decision to redeploy in Lebanon was made. We must make sure that we can preserve the achievements in the Lebanese front as well as in others in the future as well.

[Shlonsky] Mr Chief of Staff, thank you very much.

[Levi] Thank you and a happy holiday.

Herzog Addresses Nation on Independence Day

TA131930 Jerusalem Domestic Service in English 1800 GMT 13 May 86

[Address by President Hayim Herzog on the occasion of Israel Independence Day; place not given — recorded]

[Text] My friends, just now our flags, at half mast all day, have been raised to the top of the flag pole. The transition from Remembrance Day to Independence Day is painfully sharp and swift. It faithfully reflects the rise of Israel, for which so dear a price was paid, such enormous sacrifices were made.

A year ago, on our last Independence Day, units of our army were still stationed in Lebanon, the economic crisis and inflation were at their height. Both these gravest of problems, so crushing and burdensome to the citizens of Israel, have been removed, and the way has been opened to a calmer and better life.

Certainly there are still difficulties. The basic threat to our security remains, the threat of terrorism is very real, and even the many achievements of the economic program, made possible by the sacrifices and efforts of the people of Israel, are only the beginning of a process that must continue. But our people has never been deterred by challenges, and our horizons today are brighter and more hopeful.

This Independence Day emphasizes the theme of democracy in Israel: Democracy grounded in the enlightened principles of our declaration of independence, which is itself inspired by the eternal values of the Jewish people. The State of Israel is one of the world's small and distinguished minority of truly democratic nations. Our democratic form of government is a treasure which must be jealously guarded, for only in a democracy is the citizen free to choose his government, to express his opinions, and his critical judgments. Democracy is the very essence of life for the State of Israel and the people of Israel. In our nature and makeup we are a democratic nation. We cannot and must not allow any microbe of anti-democracy to take root among us and exploit our democratic structure in order to destroy democracy from within. In this respect our life as a nation is at stake.

One of our gravest internal problems has become not less but rather more acute during the year, that is the confrontation between the secular and religiously observant among us. The tendency to fanaticism, separatism, and isolation is dangerous in the extreme, and if unchecked might divide us into two camps, almost into two nations. We have no choice but to meet each other halfway, and to search for ways leading to communication, understanding, reconciliation. We dare not permit this inner polarization, and whatever the price, we must prevent the development of that destructive malady known in the history of our people, groundless hatred and civil strife.

On the eve of our 38th Independence Day let us find inspiration and a source of pride in the national structure we have built; despite all faults, defects, and problems, this is a dream that has come true. The vision burned in the soul of our scattered people for 2,000 years, and it has been granted us to see its realization. There is much that we must yet do to develop the State of Israel, to make its society a model of justice, to bring large scale aliya [immigration] to it, to assure peace within it and on its borders.

Yet, we have every right to be proud today. I travel throughout the length and breadth of the country and continually rediscover its positive aspects, its beauty, its energy and creativity, its splendid younger generation, native born and those who came from all the countries of the dispersion, all of them, jointly, naturally, and proudly, bearing that name so rich in history and values, Israel. As our flag flies among the flags of the nations, and our national hymn, in hope of return and freedom is heard, let us honor and cherish the symbols of our independence.

When I remember the beginnings, our desperate situation on the day the establishment of the State was proclaimed, Jerusalem beseiged, starved, thirsty, the Negev and western Galilee cut off, the fall of the 'Ezyon bloc, the invading armies of the Arab states attacking and poised at the heart of the country, all that we have passed through since then and up to now, when I remember all this, I cannot but give thanks to the rock of Israel.

In the light of our past I am certain that we will stand up to every challenge, overcome every difficulty, and advance toward a glorious future for the State of Israel. As Independence Day opens let us send all blessings and appreciation to our soldiers and security personnel, let us remember our oppressed brothers wherever they are, let us pray for the redemption of our captives, the healing of all the ill and wounded, and good tidings for the families of the missing.

For all the house of Israel, a happy Independence Day, a good and blessed year of freedom.

Katyushas Hit Galilee Panhandle, Wound Three

TA131510 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew
1500 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Two 107-mm katyusha rockets hit the Galilee panhandle in the early afternoon hours today, slightly injuring three people. This was reported by military sources to our correspondent Shmu'el Tal. Our correspondent Hayim Hecht reports that the casualties are a father and his son and daughter, who have been transferred to the Zefat hospital. We repeat: All three sustained slight injuries.

The electrical network was damaged as a result of damage from the katyushas, and the security forces are convinced the missiles were fired from an area outside the security strip in southern Lebanon.

All the Remembrance Day ceremonies and the Independence Day festivities scheduled to take place in the Galilee panhandle will take place as planned.

Jordan Planning for West Bank Development

TA130955 Tel Aviv HA'ARETZ in Hebrew
13 May 86 p 2

[Report by Uri Nir]

[Text] The Jordanian Parliament representative from the Hebron area has presented a group of pro-Jordanian public figures and Israeli personalities with a 5-year plan which Jordan is working out for the development of the West Bank.

At a formal luncheon held last week in Ramallah in his honor, the representative, Wahid al-Ja'bari, disclosed that Jordan is currently working on a 5-year plan meant to consolidate the West Bank's economic future. It is mainly aimed at finding employment solutions for workers from the West Bank who were recently forced to leave the oil states where they were employed, reemploying Jordanian civil servants who have been on strike since 1967, and resuming aid to West Bank municipalities. He said there is talk of investing a large sum of money.

The Ramallah event was attended by several of the most prominent pro-Jordanian Palestinians in the West Bank, including Bethlehem Mayor Ilyas Frayj and the head of the Hebron area village leagues, Jamil al-'Amlah. The Jerusalem mayor's adviser on Arab affairs, Amir Hashin, and former Knesset Member Ja'bar Mu'addi were also present.

Amman has recently reported openly on its 5-year plan. The idea is not new, but it has been given a renewed impetus, apparently because of the recent personnel reshuffle in the Jordanian Government, as part of which Marwan Dudin was appointed as the new minister of "occupied territories' affairs."

According to Amman radio, Dudin met with several public figures from the West Bank who visited Jordan recently and he showed them the main points of his 5-year plan.

Egypt Complains About Treatment at Border Crossing

TA111505 Tel Aviv MA'ARIV in Hebrew
11 May 86 p 2

[Report by Refa'el Mann]

[Text] Harsh complaints about "humiliating treatment" of Egyptian citizens arriving in Israel via the Rafah border crossing were recently conveyed to the Prime Minister's Office by the Egyptian Embassy. The Egyptians are claiming that the security checks are conducted in an offensive manner and discriminates against them as compared to other foreigners arriving at the border crossing.

According to Israeli sources, the number of Egyptian complaints has increased recently, and efforts are being made by those officials dealing with the matter to examine the claims and prevent the incidents from recurring in the future.

The Egyptian Embassy reported that in one incident an Egyptian travel agent who was on his way to encourage tourism to Israel was offended by the way in which the security searches were conducted, and decided to return to Cairo immediately. He promised that he would do his best to prevent Egyptians from visiting Israel. In another incident, a security check on the body of an Egyptian Embassy worker was carried out in such a way as to humiliate him.

Officials in Jerusalem said that ways must be found to conduct the checks that would not offend visitors from Egypt, so that tourism from that country is not harmed.

Schiff Views Syrian Moves in Southern Lebanon

TA130943 Tel Aviv HA'ARETZ in Hebrew 13 May 86 p 1

[Commentary by Ze'ev Schiff: "A Syrian Signal To Nullify Israeli Achievements in Lebanon"]

[Text] By establishing a system of positions and dugouts for the Syrian forces in the southern Lebanese Al-Biqa', Damascus is trying to nullify what Israsel achieved in the Lebanon war, and to signal that these positions will be manned by the Syrian Army the moment Israel takes any step in Lebanon that the Syrians regard as a threat.

This is not the first time Damascus has used the method of "empty dugouts" as a first stage and warning signal. In 1981, for example, when fighting broke out in Zahlah between the Syrians and Christians, the Syrian Army prepared empty dugouts for missle batteries as a warning to Israel not to intervene in the Zahlah fighting. As soon as Israel subsequently downed Syrian helicopters, SAM-6's were introduced into Lebanon. This time the Syrians are again using the 2-stage method of undermining. First they prepare a system of dugouts and positions; then they are ready to implement the second stage of introducing units into this system in the event there is any type of clash with Israel.

By establishing this system in the southern Lebanese Al-Biqa' the Syrians are actually rejecting the Israeli appeal made prior to the IDF withdrawal from Lebanon: that Israel expects the Syrians Army not to enter those areas evacuated by the IDF. Damascus refrained from doing this for about a year, but about 2 months ago altered its approach. The Syrians continued with their entrenchment even after the Americans appealed to them on this matter. After having first altered the antiaircraft missle system on their Lebanese border, they positioned radar sites on Jabal al-Baruk in Lebanon. Now they are taking the second step in the south of the Al-Biqa' facing Israel.

The Syrian system is of a defensive nature. It may be assumed that it is based on lessons Syria learned from the 1982 fighting. The Syrians are reinforcing their defenses, but their actions could also give them a better starting point for an offensive. The dangers to which Israel is exposed by this move are as follows: If this system, which, among other things, includes artillery positions, is manned by forces, the northern section of Israel will be within the range of Syrian artillery, including that coming from the Al-Biqa'; Syrian forces that are too close to us in Lebanese territory will threaten Israel's security strip; and, if the infiltration of terrorist elements from the Al-Biqa' continues, the risk of a clash between the IDF and the Syrian Army will increase. If forces are brought in to these positions, there will be an alteration of the situation on the Israeli-Lebanese border. Therefore Israel is confronted with the decision of whether to accept the Syrian move as being purely defensive, or as being aimed at making things difficult for us on the northern border and changing the strategic situation. If the latter is the case, Israel will have to take action against this move, now or at a later stage.

Jerusalem Arabic Papers View U.S., Tension With Syria

U.S. Accuses Syria of Terrorism

TA091900 Jerusalem AL-SHA'B in Arabic 8 May 86 p 1

[Editorial: "These Threats"]

[Text] Following the Tokyo summit Ronald Reagan seems more aggressive and threatening in his war against liberation movements and the people of the Third World, after he guaranteed the silence and declared impotence of the Arab regimes as well as the alliance of Western countries to some extent and in various degrees.

When the White House group, starting with Reagan and ending with Murphy, and including Bush, Shultz, and spokesmen of the White House and the U.S. State Department, launches an extensive propaganda campaign against Syria, the alarm signals should ring loudly.

This campaign, which accuses Syria of terrorism, is similar to the campaign that was waged and continues to be waged against the PLO and Libya, and is identical to the campaigns that preceded the raid on the PLO headquarters in Tunisia and the barbaric aggression against the Libyan people. This campaign aims at creating a barren climate suitable for launching an aggression against Syria.

From its experiences in the region the United States has discovered that the policy of isolating one country after another is better and more suitable to its aggressive strategy and to regional and international balances. As long as it finds in practical experience that Libya stands alone despite all the fierce scope of conflict, it will be encouraged to isolate one Arab country after another in the same way.

Should we continue to voice the hope that these threats will be enough reason to awaken the pan-Arab feelings in the Arab homeland? Do we possess anything other than this hope in the face of this fragmented Arab situation?

Halting Terror Pretext for Aggression

TA131625 Jerusalem AL-QUDS in Arabic 12 May 86 pp 1, 7

[Editorial: "Acrobatics Diplomacy"]

[Text] Israeli Police Affairs Minister Hayim Bar-Lev declared the day before yesterday that Syria will be severely punished if its involvement in the attempt to blow up the El Al passenger plane is proved. It is no secret to anyone that with its decision to expell three Syrian diplomats from London, Britain is pointing the accusing finger at Syria. This acrobatics diplomacy that is trying to link Syria to international terrorism reminds us of the measures taken by President Reagan to link Libya to terrorism — those same measures that ultimately led to direct U.S. aggression against Libyan civilians in the towns of Tripoli and Banghazi.

Political decision-makers in Israel realize the extent of the grave consequences that would result from a military adventure against Syria, and they are trying to convince the world that Israel will do all in its power to prevent the outbreak of a war with Syria. This is what Israeli Prime Minister Shim'on Peres stated yesterday, but he added Israel's intention to wage a relentless war against what he called "terrorism."

We observe that all Israeli authorities are announcing that they will exert their utmost effort to prevent a war with Syria, yet at the same time they declare a war against what they term "terrorism." As is being witnessed the diplomatic campaign against Syria has nothing to do with the nature of Syria's relation to the Arab-Israeli conflict or with its positions regarding the political agenda. The systematic international campaign against Syria has adopted the nature of a fight against terrorism. So if war breaks out with Syria it will be a war against "terrorism," and we can expect aggression against Syria under this pretext.

We are of the opinion that this war will not be limited to Israel alone, rather all evidence indicates that aggression against Syria will take place with the participation of numerous countries, headed by the United States, which has found in the term combating "terrorism" a pretext for aggression against various people in the world, precisely as it did with Libya and is doing now with Nicaragua and Angola. It is incumbent upon the entire Arab nation to realize the dimensions of the campaign of international acrobatic diplomacy aimed against Syria and its people.

Support for U.S. 'Grave Mistake'

TA121545 Jerusalem AL-FAJR in English
9 May 86 p 5

[Editorial: "Second Strike?"]

[Text] Instead of discussing plans to help the poor nations of the world cope with their economic crises, the Western nations devoted most of the four days of their Tokyo summit to drawing up a common strategy on how to bring those poor nations, particularly the Arab nation, to their knees.

Under heavy pressure from the U.S. and England, the Western industrialized countries reversed their earlier stands and agreed, among other things, to take severe measures against states supporting what they called "terrorism," particularly Libya which they mentioned by name.

With this resolution, the U.S. can now renew its bombardment of Libya without fear of being criticized by its Western allies. The U.S. made sure to play up the significance of the Tokyo summit resolutions in order to use them whenever they see fit.

"The Tokyo summit declaration on terrorism, which approves the use of national measures to fight terrorism, is an implicit endorsement of the use of military force in some cases," said U.S. Deputy Press Secretary, Larry Speakes after the summit resolutions were announced.

According to the U.S. definition of terrorism, which is unbelievably broad except when regarding their own actions and their partner's, Israel, any national liberation movement or country which does not flock in the U.S. orbit is a "terrorist nation, or terrorist-supporting nation." This is clear from the rhetoric of U.S. President Reagan who has frequently called Nicaragua, Cuba, Angola, and the national liberation movement in El Salvador "terrorists."

The U.S. has applied its terminology to many countries and national liberation movements in the Middle East, particularly the PLO, Libya, Syria, Lebanon, Iran and many more. In fact, the U.S. has directed veiled threats at several of these nations, particularly Syria, Lebanon and Iran. Speakes specifically mentioned Syria in his briefings on May 6 as being responsible for "terrorist activities." U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz has said the same thing.

What is clear from all this rhetoric and name-calling of sovereign nations is that in the Middle East it is not only these nations and their governments which are so much a target of the U.S. and its trigger-happy administration, but it is also the central national liberation movement of the region — the PLO and the Palestinian people — which these nations support. Having gone through its own revolution more than 200 years ago Washington apparently now considers revolutions 'old hat' and cannot stomach the need of the Palestinian people for freedom in their own independent state.

What is also alarming is that the Western nations have given carte blanche to the U.S. to take "whatever necessary measures against terrorism." If we take Speakes' statements about resorting to military power to "fight terrorism" literally in conjunction with the CBS report that the U.S. is considering new military measures, particularly the use of long-range intercontinental missiles against Libya, we come to the conclusion that there is a real danger of another military strike against Libya.

No doubt that the Arab silence in the face of the previous military strike against Libya and the failure to convene an Arab summit meeting to discuss the American attack on Libya and the support that Western Europe has given to the U.S. makes conditions even more suitable for a second attack on Libya.

The threat is real, and if it is Libya that is at the top of the list now, we know that we are the real target and that there is no reason why the U.S. should not target Syria, and possibly Algeria, South Yemen, Tunisia, Sudan and any other "terrorist" nation where Palestinians are found.

The Western nations are making a grave mistake by endorsing the war tendencies of the U.S., but they will discover their mistake too late. The Arab people are not going to sit idle while the U.S. flexes its muscles, and the present regimes which protect their interests are not going to be around forever.

LIBYA

Al-Qadhdhafi Calls for End To Use of Foreign Goods

LD131238 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1110 GMT 13 May 86

["Text" of speech delivered by Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi on 12 May at 7 April Square in Al Bayda', Al Jabal al Akhdar — first three grafs are agency introduction]

[Text] Banghazi, 13 May (JANA) — Brother the leader of the Great September Revolution this evening [as received] arrived in the town of Al Bayda' in the Al Jabal al Akhdar municipality. the leader of the battle of triumph was accorded a huge mass welcome at the western entrance to the town, in which the masses of basic people's congresses in the municipality and masses of people's congress participated.

On the brother leader's arrival the popular masses' chanting resounded, stressing their challenge to the imperialist crusader of terrorism, their determination to sacrifice themselves for the revolution and its leader, their commitment to the glorious principle of Arab unity and the liberation of Palestine from the river to the sea, and their support for liberation issues. A number of sheep were slaughtered at the 7 April Square in honor of the leader of the battle of triumph.

The masses surrounded their leader amid cries of joy in a march to the 7 April Square, where the brother leader delivered an important speech. The following is its text:

Brothers, we are proud of Al Jabal al Akhdar [the green mountain]. This mountain stood fast in the face of Rome, which was a superpower like the United States. But in this mountain was the forest lion 'Umar al-Mukhtar; the inhabitants of this mountain were all (?hunters) in this forest and loyal guards of 'Umar al-Mukhtar, and stayed with him till the end. Our history prides itself on the glory recorded by Al Jabal al Akhdar and the brave people of Al Jabal al Akhdar. While 'Umar al-Mukhtar was causing trouble for the Italian invasion forces on this mountain. Rome believed that by eliminating 'Umar al-Mukhtar they would destroy freedom and revolution in this country. When 'Umar al-Mukhtar was arrested, when he was captured, celebrations were held in Rome and all over Italy, and there was joy everywhere in Italy at the time. Italy believed that they have captured Italy's fourth coast, as they claimed and fabricated. Messages were sent informing Rome that the leader of the rebels and outlaws had been captured; this is how Italy described Libyan mujahidin who were fighting for their country, soil, homeland and homes. They were considered rebels and outlaws. As for the invaders who crossed the sea and came to Libya to annex it to Italy, the tyrant colonialists did not think of themselves as outlaws. Look at this colonialist logic — it has always been upside down and false in every era.

Did Libya become the fourth coast of Italy, and was Libyan land annexed to Italy after the elimination of 'Umar al-Mukhtar? Never, Libya did not become the fourth coast of Italy, and Libyan Arab land was not annexed to the Italian territories; here is Libya today, a great Jamahiriyah able to deal painful blows to Italy itself. The elimination of 'Umar al-Mukhtar did not eliminate the freedom and independence of the Libyan people. The elimination of 'Umar al-Mukhtar was not enough for the realization of their dreams to annex Libya to Italy. The Arab land of Libya will always remain the land of Arabism and Islam despite the United States and Britain, and despite Zionism and imperialism. This is not the first time that a confrontation between us and traditional spiteful enemies has taken place. This is not the first time. The war between us and the U.S. Navy started in the year 1800, at the beginning of the Nineteenth Century. The United States was covetous of the Gulf of Sidra. However, the United States was obliged after the year 1800 to pay a tribute when it sailed in the Mediterranean Sea. The Mediterranean Sea is a sea which is divided between the Arabs and the Europeans, and the intruders must leave; no matter how long or what the cost of the struggle might be. The Zionists are intruders, and they must leave this region; the United States is an intruder and it must leave the Mediterranean Sea.

As to the USSR, it voluntarily declared that it would withdraw its fleet from the Mediterranean if the United States would withdraw its fleet.

Thus, as we have already said, this is not the first confrontation in which the aggressor was defeated and we triumphed in defense of our homeland.

When they tried to kill Al-Qadhdhafi, they believed. [incomplete sentence as received] Reagan, the rabid dog of Israel, was preparing a statement to declare to the world that the world's archterrorist had been destroyed and that the world should be happy. By the world, he means the free world, and the free world is, of course, the imperialist world which is opposed to freedom and popular democracy, and which is the enemy of the peoples living peacefully in their homelands. This is exactly what the accursed Graziani did when he issued a statement declaring the destruction of the archrebel and outlaws, 'Umar al-Mukhtar, and told the imperialist world to be happy because the war in Libya had ended. But Graziani lied; Italy lied; Rome lied; the imperialist world lied: For even with the destruction of 'Umar al-Mukhtar the war in Libya did not end, and the colonialists did not feel reassured in Libya. We expelled them abjectly, forced them to return home in disgrace, while we held celebrations over their defeat. We celebrated as free men under the banners of freedom, glory, and pride over Libyan Arab soil, soil which was never a coast for Italy, nor a part of Europe.

Likewise Reagan, the dog of Israel, was preparing a statement to declare that on 15 April the leader of world terrorism had been destroyed, and the free world could be reassured. Thus, he told them I will destroy terrorism once and for all. By this he meant the killing of Al-Qadhdhafi. But Reagan, the rabid dog of Israel, had lied, and so did the United States and the imperialist world — a world which is not free.

It is, in fact, a world living under the yoke of exploitation, dictatorship, barbarism, and beastiality. It is not a free world. Ours is a free world. We are the ones who established freedom over our land and extended our hands to the peoples struggling for freedom. We are the ones who want peace in the Mediterranean and peace for Europe, too. We want cooperation with Europe. But this cannot be achieved except through struggle against imperialism and Zionism. There is no alternative for us but to fight the battle against Zionism and imperialism until they are expelled from the Mediterranean. Only then can peace prevail in the Mediterranean.

We, brothers, reply to the seven industrial powers which convened in a failed conference under the missiles of the Japanese, and in the face of the march of millions of sons of the Japanese people — we reply to the rulers of the seven industrial powers who believe that they were punishing Libya and tell them that they are only punishing themselves. If Japan yielded to the threats of U.S. terrorism and from the other Western countries, then it will be the one which will lose. But the Libyan people will not be the losers.

Libya is in reality a consumer market for the Japanese industries, and the Japanese Government understands that Libya is to a great extent a consumer market for Japanese products. When this market is closed to its face, Japan is the one that will lose, and the Japanese companies are the ones which will lose. We have to do without Japanese radios, Japanese recorders, Japanese video recorders, Japanese cars, and all the false Japanese industries. We have to do without them so that the Japanese Government will know that it has lost by submitting to U.S. terrorism and the Western Christian countries.

We are not the ones who are going to lose. These sanctions will rebound on them. We will make their intrigues rebound on them. We will demonstrate to them that we hope for the time when we will get rid of imports from Europe. We will put an end to our consumption of European products. We will eliminate economic dependence on the exploiting West European capitalist market. We are waiting for this opportunity; they have offered us this opportunity; and we have made their intrigues rebound on them. They wanted to plot against Libya; however, they have to know that we can dispense with Western and Japanese cars, and that we can do without the European canned products, butter, their faces [as received], and the cheese of the EEC. They said that we ban butter to the Libyans and, by God, they will be doing a good thing, they will be the first to lose out. They were receiving millions from Libya for their false products which will not feed us or stop hunger. Thus, they have punished themselves, and they must understand that they will lose billions in the projects which they were implementing...which they were carrying out in Libya will lose billions, and the Western companies will lose billions, and Western interests will lose billions which were deposited there. [sentence as received] A growing consumer market has been shut in the face of Western industry, Japanese and Western produce.

As for us, if we want; those among us who want butter must raise a goat, a sheep or a cow and produce it himself here locally from our homeland and in our land. Those who want milk must raise cows, and to hell with European milk, butter and cheese, European products. If we need cheese, we shall make it ourselves. Indeed, as of now we must move toward serious work so that we can dispense with them, and show them that they have been fighting themselves, and that their confrontation with us is their loss. We want to make them lose economically, we must do without Western and industrial countries' goods.

What do we need if our agricultural and food production in Al-Jabal al-Akhdar satisfies all of Libya? We must cultivate every inch of the great and proud Al-Jabal al-Akhdar. Italy wanted to colonize Libya for Al-Jabal al-Akhdar, because it wanted to add Al-Jabal al-Akhdar to its agricultural land and wanted to bring millions of Italian farmers to colonize Al-Jabal al-Akhdar. Their remains are still there. Then World War II came and they could not complete their projects. They were establishing farms and houses. Al-Jabal al-Akhdar was divided from the sea to [word indistinct] into farms and houses, and they wanted to give every Italian farmer a house and a farm in Al-Jabal al-Akhdar. When the war broke out they could not complete their projects, but their remains still exist. So they showed us that they wanted to colonize Libya for Al-Jabal al-Akhdar. Italy thus needed Al-Jabal al-Akhdar. How is it then that we Libyans are living in Al-Jabal al-Akhdar? How is it that we are not able to exploit it and benefit from it? I assure you that Al-Jabal al-Akhdar will satisfy all of Libya in agriculture. This mountain must become farm beside farm. We must move in the right direction until we achieve final victory with all the weapons with which they are confronting us. If they confront us with the economic weapon, we must triumph and dispense with them economically. Every Libyan family must plant wheat and barley and keep animals so that we can do without Europe, because the next battle is coming, and they want to make us kneel in any way possible. They failed in conspiracies, failed in the psychological war and failed after amassing all the stationary and moving aircraft carriers, including the British Isles, which has become a U.S. aircraft carrier, the fourth aircraft carrier.

They used it too, and it became a fourth aircraft-carrier as there were three aircraft-carriers in the Mediterranean on the move, to which they added the British isles; the latter were transformed into a U.S. aircraft-carrier. Britain was no longer great and no longer independent. It became a mere U.S. aircraft-carrier for the F-111's. They used all their military weapons and all their conspiracies. They adopted diplomatic measures and reduced the number of diplomats. They applied strict measures with regard to the movement of Libyans in Europe and finally said that an end should be put to this people, this revolution, this nation, this new world, this upsurge, this challenge, this steadfastness, and this nobility; these should kneel and should be subjugated by every means. They used the F-111's, and they used the stationary and mobile aircraft-carriers, as we have said. They used the base intrigues, including character assassination and poison. They used psychological warfare, and recently they wanted to use economic warfare. They said that the stomachs of the Libyans will make them kneel. We should show them that our honor is in our noses and in our heads [that we are proud] and not in our stomachs. We say that heroism means that we should die of thirst and not die while (?storing) water, and that we were given the choice and preferred to go to bed hungry without making efforts to become rich. This is what the poet 'Umar al-Mukhtar said. We too should go to bed hungry and not kneel and submit. We should not be subjugated at all. We should not compromise our principles, right, and dignity even if we have to go hungry. But we will not go hungry, because by exploiting our land we can live a dignified life without needing European products or Japanese industries. To hell with the seven states that met in Tokyo. To hell with West Europe, and to hell with the U.S. To hell with the stationary U.S.-British aircraft-carrier.

We say to you that it is time that we score the final victory. We have achieved victories in the military and psychological spheres. They tried to subjugate us psychologically and militarily, and they failed because we are the owners of a right, and because God is fighting them. May God fight them! The hand of God is above their hand. But in order to score the final victory in this confrontation you should not allow them to laugh at you and say: We have made them submit through their stomachs; the aircraft, the aircraft-carriers, and the psychological warfare failed to make them submit but their stomachs did. We do not want them to say that the Libyans were made to submit through their stomachs — we do not want this to go on record. We do not want them to say that the Libyans were made to submit through their stomachs and made them compromise their dignity, honor, principles, and revolution. In order to triumph in the final economic confrontation we should look toward our land — the land of our fathers and forefathers.

We must develop it inch by inch and cultivate it inch by inch. We must dispense with Dutch butter and Dutch cheese and also dispense with Europe's agricultural produce and even the industrial produce. We are prepared to plow with donkeys, horses and camels and thus dispense with their tractors if this is the price we have to pay for our dignity, if the price is our subjugation or the scoring of a historic defeat against this great nation.

We have paid a high price for scores of years when we fought Italy. We have offered hordes of martyrs. Our nation is dying now, and it is offering martyrs in Palestine, Lebanon and Syria. Hordes of martyrs were offered in the land of Egypt, which was desecrated by the cowards and traitors, the rulers of Egypt who are agents of the Zionists and who lay prostrate. We have offered 1.5 million martyrs in Algeria and thousands of martyrs in South Yemen fighting the British occupation. Martyrs were offered in Iraq and in Sudan.

In the recent past, 1,000 Tunisians were martyred at Bizerta in one moment. This nation has offered martyrs, incalculable numbers of martyrs. How then, after all that, can we surrender for the sake of butter or cheese, a video, or any trifling thing?

We must remember the martyrs offered by the Arab nation from the gulf to the ocean. Millions of martyrs. How can the blood of these martyrs be shed in vain? How can the blood of these martyrs be shed in vain? How can we forget their pure blood? How can we forget the sacrifices our fathers and forefathers made for the sake of freedom?

Not for the sake of butter, not for the sake of cheese, not for the sake of videos, not for the sake of Mercedes cars, not for the sake of Japanese cars — to hell with the Japanese cars. If that is the price we have to pay for our dignity; to hell with European food and drink if they are the price we have to pay for our dignity, and for bringing insult to the sacrifices of our fathers and forefathers.

Brothers, you must remember the brothers. You must remember 'Umar al-Mukhtar, that aged man who became a lion at Al-Jabel al-Akhdar. He was about 70 years old but he stunned the hoards out of Rome with mere guns and horses. But today we have planes, we have tanks, we have submarines, we have an armed people.

We are the niche of hope for this nation, a nation that had offered martyrs, but whose agent prostrate rulers have betrayed the martyrs everywhere in the Arab homeland. In Egypt, great Egypt, which had offered martyrs, thousands of martyrs for the sake of Palestine — the Egyptian regime has recognized the Zionist enemy, and recognized the people of Israel and the land of Israel. Where have the Egyptian people's sacrifices for Palestine gone? Those traitors have betrayed these sacrifices. The traitors in the Arab homeland have betrayed the sacrifices of the Arab nation.

But you are the niche of hope for the Arab nation. You must not betray the martyrs of the Arab nation and the sacrifices offered by the Arab nation for the sake of pride and the sake of freedom.

How long will you live, even if you have filled your stomachs and bowed your heads? How long will you live? One might bow his head one day and then a car might come by and hit him, and he dies. How immortal can you be in this world? Immortality is for the martyrs; glory is for the Arab nation; immortality is in heaven. Rush to go to heaven. Seek martyrdom so that you may become immortal. Immortality is not to be found in these streets nor in the Japanese cars; immortality does not lie in being prostrate.

Libyans, you Arab Libyans are the niche of the Arab nation's hope. The entire Arab nation looks to you, for you are the ideal, you are the example, you are the leadership, you are the hope.

This is the same way in which we used to look to Egypt during the days of Jama 'Abd al-Nasir. When Egypt is defeated, we all feel that we have been defeated; when Egypt triumphs, we all feel that we have triumphed. When 'Abd al-Nasir resigned [following the 1967 war] our determination collapsed and our morale was destroyed. When 'Abd al-Nasir returned, we felt like the dead who have been resurrected — we rose anew. The hope of the entire masses of the Arab nation was pinned on Egypt not because it was Egypt and not because his name was Jamal 'Abd al-Nasir — the person leading the battle while the aggression was taking place against Egypt; it is not because you are Libyans and this country is called Libya or because this or that person [is leading Libya] — it is because this country is leading a battle of dignity and loftiness, a battle of unity, a battle of pan-Arabism. It is because this country is being subjected to aggression at the hands of the enemies of the Arab nation, the enemies of Palestine, the enemies of the Islamic nation, the enemies of freedom. Because this country, which is called Libya, is waging a glorious historical battle, you are now being respected, worshipped, and held in high esteem by the peoples struggling for freedom. A people small in number stands against the United States, the superpowers! Do not cause this glory, which you have achieved, to be belittled in value! The morale of the Arab nation depends on your morale. The resistance of the Arab nation depends on your steadfastness and defiance. Your voice should always be strong, challenging the United States and its like. Aircraft carriers cannot enter the desert. Therefore, we say to hell with the aircraft carriers. No aircraft carrier can enter the desert. Even if they destroy the entire coast we will continue our resistance. By God we are capable of resisting for 100 years. We will fight the United States despite all the might it has. It cannot defeat us. We are a continent that can even absorb [tastawib] atomic bombs. As I have told you, the United States has 600 cruise missiles. We can withstand a strike of 600 cruise missiles against any of our high mountains, against any of our valleys — we will not be affected. They think that we are a Luxembourg or a Finland; when they are hit by one missile or a single aircraft they are finished. We are a continent. How can it be finished? And then we are a nation. The Italians tried to annihilate us. They could not. Japan, which is very small in area, was hit by atomic bombs. And now Japan is stronger than the United States. How about Libya! They think that the atomic bombs frighten us. They do not frighten us. Let the aircraft carriers come. If there is a landing on Libyan shores it will be annihilated, because we and the fish are waiting for them.

33 Plane Maintenance Students Ordered Home From UK

LD131634 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English

[Text] The Libyan Government has ordered home 33 of its students who have been learning to repair and service commercial aircraft at Stansted Airport in Essex. The move follows the clampdown on their activities after the U.S. bombing raid on Libya. The students are expected to board a flight from Heathrow to Tripoli within the next 48 hours.

Twelve other students who have been involved in courses ranging from 12 months to three years, run by Aviation Traders LTD, are being allowed to stay behind to take examinations.

After the U.S. raids last month, the company's personnel manager, Mr Mike Boyce, said Department of Transport officials had warned the firm to keep the Libyans away from operational aircraft of components. He said then: "They used to work on repairs beside our skilled men, but now we have restricted them to the classroom and an aircraft we use for training purposes only."

Reportage on Denials Made to Spanish Media Claims

Consul General in Madrid Comments

LD091744 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 1646 GMT 9 May 86

[Excerpts] Madrid, 9 May (KUNA) — Spanish security forces today detained colonel Carlos Meer de Rivera, the military governor of the Province of Avila, north of Madrid.

Sayyid Isma'il, the Libyan consul general in Madrid told KUNA that he knows nothing about the case of this Spanish military man and that he has no connection whatsoever with him.

Sayyid Isma'il stressed to KUNA that the whole case is "absolutely fabricated" and that "it comes within the framework of the current campaign by the United States and its allies against Libya."

He added that it is clear that there is U.S. pressure on European governments which is leading them to adopt such measures against Libya.

He expressed his belief that Libyan-Spanish relations will be restored to their normal state of friendship and amicability after the end of this storm which is blowing from the United States and which has disturbed relations between the two countries.

He said to KUNA that the Libyan expulsion of Spanish technicians last week "in reply to the Spanish decision to expel a number of Libyan students and teachers" harmed the Spanish companies working in Libya, which caused embarassment and problems for the Spanish Government and that this led to the fabrication of this new case against Libya.

Spanish Ambassador Summoned

[Text] The People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison at noon today summoned the Spanish ambassador to the Great Jamahiriyah, and informed him of its absolute denial of any link between the Jamahiriyah and reports in the Spanish media. The committee stressed to the Spanish ambassador that the measures taken by the Spanish Government were not based on true facts which it can coroborate or justify, and that the Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah can understand if Spain has an independent stand stemming from its appreciation of its national interest. However, to choose this time specifically to fabricate an unfounded justification for hostile decisions represents in fact a complete bias toward the failed aggression imposed by the United States on the Libyan Arab people, supported by Spain and other countries by their measures.

JANA Commentary Reported on Ties With EEC, Spain

LD132020 Tripoli Domestic Service in Arabic
1230 GMT 13 May 86

[Commentary by JANA Political editor]

[Text] In a commentary on the hostile stands adopted by the EEC vis-a-vis the Great Jamahiriyah and its involvement in the trap to which it was driven by the United States, the JANA political editor said: It has become clear that the EEC is no longer behaving in accordance with the interests of its peoples, nor in accordance with the requirements of its geographic position and the historical ties dictated by this position. This stage of the EEC's relations with the Jamahiriyah and the Arab homeland is a good indication of this; the EEC is behaving in accordance to the will of the party which is following the most dangerous hostile adventurist policy in the world today, namely the Reagan administration, with all the dangers it is bringing to peace and security and stability in the Mediterranean and other regions in the world.

The United States launched its savage, barbarous attack on the Jamahiriyah people, and at all the stages that accompanied preparation, execution and media coverage of this unjust attack, Europe's independent will was absent; instead it was justifying the attack, supporting it, working to cover it up, or taking part in it. The most dangerous element of this stand was its bias toward the aggressor against the aggressed.

Among the European countries, some followed the U.S. aggressive decision without being aware of its danger, while others unreservedly provided facilities for this aggression and practically took part in it. It is noted that Spain chose a specific circumstance to fabricate incidents and stories not related to the realities of its relations with Libya, including Libya's responsibility for disturbing Spanish security and its contacts with an army officer. The Spanish stand goes to the extent of indicating that Libya has been making contacts with rightwing forces in Spain.

We in the Jamahiriyah consider these measures and this stand of the Spanish Government to be contrary to what must dominate its relations with Libya, and we consider it to be a decision by a government of full partiality to the U.S. hostile stand in its political, military, media and economic dimensions. It may be acceptable to the Spanish Government to adopt a decision which expresses its interests and epitomizes its independent will in dealing with events which are related to its relations with the outside world; however, to choose these circumstances and this time specifically is not the outcome of coincidence or mistake in calculations on its part.

Another point must be stressed; there is a popular revolution and a mass theory in the Jamahiriyah that has ideologically and historically gone beyond the right or similar in Europe. This factor alone is enough to nullify what the Spanish media report regarding Libya's link with rightist forces in Spain.

Oil Official on U.S. Firms, Production Policy

LD091545 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 090838 GMT 9 May 86

[Report by correspondent Shamil Khayri]

[Text] Kuwait, 9 May (KUNA) — The most senior Libyan oil official has declared that his country will not be harmed if U.S. oil companies operating in Libya decide to pull out of the country. He added that Libya is not concerned about this matter. He affirmed at the same time that his coutnry is holding consultations with the oil-producing Arab countries to urge them to stop the exportation of oil to the United States.

The official, 'Abdallah al-Badri, secretary of the administrative committee and director general of the national oil establishment in Libya, which is considered the top oil post there, spoke to KUNA last night prior to his departure from Kuwait. He said that "Libya will have no problem if U.S. oil companies operating in Libya decide to pull out." He pointed out that "the Libyan reply has not crystalized yet because so far we have received nothing from U.S. companies indicating their determination to leave Libya."

Al-Badri also pointed out that U.S. oil companies operating in Libya have been run for some time by the Libyan national oil establishment which owns the major shares in these companies ranging between 51 and 60 percent. He said that "the Jamahiriyah has taken major steps since 1974 to take control of the country's oil industry — so Libyan hands manage these companies. In view of this, Libya will have no problem in managing the U.S. companies if the Americans working in them decide to pull out."

He affirmed that "Libya stopped exporting its crude oil and oil byproducts to the United States a long time ago and continues this policy even now."

Asked if Libya still asks the Arab oil-producing countries to not export their oil to the United States, Al-Badri said that "consultations continue between Libya and the Arab countries in this regard but I know nothing about them."

Al-Badri led his country's delegation to the ordinary half-yearly meeting of the OAPEC ministerial council which convened here last Tuesday.

Al-Badri stated that his country now produces between 990,000 barrels and 1.05 million barrels of oil daily. He said "Libya was trying to adhere to its production quota of 990,000 barrels per day despite the anarchy reigning over prices and production in the world market."

He affirmed at the same time, however, that his country "sells its oil at the prevalent prices in the world market despite the current conditions, the U.S. and European blockade, and that it does not offer any price discounts."

Al-Badri affirmed that Libya will adhere to its position concerning the need for the OPEC member countries to greatly reduce their production ceiling so oil prices regain their strength, during the half-yearly ordinary meeting which the OPEC will hold at Brioni, Yugoslavia on 25 May.

Libya, Iran and Algeria opposed an agreement reached by the remaining 10 OPEC member countries at the last meeting held in Geneva in the middle of last month fixing the ceiling for oil production at 16.7, 16.3, and 17.3 million barrels per day during the 2d, 3d and 4th quarters of the current year respectively. However, the three countries want the ceiling to remain at 15, 14.5 and 16.8 million barrels per day for the 2d, 3d and 4th quarters of this year.

Al-Badri described the efforts being exerted to raise oil prices to their old level of $28 per barrel as an extremely difficult task in view of the sharp fall that has already taken place in the oil prices.

He pointed out that his country believes that the price of oil should be raised from $20 to $22 per barrel as this would be reasonable under the shadow of the current confusion in the oil market which has witnessed a sharp fall in the price of oil reaching $10 per barrel. However, Al-Badri said that "we will not be able to achieve this price unless the OPEC member countries cut their production from their present level now of about 18 million barrels to 15 million barrels per day."

Al-Badri warned against the gravity of the persistance by the OPEC member countries to produce oil in the present quantity saying that "if production continues at its present level, prices will not begin to rise for many years to come." He added that "Libya has been trying its best to control its production and to encourage other countries to reach agreement on cutting their oil production by one means or another."

The southern deputies' walkout was mainly to press for their demands pertinent to their representation in the Cabinet and their rejection to the member of Supreme Council Pacifico Lado Lolik who represents the south.

SPLA's Garang Addresses Pachala Citizens

EA131420 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in Arabic 1316 GMT 12 May 86

[Speech made by SPLA-SPLM leader Colonel Dr John Garang de Mabior "a few days ago" in "the liberated town of Pachala," southeast Sudan — Garang in Arabic; recorded]

[Text] I wish to salute the command on behalf of you all. I want to salute the (Okuon) Battalion. Joseph (Okuon) was a good patriotic son of this country. He did as a member of Anyanya-1 for the homeland. We have made the battalion bear his name. No militant shall die. We have trained you; you came here and you captured Pachala. I salute your commander, Francis (Jago), his officers, all his NCO's and all the soldiers of (Okuon) who have done this great deed together with the detachment from Aqrab [Scorpion] Battalion [applause].

Likewise, I would like to salute Chief (Agada) and his militia, because without the citizens' support for us Pachala would not have been captured. You did a splendid job with the plan you had. The capture of Pachala is a historic event. It was a good job. We came here on 28 April. I came to see for myself whether or not Pachala had been captured. But I knew it had been captured [words indistinct].

They have destroyed all of it. They destroyed it, destroyed it completely, destroyed it, destroyed it. These are nice words. We said we shall destroy everything and then build again. We shall destroy Pachala, we shall destroy Malakal, we shall destroy Khartoum itself. And then we shall build again. If we do not destroy, then we shall not be free. [Words indistinct]

We are free. We can do anything here. We can build Pachala and make it a great city, much more than it was. We can build; we can set up schools here. We can set up a hospital here. We can bring tractors and start agriculture here. We shall build hospitals. We can do everything. The country is ours. We have liberated it.

[Word indistinct] said you are not building schools. You are not building a dispensary. You are not setting up farms. You have not brought tractors. The minority in Khartoum who form the government say you are not Anuak, you are not Dinka, you are not Nuer, you are not Shilluk, you are not Latuka — all people must be Arabs. Why? We are not Arabs, but God created us all. Suppose someone gets up and says all Sudan must be Anuak, people will say this fellow is mad. But our Arab brothers there in Khartoum say all people must be Arabs. What is this? What language is this?

The subject is one of right and might. We have right on our side. Even God Himself knows we have right on our side. He created us. Was He (?wrong)? They no right on their side. We are demanding that all people should be Sudanese. The Anuak are Sudanese, the Nuer are Sudanese, the Arabs themselves are Sudanese, the Dinka are Sudanese. All these are Sudanese and there should be justice. What we are saying is simple language, but what are they doing? [Words indistinct] because they are strong. We have come now to destroy the might and implement what is right. What we say is right. Right is on our side.

There in Khartoum they have no weapons factory. They do not make G-3's in Khartoum. They do not make Kalashnikovs in Khartoum, nor are they made by the SPLA in forests. We all go begging [for weapons]. We also go begging so what [words indistinct]. The Khartoum minority are also beggars. They have G-3's in their hands. We and they do not manufacture weapons. [Words indistinct]

We shall also proceed. Our hearts must not weaken. [Words indistinct] the country is years. Do not have the heart of a slave. [Words indistinct]. I have been to (Kashibo). [Words indistinct] We shall build schools, we shall start farming so that the country moves forward. If we are strong, the people will respect us. We should unite ourselves. We need unity based on equality, not unity of one group (?over) another, and another group sitting on the mountains saying what can I do for the southerners, what can I do for the Nuba people, what can I do for the people of the eastern areas?

No, this is not the case. We should all sit together, the enemy is talking nonsense. They say the SPLA is against the Arabs. We are not against the Arabs. They say the SPLA has no religion, that they are communists. This is also wrong. You have now captured your land here in Pachala. Here we shall restore the rule of the ancestors. Chief (Agada) is in his right place. He has captured his land. He will build schools. He will build hospitals. He will bring the tractors and we are with him.

The country is yours. You hold on to the town firmly. Any assistance we have, we shall bring to you. [Words indistinct] If there is medicine, we shall continue to supply it.

We have come late. You have seen Comrade William, Lieutenant Colonel William [Nyuan Bany], he has not time to address you. He is our chief of staff. But we shall return to [word indistinct] the land with you. Major (Salva) also has no time to address you, because he is the deputy head of operations. [Words indistinct] you continue with your work. [Words indistinct) he also has no time to address you. But today, on 28 April we are here in Pachala. We address our (?salute) to you. We say congratulations, brothers, congratulations to Chief (Agada), to the militia and to all our people, together with Commander Francis and Major (Atali) for the great work you have done in capturing Pachala. Thank you very much. Tomorrow you will celebrate this event. Do not let them come down on you again. Than you very much once again. We have little time and we have to go.

Addresses Recruits From Equatoria

EA132251 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in Arabic 1300 GMT 13 May 86

[Address by SPLM-SPLA leader Colonel Dr John Garang de Mabior to recruits from Equatoria at SPLA headquarters; date not given — live or recorded]

[Excerpts] The weapons you have heard about are big ones; they can shoot down an aircraft. We are here sitting in Boma, but they will not dare come here. If he [not further identified] comes here with 20 aircraft, we have more than 20 weapons of that type. They are in all those mountains. We shall down those 20 aircraft.

This is force. Force is important, because a long time ago our rights were usurped by force. There is no way out except to retake those rights by force. I will not go to those people in Khartoum, saying: Fellow, give me a small government in Juba, give me a small government in Malakal, give me a small government in Waw. Why? Who are they? Who are those people in Khartoum? Are they up on a mountain bestowing rights on the people?

We have the weapons, we have the strength — and all we need is the men. We need the men. The Khartoum government ought not to be asked: What will you give us? Before his fall, Numayri said, you, Dr John, come and be my first deputy. What for? First deputy for whom? This was a joke.

I told him: You want to make me the first deputy but what about the other people? What will you do for them? He said: I shall give you six ministries in Khartoum. I said: What else? He said: I'll give you the whole south. I said: What else? He said [words indistinct]. I said no, no, no. I said: Even if you offer me the post of president — forget about vice president — I shall not accept if the old Sudan is to remain as it is. What we want is a new Sudan. We shall build a new Sudan. We shall not beg for anything from those people. We shall do it in actuality. We know what our people want, because we are of them.

The SPLA belongs to all the people of Equatoria, Bahr al-Ghazal, Upper Nile, in northern Sudan, the Nubah mountains, the Beja, Darfur, and Khartoum itself. We shall be going to Khartoum. What the colonialists did in the past was to throw a bone to the southerners. The southerners began quarreling over the bone. This is old politics. We have given it up. We want the meat. We want the real meat, not the bone.

This is all I want to say to you. Thank you very much and go in good health. Go and do good training. Be militant and do not listen to those who want to divide us, because there is no discrimination in the SPLA. Do your training, be self-disciplined and proceed to liberate your country. This is what I want to say.

WESTERN SAHARA

APS Comments on Recent Morocco-Polisario Contacts

LD140919 Algiers APS in Arabic 0715 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Algiers, 14 May (APS) — The two stages of preliminary contacts under the auspices of UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar and the personal representative of the current chairman of the OAU, Senegalese Armed Forces Minister Medoune Fall, between Morocco and the Polisario within the framework of the joint good offices of the UN and the OAU for the implementation of the peace plan approved by the OAU, the Nonaligned Movement and the United Nations in order to complete the decolonization of the Western Sahara, took place during the periods 9-14 April and 5-9 May 1986.

These two series of talks were marked by the publication of a press statement which placed these efforts within the framework of Resolution 40/50, by which the UN General Assembly requested the current chairman of the OAU and the UN secretary general to work to induce the two parties concerned with the Western Sahara dispute — that is to say Morocco and the Polisario — to negotiate in accordance with Resolution 104 issued by the 19th OAU summit regarding the conditions for a cease-fire and the holding of a referendum on the self-determination of the Sahroui people on the condition that the referendum should be peaceful and just and should take place free of any administrative or military pressures.

These contacts, held under the auspices of Mr de Cuellar, were shrouded with a great deal of secrecy and have aroused much comment in the international press, which often surrounds this issue with some sort of ambiguity and misrepresentatiion instead of using the available information to present true and detailed clarifications about the nature of this process, or of portraying its real dimension within the efforts being made by Africa and the international community to put an end to this armed conflict resulting from the rejection of the established right of a people to self-determination and independence. In actual fact, any time the parties to this dispute allow an opportunity for discussions signifies a positive development even when these preliminary contacts are not the final negotiations. The history of decolonization has proved that negotiations always triumph over weapons when there is a political will to build a future unburdened by the difficulties of the present which lead the parties to move from military confrontation to searching for a peace settlement to the dispute. With regard to the Western Sahara where the dispute of decolonization has been going on for the past 11 years, we cannot but feel pleased if the efforts which started in New York on 9 April constitute, in actual fact, a move toward such a development.

But regrettably, there is nothing to suggest that matters are proceeding in this direction, as there is no tangible information confirming that Morocco has abandoned its military option in the Western Sahara. The official statements of the Moroccan leaders — beginning with the messages addressed by the Moroccan Government to the UN secretary general expressing its acceptance of the good offices — make one think that Morocco has not jumped on the bandwagon and declared its adherence to these efforts, except in order to break the regional and international isolation in which it found itself throughout the years. In fact, if the goal is really to break the isolation, then it is quite easy to discern so in the program adopted by the Moroccan delegation during the recent ministerial meeting of the coordination bureau of the Nonaligned Movement held in Delhi, as the delegation tried in vain to stem the tide that renewed adherence to the peace plan established by the OAU and the United Nations. The delegation used the pretext that Morocco has embarked on an action in order to implement this precise plan.

In accordance with the mission entrusted to them by the United Nations, the current OAU chairman and the UN secretary general have exerted joint efforts for the implementation of the peace plan that provides for direct negotiations between Morocco and the Polisario with a view to reaching a political agreement on the conditions for a cease-fire and the arrangements for the referendum to be held to determine the fate of the Western Sahara people.

The clarity of objective and the specification of the course to be followed should help President Abdou Diouf, who was one of the drafters of Resolution 104 issued by the 19th OAU summit conference, and Perez de Cuellar to increase their persuasive ability, and to continue with the task entrusted to them to insure the success expected by the peoples of Morocco, Africa and the international community.

The practical cooperation brought about by UN Resolution 40/50 between the United Nations and the OAU in the implementation of the joint peace plan raises hopes about placing the good offices in a position that can tackle all the dimensions for the liquidation of colonialism in the Western Sahara and prevent Morocco from resorting to the regional and international organizations it exploited in the past. Since there is no longer any ambiguity over the nature of the conflict or the identity of the parties to it, there is no longer any room for dodging the requisites for the genuine liquidation of colonialism in the Western Sahara through that people's free expression of their true will. Hence the issue now depends on the inevitable withdrawal of the Moroccan forces and administration from the Western Sahara, bearing a full sense of responsibility to enable the Saharan people to determine their own fate without any pressure

The Polisario has affirmed on more than one occasion its support for the peace plan. This responsible position toward the challenge of peace has won the SDAR a growing international sympathy; this accords it, in its capacity as a full OAU member, the recognition of 64 countries on all continents.

Algeria and Mauritania, which have encouraged the current OAU chairman and UN secretary general in their efforts, have been invited to pursue these good offices as observers. By accepting this invitation, Algeria and Mauritania, prompted by the hope of putting an end to the conflict among the brothers at their borders, reflect the profound aspiration of all the Arab Maghreb peoples for the restoration of peace in their region as a result of reconciliation between the Moroccan and Saharan peoples.

The realization of the unified destiny of the peoples of the Greater Arab Maghreb requires the removal of the main obstacle barring the way to building the greater Arab Maghreb — the Western Sahara dispute. It is also an urgent matter that understandings concerning the establishment of peace should finally overcome myopic views. Although it is quite true that the failure suffered in the past by the hopes that resulted from the direct contacts between Morocco and the Polisario and the good offices made by the countries of the Arab Maghreb to bridge the gap between the two parties of the dispute have taught us to be cautious, the belief in the necessity of putting an end to this disunity among brothers makes any effort having such aims a worthwhile effort that carries some weight. Today more than ever before the matter rests with Morocco.

AFP Journalist Declared Persona Non Gratta

AB131635 Paris AFP in French 1416 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Ndjamena, 13 May (AFP) — An AFP Journalist, Jean-Claude Chapon, who has been on post to Central Africa since 1983, has been declared persona non gratta in Chad by the country's authorities. This decision was made known verbally to AFP by Michel Froud, permanent secretary at the Chadian Foreign Ministry. He indicated that Chad's embassies have received the order not to issue any visa to Mr Chapon.

Mr Froud reproached the AFP journalist for "participating in a misinformation and mind-poisoning campaign" through his articles, affirming that Mr Chapon wrote "false information aimed at deiscrediting us (Chad)," without citing any specific cases.

In a telegram addressed to the Chadian authorities on Tuesday, the management of AFP "strongly protested against this decision made against a journalist while carrying out his duties and which constitutes a flagrant threat to the freedom to inform."

Jean-Claude Chapon was posted to Central Africa in June 1983. He went frequently to Chad where he covered the major events in the country, notably the French military operations "Manta" and "Epervier."

Sao Tome Foreign Minister Leaves, President Due

AB131200 Libreville Africa No. 1 in French 0630 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] The Sao Tome president, Manuel Pinto da Costa, will arrive today in Libreville in Gabon. The aim of this visit is the strengthening of the cooperation which exists between the two countries. Yesterday already the Sao Tome foreign minister, Fradique Menezes, who completed a visit of some days in our capital, commented on the intention of his country to adhere to UDEAC [Customs and Economic Union of Central Africa] and on its integration in the franc zone. He talked with our counterpart Jean Nassana.

[Begin Menezes recording] Sao Tome and Principe is a Central African country and we assume our membership of Central Africa. We are all conscious of the fact that we belong to this subregion. Therefore our insularity — which means that we are far from the continent with all the difficulties that it implies, particularly in the field of communications — means that we are not known; nobody knows what is happening in Sao Tome. People may therefore think that because of this isolation, we do not seek to be close to Central Africa. But we do want our place within this subregion. We assume our belonging to this subregion, as I have told you before, and we accept all that this implies in the political and economic field.

Now, you are asking me about our possible integration within the UDEAC and the franc zone. Yes, it is true that we are preparing the files with a clear and precise analysis of the UDEAC in view of our possible adhesion to that body. It is an institution of the subregion and, I repeat again, we assume our membership in it. Therefore, we have to envisage our membership in the UDEAC in the very near future. We are currently studying the issue and the arguments for and against. We have a regime that we inherited from the Portuguese colonialism which differs from both French and British colonialisms. This was normal. And we want to see the impact our adhesion to that organ can have on our economy. We are already a member of the CEAC [Central African Economic Community] and it is absolutely normal that we seek membership in the UDEAC because it is an institution. And knowing that Central Africa is one of the African subregions belonging to the franc zone, we can once again possibly plan in a very positive way, to adhere to that zone. We cannot state positively that this will take place today or tomorrow; we do not know. But we are studying the arguments for and against and when the time comes, we will take the right decision because Sao Tome is prepared to assume the fact it belongs to this particular subregion within which we want to be integrated. [end recording]

Sao Tome President Arrives

AB131658 Libreville Africa No.1 in French 1230 GMT 13 May 86

President Pinto da Costa, who was welcomed by his Gabonese counterpart at the Leon Mba Airport late this morning, thus begins a working visit which will end next Friday. Prepared since last Friday by his minister of foreign affairs, the visit of the Sao Tomean president, who will hold discussions with President Omar Bongo today, will be devoted particularly to bilateral cooperation and Sao Tome's diplomatic offensive aimed at putting an end to its isolation. One of the objectives of this diplomatic offensive is to adhere to the Customs and Economic Union of Central Africa [UDEAC].

First State Commissioner Receives Soviet Ambassador

AB131745 Kinshasa Domestic Service in French 1130 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] It seems that the situation is returning to normal at Chernobyl and the nuclear station, it seems, should be able to resume its activities in the very near future. This statement was made this morning by Valentine Soldatov, the Soviet ambassador to Zaire, following the audience granted him by the first state commissioner, Citizen Kengo wa Dondo. The two personalities also discussed relations between Zaire and the Soviet Union in the political, economic as well as cultural fields. This was the point stressed by Valentine Soldatov when he spoke to our correspondent (Bitinin Ndaye Kimtako):

[Begin recording] [Soldatov in French] First, we discussed at length problems concerning our bilateral relations, in the economic field in particular. I cannot tell you concretely the details of these discussions, but I can tell you frankly that we discussed projects that we want to implement in the shortest possible time.

[(Kimtako)] Mr Ambassador, I want to recall one of the projects. In the area of sports, you once announced the intensification of relations between the Soviet and Zairian Olympic committees. I do not know whether negotiations have begun or are at an advanced stage. At what stage are these negotiations?

[Soldatov] We are at an advanced stage concerning this protocol agreement between the two Olympic committees. However, we have already drafted the project for cultural relations. I think it will be signed in the forthcoming days.

[(Kimtako)] One is really not clear about what is currently happening at the Chernobyl nuclear station. Can you give us precise details on this issue?

[Soldatov] What happened at our nuclear station in Chernobyl was (?an accident) like any other accident. This accident happened on 26 April. But, in the meatime, the situation is firmly under control. During a trip to the Soviet Union, the general directors of the International Atomic Energy authority saw that the repair works being made by the Soviet Government correspond to the norms. Now, in the region where this station is located, the situation has returned to normal. The reactors are almost (?dormant) and the temperature has already fallen to 300 degrees. The radioactivity situation is almost [passage indistinct].

Joint Border Commission With Benin Ends Meeting

AB092201 Ouagadougou Domestic Service in French
1900 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Within the framework of regular meetings and taking into account the consolidation in the good relations of cooperation, fraternity and militant solidarity between the People's Republic of Benin and Burkina Faso, the joint commission on the demarcation of the borders, held its third meeting in Cotonou on 5, 6 and 7 May 1986. The Burkinabe delegation, led by Ernest Nongma Ouedraogo, minister of territorial administration and security, included nine members, among whom were the high commissioners of the Tapoa and Gourma Provinces. The 10-member Beninese delegation was led by Comrade Girigissou Gado, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the People's Revolutionary Party of Benin, PRPB, and minister of equipment and transport. With him was Comrade Edouard Zodehougan, minister delegate to the president of the Republic in charge of interior, public security and territorial administration.

At the opening of the deliberations, the two delegation leaders recalled in their respective addresses the historic ties of friendship and brotherliness existing happily between the two revolutionary peoples — Beninese and Burkinabe — whom no border dispute has ever divided and who, in spite of the subversive maneuvers of international imperialism, have continued to develop withinthe same revolutionary framework. The two delegation leaders stressed the need for the experts of the two sides to pool their efforts in order to achieve concrete results, thus demonstrating the firm political desire of the two heads of state to consolidate the relations of mutual understanding that have always existed between the two brotherly countries.

To this end, the deliberations which were held in an atmosphere of brotherliness and mutual understanding, enabled the participants to make a deep examination and a judicious analysis of the various items on the meeting's agenda. After the deliberations, the following major areas of work were identified: The need for further search for the documents necessary for the commission's work; the need for the selection of a number of basic documents that will enable a precise and the correct demarcation of the border lines; the need for dispatching a joint mission to friendly countries in order to deepen the search for more documents necessary for the pursuit of the commission's work.

The two delegations expressed happiness about the quality of the work done. During his visit, the Burkinabe minister for territorial administration and security was received in audience by our great comrade in struggle, Mathieu Kerekou, chairman of the PRPB Central Committee, president of the Republic, head of state, and chairman of the National Executive Council. Also, the Burkinabe minister held talks with his Beninese counterpart.

The next meeting of the joint commission on the demarcation of the borders will be held in Ouagadougou in the first half of November 1986. After the visit, the Burkinabe delegation expressed its warm and sincere thanks to the Beninese people, to their vanguard party, the PRPB and to their president, his excellency Comrade Mathieu Kerekou, for the fraternal, warm and militant welcome given to it during its stay on the free African soil of Benin. The leader of the Burkinabe delegation, Comrade Ernest Nongma Ouedraogo, minister of territorial administration and security, asked comrade Girigissou Gado, minister of equipment and transport, to renew to his excellency, President Mathieu Kerekou, and to the Government of the People's Republic of Benin, the fraternal and militant greetings of his excellency Captain Thomas Sankara, chairman of the National Council of the Revolution and president of Burkina Faso.

Foreign Secretary Receives Argentine Special Envoy

AB131650 Accra Domestic Service in English
1300 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] A special envoy of the Argentine minister of foreign affairs, Henrique de la Guardia, this morning called on the secretary for foreign affairs Dr Obed Asamoah, in Accra. Their talks were held behind closed doors, but Dr Asamoah later told newsmen that the envoy came to explain the Argentinian [as heard] side of the incident in which a shipload of arms and mercenaries planning to attack some targets in Accra was intercepted in Brazil early this year. One of the leading characters in the plot was Godfrey Osei.

Dr Asamoah said when he visited Brazil to hear their side of the story, he was unable to go to Argentina. The arrangement therefore was that an envoy would come to Ghana. He said the envoy had delivered a number of documents and information relating to the affair, but the contents have not been disclosed. Dr Asamoah said the documents will be studied so that investigations from the Ghanaian end can also be completed. He said all the pieces, Brazilian and Argentinian, have to be connected to get a full picture of what was intended. The secretary said the trial of the mercenaies has begun in Brazil and Argentina is investigating the role of some of its nationals. Those found guilty will be dealt with according to the laws of those countries.

Dr Asamoah expressed gratitude for the full cooperation of both the Brazilian and Argentinian Governments.

Doe, Chadian Foreign Minister Meet, Release Issued

AB132140 Monrovia Radio ELWA in English 2000 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] The president of Liberia, Dr Samuel Kanyon Doe, has reiterated the Liberian Government's full support for the government of President Hissein Habre of Chad and called upon all foreign forces to withdraw from northern Chad as the first step towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict in that region.

According to a Foreign Ministry release issued in Monrovia today, President Doe gave the assurance on Monday when he met with the Chadian foreign minister, Gouara Lassou. The Chadian envoy, who was accompanied to the Executive Mansion by Foreign Minister Dr J. Bernard Blamo, arrived in Liberia at the weekend with a special message from President Hissein Habre to Dr Samuel K. Doe.

President Doe regretted the failure of recent mediation efforts by the Congolese president, Denis Sassou-Nguesso, into the Chadian conflict and promised that he will undertake a new initiative at the next OAU summit aimed at ending Libyan occupation of Chad which he described as a complete violation of the OAU Charter. Dr Doe also said he will mandate Foreign Minister Blamo, who will be attending the special session of the UN General Assembly this month, to raise the issue of Chad. The Liberian leader, however, urged President Habre to continue to support dialogue among the various factions as the only guarantee of a lasting solution to the problem confronting Chad.

President Doe further stated that in spite of the severe social economic problems facing many African countries, Liberia, as Africa's (?first) republic, will continue to play a leading role in African affairs, particularly in advocating a peaceful settlement of disputes among African states.

Sources: Visit by PLO Leader 'Arafat Postponed

AB121620 Paris AFP in French 1458 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Bamako, 12 May (AFP) — The visit which the chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization Executive Council, Mr Yasir 'Arafat, was to pay to Bamako on Monday has been postponed, it was learned in the afternoon from sources close to official circles. No explanation has been given by official sources on the postponement of the visit of the PLO president who was expected in Bamako at the end of the 24-hour visit which he paid to Niger.

Mr 'Arafat, who since 2 May has been on an African tour to several countries south of the Sahara (Nigeria, Gabon, Togo, Burkina Faso, Niger) had made a stopover at Bamako airport during which he held a discussion with the Malian head of state, General Moussa Traore, before setting out on the journey.

SIERRA LEONE

AFP Provides Background on May General Elections

AB091543 Paris AFP in English 1142 GMT 9 May 86

[By Rod Mac-Johnson]

[Text] Freetown, May 9 (AFP) — A total of 346 candidates will contest 102 seats in the May 30 general elections in Sierra Leone, according to an approved list of candidates released here Thursday by the country's only party, the All Peoeple's Congress (APC).

But there has been widespread criticism of the candidates selected for the first parliamentary poll since President Joseph Momoh succeeded Siaka Stevens last November, and fears that he will not get the public and parliamentary support he is seeking.

According to the list, five candidates, including First Vice-President Francis Minah and Second Vice-President Abu Kamara, have been returned unopposed since their opponents failed to fulfil what the party newspaper WE YONE called "the requirements of the party code of conduct". But 50 of the 164 unsuccessful applicants told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE they still did not know what party officials have been calling "a code of conduct."

Nomination day is on May 12 and there is widespread speculation that many more candidates will be returned unopposed as backstage wooing of opponents to step down is underway.

The election will be contested by 12 women, the most yet in a general election in Sierra Leone. In the elections of 1977 women were all but barred from selection, while that of 1982 saw only one deputy elected.

The minister of state for party affairs, E.T. Kamara, said the code of conduct stipulated that a candidate be "a fully paid up active member for at least 12 months preceding the date appointed for nomination."

Campaigning so far has been relatively violence-free, particularly after a former minister of finance, Sahr Gbomor, was barred from contesting after his supporters allegedly disrupted a political rally of his rival, Eya M'Bayo, a former ambassador to France and the Soviet Union. The attack left at least three dead, according to police sources.

The campaign itself has been lacklustre, a far cry from the massive demonstration of support which ushered in President Momoh's administration, and a passive response is feared on May 30. Observers here are blaming the widespread scarcity of basic consumer items such as sugar, rice and milk as the main reason for voters' apathy. The country is again going through a critical fuel crunch despite an agreement reached in March with Algeria for the supply of 60,000 tonnes of crude oil.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) delegation which was due early this month to resume talks on Sierra Leone's application for a rescue package will now come in July, Usually reliable Finance Ministry sources said.

President Momoh said at his inauguration in January that he needed a new parliament from which he would select competent ministers to tackle the country's many problems. But with many of what some electors are calling "corrupt and implicated politicians" assured of victory against weak candidates, the president's aspirations seem far from assured.

Observers also point to the virtual absence of concrete issues in the campaign although the country's economy is in its worst plight since independence 25 years ago. Candidates are only pledging individually at their election rallies that they would help "President Momoh in his task of national reconstruction."

Though WE YONE praised what it called "the liberalism of the party in the allocation of party symbols to aspiring candidates" and the government said it was committed to "making parliament less attractive to those who want to make it a channel of getting rich" there is widespread surprise at the similar backgrounds of most candidates. Twenty percent of the candidates are medical doctors, 15 percent lawyers, five percent journalists, 25 percent academics and 10 percent engineers, while the rest are drawn from trade unionists, businessmen and top civil service administrators. The candidates include three sons of former President Stevens.

The campaign too has had its lighter side. One contestant, a recently-returned political science graduate from the United States, on his campaign poster listed his entire qualifications including an examination he passed at primary school level. He also listed the qualifications of his wife who is not a candidate.

President Eyadema Meets With World Bank Officials

AB131840 Lome Domestic Service in French 1230 GMT 13 May 86

[Excerpts] The founding chairman of the Rally of the Togolese People [RPT], President Gnassingbe Eyadema, this morning received a 3-member delegation of the World Bank led by Mr (Robert Billings,) division head in the Program II Department, West African region of the World Bank. Other members of the delegation were Mr (Swen Chelstrom,) resident representative of the World Bank in Togo, and Mr (Emmanuel Mbi,) future resident representative of the World Bank in Togo Mr (Mbi) will assume office in July this year.

At the end of the audience, which was also attended by member of the Central Committee and Minister of Planning and Industry Mr Yaovi Adodo, Mr (Robert Billings) made the following statement to the press:

[Begin Billings recording] The president of the Republic has honored us by receiving us here today. He welcomed us in a completely perfect way; it was a great honor for us to have been received by the head of state. We talked briefly about the efforts of the Togolese Government towards economic development, and towards economic expansion. The president stated the fears which are being entertained about the rains this year. And we promised him that all our prayers will be directed to Merciful God to help you in this regard, given that man has not as yet mastered the rains.

Another aim of my mission here is to present the new resident representative in Togo, Mr (Emmanuel Mbi), who by July will replace Mr (Chelstrom) as our envoy here in Lome. I am sure that Mr (Mbi) will do much to ensure a continuous and productive dialogue between Togo and the World Bank, as has been done by Mr (Chelstrom) during the past 3 years.

ANGOLA

'Luanda Declaration' Issued by Five-Nation Summit

MB131352 Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 5 May 86 p 3

["Luanda Declaration," issued in Luanda at the conclusion of the sixth summit of the five Portuguese-speaking African nations on 19 April 1986]

[Text] 1. We, the presidents of the People's Republic of Angola, the Republic of Cape Verde, the Republic of Guinea-Bissau, the People's Republic of Mozambique, and the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe have assessed the progress of the situation in southern Africa since our fifth summit in Sao Tome.

2. We have noted that aggression against our sister republics Angola and Mozambique has been intensified. The Lusaka accord and the Nkomati Accord, which could have brought adecisive turnabout for peace in the region, have been grossly violated by the government of South Africa.

3. The Gorongosa documents clearly demonstrate the decision of Pretoria's warmongering circles to disregard the Nkomati Accord and continue their aggression against Mozambique. The South African army's attempt to destroy the Molongo oil installations in Cabinda Province immediately after the official announcement on the completion of the withdrawal of the South African forces from Angola clearly shows the double standards of Pretoria's policy. These double standards as seen in the violation of the Lusaka accord and the Nkomati Accord have even embarrassed Pretoria'sclosest allies, who found it necessary to publicly condemn such an attitude.

4. During the assessed period, the U.S. Government has profoundly changed its position despite:

— having always stated that it supports the peaceful and negotiated solution of the conflicts in southern Africa as put forward by the governments of the republics;
— having continuously reiterated the need to ease the intensity of confrontations;
— having sought to play the role of an honest broker between the governments of the People's Republic of Angola and the Republic of South Africa.

During the same period, the U.S. Administration implemented an active policy condemning international terrorism at the international level.

5. To the great surprise of the international community, particularly the southern African countries, the U.S. Government, acting against the fundamentals of its stated policy:

— officially decided to receive at the highest level the ringleader of a gang that kidnaps, rapes, maims, and murders Angolan children, women, and old people; destroys, pillages, and plunders villages, schools, maternity clinics, and hospitals, and takes hostages and assassinates peaceful guest workers, experts, nuns, priests, and religious workers;

— openly and officially decided to supply sophisticated war material and financial assistance to that terrorist gang.

6. These actions, far from promoting peace and stability in southern Africa, serve to encourage organized terrorism and intensify violence in the region. They put the role of the United States as a broker in the region at stake by showing it considers this a form of legitimate terrorism.

7. In order to guarantee independence, territorial integrity, and national unity, in 1974 the MPLA agreed to sign the Alvor Accord with the Portuguese Government in conjunction with the FNLA and UNITA and formed a transition government together with Portugal, despite the sad record of treason against the Angolan people by these two puppet organizations.

With the support of international reaction, the FNLA and UNITA joined forces and attempted to destroy the MPLA. They failed because the people cannot be liquidated, and the MPLA embodies the authentic and legitimate aspirations of the Angolan people.

8. Our peoples and governments have noted with great concern that during this period in certain countries, attemptx were made togive respect and dignity to self-confessed traitors of the national liberation struggle. They are trying to force our peoples to accept these professional criminals as part of the governments of Angola and Mozambique.

9. We reaffirm the condemnation, made at the fifth summit, regarding the complicity and connivance of certain political, economic, financial, and military circles of some countries, particulary Portugal, in aggression, propaganda, and terrorist actions against the People's Republic of Angola and the People's Republic of Mozambique. This complicity is even more odious when nationals and enterprises from those same countries are the victims of such crimes.

10. The South African maneuvers have continued to keep Namibia a colony and to block the application of UN Resolution 435/78. With the support of the U.S. Government, South Africa seeks to blame the People's Republic of Angola for the perpetuation of the colonial regime in Namibia.

11. Namibia, a former German colony, would have normally attained its independence at the same time as other former German colonies under the custody of Great Britain and France. That was how Tanganyika, Cameroon, and Togo attained independence in the early 1960's when Angola was still a Portuguese colony. By 1965 the United Nations established the Council for Namibia to take responsibility for leading this country under its trusteeship to independence. The colonial South African regime then prevented the independence of the territory.

12. In 1978, with the approval of the South African Government and by unanimous vote of the UN Security Council, Resolution 435/78 was adopted.

New maneuvers began. With the support of the United States, the South African Government began a process of making the Namibian people's inalienable right to independence conditional on questions which are absolutely alien to the territory and over which the Namibian people have no decision-making power. These maneuvers forced the Western contact group to break its solidarity with South Africa and the United States. Today, as in the past, the sole objective of the maneuvers is to maintain the colonial occupation of Namibia and prevent Africa and the international community from centering their attention and efforts on the liquidation of apartheid, a crime against humanity.

13. Our five countries await with anticipation the authentic implementation, on 1 August 1986, of the South African declaration on the independence of Namibia in accordance with UN Resolution 435/78.

14. We reaffirm that the People's Republic of Angola, a peaceful nation, wants peace, development, and cooperation with all countries of the world on the basis of internationally acknowledged principles of international law, regardless of their political, economic, and social system.

15. We appeal to the U.S. Government to resume its positive role in the struggle for peace, stability, and progress in southern Africa. It is therefore necessary that, as a precondition, the U.S. Government reviews its attitude towardsupporting organized terrorism and decides to unconditionally supportthe right of the Namibian people to self-determination and independence.

16. We solemnly reaffirm the indestructible unity of our peoples, parties, and governments, strengthened in the common ideals guiding us, strengthened through history, blood, and the example of so many heroes and martyrs of our fatherlands, and embodied in the immortal personalites of Eduardo Mondlane, Amilcar Cabral, and Agostinho Neto.

17. We reiterate our loyalty to the principles of the OAU and the UN charters and the ideals of the Nonaligned Movement.

18. We praise and identify with the efforts made by the People's Republic of Angola and the People's Republic of Mozambique to guarantee peace, security, stability and development in the region.

19. WE, THE HEADS OF STATE OF THE FIVE FRATERNAL COUNTRIES, solemnly declare that we want southern Africa to be a zone of peace and prosperity where true cooperation among the peoples of the region and between the region and the rest of the world prevails without discrimination.

20. We would like to point out this region's growth in the way of life in Angola and Mozambique, where men and women of all races, colors, and religious creeds are brothers and are covered and defended by the banner of their united fatherland, following their destiny, and are engaged in building their future through democratic institutions.

21. We reiterate our conviction that there is no conflict among the peoples of southern Africa. The sole existing conflicts are those between all peoples and Pretoria's belligerent regime. In brief, the apartheid regime is the sole cause of violence and war in southern Africa.

22. We want peace, progress, and well-being for our peoples. We want to see the children of Angola and Mozambique, who for over 2 decades have only experienced war, enjoy the marvel of peace. We thus have established maternity clinics for their birth, schools for their study, and hospitals for their treatment.

SOUTH AFRICA

Pik Botha Comments on End of Apartheid

MB121735 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1733 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] House of Delegates, May 12, SAPA — South Africa would not suddenly become a paradise after apartheid had gone, Mr Pik Botha, minister of foreign affairs, said today. Replying to points raised in the house in his budget vote debate, he said parliamentarians should take careful note of this. He said there were elements in the country and abroad who would not rest until power was handed to certain ideological groups.

They were enemies who would use every conceivable method to destroy the country in the pursuit of that aim — and just as blacks had the power to destroy South Africa, whites too also had such power. The question was whether the blacks as well as the whites should be allowed to do this.

The government, he said, held that all South Africans believing in democracy should come together on the basis of removal of apartheid and on the basis of sharing of power. The future of South Africa would be decided by South Africans and no one — not even the Eminent Persons Group (EPG) — would be allowed to coerce the republic into making changes or dictating the pace of reform. The outside world did not realise the resolve of South Africans wishing to effect changes. There is now a movement for change and only our own short-sightedness and our own unwillingness can hold up reform, he said.

It was the self-governing national state that had asked for it, he said.

EPG Arrives for Cape Town Talks 13 May

MB121137 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1055 GMT 12 May 86

[Excerpt] Cape Town, May 12, SAPA — The Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group [EPG] arrives in Cape Town tomorrow for talks with the South African Government described here as having reached "a very delicate stage." A spokesman for the Department of Foreign Affairs this morning said that there would be "no comment whatsoever" on the EPG visit, referring inquiries to a statement made in parliament by the minister, Mr Pik Botha, last Wednesday. "We want the situation to get back on the road as it was — out of the press," one ministry source said. Last Wednesday Mr Botha said during the debate on his budget vote that the EPG would return for talks in Cape Town this week but that "we will not talk and they will not talk because discussions have reached a very delicate stage."

This week will be the second time that the full EPG holds talks in Cape Town. In diplomatic circles many expect that talks will be directed mainly at reducing violence, obtaining the release of ANC leader Nelson Mandela on mutually acceptable terms and getting some form of dialogue going between the South African Government and the ANC, most likely with identifiable black nationalists within its ranks.

[Text] Cape Town, May 13, SAPA — The Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group [EPG] held three hours of discussions with the minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, today. A spokesman for Mr Botha confirmed the meeting and its duration. No further comment was available from either of the negotiating parties. No indication as to the resumption of talks between them or a possible meeting between the EPG and the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, was given.

ANC Denies Considering EPG-Sponsored Truce

MB121517 Dakar PANA in English 1510 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Lusaka, 12 May (ZANA/PANA) - The African National Congress (ANC) today in Lusaka refuted reports from South Africa that it is seriously considering a Commonwealth sponsored truce deal with Pretoria. An ANC spokesman said they have not received copies of the proposals made by the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group [EPG] to the apartheid regime and therefore cannot consider the proposals. He said the local paper which reported the matter over the weekend and which is edited by Zwelakhe Sisulu, son of senior ANC leader Walter Sisulu, misinterpreted the message sent to it by ANC. The local newspaper, THE NEW NATION, funded by the South African Catholic Church, reported that the ANC was studying a bid by the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group to bring it and the South African Government to the negotiating table.

The Eminent Persons Groups was set up last October at the Commonwealth summit in Nassau, Bahamas, to promote dialogue in South Africa as an alternative to economic sanctions and is headed by former Australian Premier Malcom Fraser. Memebrs of the group have already made several visits to South Africa and the group is expected there again tomorrow for talks with President Pieter Botha and anti-apartheid leaders.

The ANC spokesman in Lusaka declined to comment whether ANC would have considered the truce deal with racist South Africa if the Eminent Persons Group so recommended. He however, reiterated that ANC did not know what proposals the group has made to South Africa.

ANC Says Government Must Renounce Apartheid

MB121149 Dakar PANA in English 1100 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Lusaka, 12 May (ZANA/PANA) — The African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa has said the Pieter Botha regime should make an undertaking to renounce apartheid, the root cause of state terrorism, before any meaningful dialogue could ensue. The condition by the South African Government that the ANC should renounce violence is unacceptable without the Botha regime first creating a climate for a dialogue by not only denouncing but making an undertaking to dismantle the repressive policy of apartheid.

Spokesman for the ANC Tom Sebina, reacting in Lusaka today to intimation by Chief Gatsha Buthelezi that the South African Government should release the imprisoned ANC leader Nelson Mandela and lift a political ban on the ANC, said:

It is not a question of a change of heart by the chief, but because of various internal pressures. They are trying to get away from these pressures because the power of liberation struggle inside South Africa has intensified and heightened. The like of the Buthelezi clique have no alternative but to accept the reality of the liberation struggle as people mobilise themselves to dismantle the apartheid, Sebina said. The ANC, he said, would like a democratic process to prevail in which all the citizens would participate in running the affairs of their country without colour prejudice. Sebina said the ANC would not succumb to conditions set by the Botha regime. For us to renounce violence is totally unacceptable. The Botha regime should take the lead by first renouncing state terrorism — apartheid — the main root cause of the current violent tension in South Africa.

Cheif Buthelezi, the major political foe of the ANC inside South Africa, last weekend appeared to sidetrack from his political stance of denouncing the ANC by demanding the release of Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners, and lifting up the political ban on the ANC.

Heunis Notes Black Domination 'Unacceptable'

MB131757 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1756 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 13, SAPA — Black domination in South Africa was just as unacceptable as any other form of domination, the minister of constitutional development and planning, Mr Chris Heunis, said today. Replying to debate on his budget allocation, he said the protection and (political) participation of minority groups therefore had to be catered for in a consensus model not based on conflict, nor proportional representation.

"We have to move from a conflict model to a consensus model ... and this is why I appeal for solutions that take into account our society's group basis, but do not make numbers the norm for participation." There were different alternatives and models that were being considered and propagated but the eventual model would not be an imitation of any existing one. "Our society is complicated and that is why we need a state-concept that will consist of a variety of structures," Mr Heunis said. There was no doubt there were fundamental adaptations taking place in South Africa nd this should not be judged by the visibility of negotiations taking place, but rather by progress being made. "The full meaning of the many steps undertaken are largely not perceived in the face of unrest and violence which is more newsworthy than orderly development," he said. There came a time in the history of countries and nations when circumstances demanded people rise above petty differences. The House of Assembly was playing a leading and decisive role in South Africa's constitutional development and this was why it had to send a message out to the country and its people of greater unity among the communities it represented. "Not a unity with the intention of mobilising against other communities or groups, but one aimed at combining strengths in the interests of a greater unity among all moderate people in our country and to find answers to the problems in South Africa." This did not mean party political unity or the elimination of differences in the country, but that all communities should fight revolution together.

The primary question South Africans should answer first was not what type of democracy should be achieved, but if a democracy was possible. "I believe it is, and if we bind ourselves to this we can start the debate on what type of democracy it should be." Such a commitment would necesarily have to include a rejection of dictatorships, violence and revolution, he said.

Mandela Responsible for Imprisonment

[Text] The minister of constitutional development and planning, Mr Chris Heunis, says the time has come for people to stop arguing about the release of Nelson Mandela until such time as Mandela decides to comply with the conditions for his release. Speaking in his department's budget debate in parliament, Mr Heunis said that there is only one person that can affect Mandela's release and who could be held responsible for the fact that he is still in prison,and that is himself.

Minister Fears Polarization if Reform Rejected

MB131525 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 1500 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] The minister of national education, Mr F.W. de Klerk, says the future of blacks in South Africa will to a great extent be determined by their reaction to the opportunities that the government has created for political participation. Mr de Klerk was addressing a student debating society at the Rand Afrikaans University. He said he foresaw increasing polarization and catastrophic consequences for all if the government's reform policy was rejected and all or nothing attitude became general among blacks.

SUNDAY TIMES Reports on Lebowa Situation

MB120650 Johannesburg SUNDAY TIMES in English 11 May 86 p 7

["Special Report" by Allan Soule and Samkelo Kumalo]

[Text] Lebowa — poor and violent — is on the road to becoming the first homeland administration to collapse through a combination of poverty and revolutionary violence. This week members of the Legislative Assembly threatened to put up the shutters unless Pretoria meets their demands for more money to help with the struggling economy. The move comes at the same time as an announcement by Pretoria that the equally impoverished KwaNdebele homeland will get "independence" on December 11.

The Lebowa Government has been caught in the vice of rural poverty, insufficient money from Pretoria and a growing rural insurrection which has taken revolutionary activity from the main cities directly into the homelands. In a resolution adopted during a sitting on Wednesday, the Assembly drafted an appeal to the South African Government to increase its financial commitment to the development of the impoverished state. The resolution states that Pretoria's budget allocation to the Lebowa Government is vastly inadequate "and will not carry the government through the fiscal year as its needs, priorities and projects exceed the meagre budget".

But Lebowa's problems have spread far beyond its capital of Lebowakgomo, in the foothills of the Soutpansberg about 54 km south-east of Pietersburg. Apart from its financial dilemma, the government now faces a far more sinister crisis. For the past six months the tiny state has been wracked by radical-inspired unrest. School boycotts, political killings and the rise of black protest actions have begun to corrode the foundations of Lebowa's feudal-rooted system of government. The past six months have seen an unprecedented United Democratic Front (UDF) recruitment drive that has reached deep into the near-inaccessible rural areas of Sekhukuneland. Sources in Lebowa report that tribesmen are being introduced, sometimes violently, to the ideologies of the left, and that the level of politicisation among the rural population has dramatically increased.

The UDF drive — being planned and managed from the UDF headquartes, which has taken over the offices of the Students' Representative Council on the campus of the Univeristy of the North — has, according to its organisers, been uniquely successful. Local UDF officials now boast that it is the first time the organisation has gained and consolidated a significant foothold in a rural constituency. "At the last count, we had an estimated 50 civic and youth organisations which are now fully affiliated to our organisation," said Mr Peter Mokaba, general secretary of the UDF's northern Transvaal branch.

For a man who claims to be antiviolence, his rhetoric is paradoxically militant. The former ANC member talks of the spread of the "war of liberation," the undermining of the authority of the state and the destruction of Lebowa's system of government, which he claims to be repressive. "We have already had unparalleled success in organising 'village block' and 'street committees'. We intend removing the tribal chiefs as soon as possible. We have called on them to resign." He could not say how may, if any, had heeded the call. "Our ultimate intention is to allow the people to govern themselves. We have already established people's courts in some areas and are in the process of forming our own militia which will carry out the orders of the courts."

Members of Lebowa's 750-strong police force have now become the prime targets of UDF members. The organisation openly admits it has launched a campaign which it believes will eventually bring about the disintegration of the state's police force. Shopkeepers have been warned not to serve policemen. Taxi drivers are no longer allowed to carry any known policeman, and the word has been put out that no one should greet or talk to them.

Said Mr Mokaba: "Our aim is to ostracise every member of the police force. We have called on the families of these men to shun them. We are doing this for their own safety. When the war escalates we do not want to be responsible for the safety of these men and their families. When the time comes, there must be no grey areas, only black and white."

He refused to say how the safety of policemen and their families would be threatened.

In interviews this week several taxi drivers admitted that they feared intimidation if they ignored the UDF directive. Said one taxi operator: "We prefer to lose money by having fewer people to serve than to have our taxis burnt."

Lebowa's commissioner of police, Colonel P. Moloto, says he knows nothing of the campaign to ostracise his men. "I have heard nothing yet of this UDF strategy. The morale of my men is extremely high and, even if such a plot did exist, I am certain it would have no effect on the Lebowa police force." However, he does admit that the level of unrest in Lebowa has increased dramatically since the beginning of the year.

Lebowa government officials also deny that UDF attempts to remove chiefs and community councillors have been successful. Public relations officer Mr Serobi Maja said his government was unaware of attempts to remove tribal chiefs and elected community councillors. "This must be a new thing, and we are not aware of it. The government is prepared to meet all political organisations and have discussions on how to bring peace to the country."

Despite denials of knowledge of the UDF protest actions in the state, sources within Lebowa have confirmed a large-scale mobilisation of UDF forces. A tour through the tribal areas this week revealed clear evidence of unrest. In the eastern sector of Sekhukhuneland the burnt-out shells of cars and trucks bear evidence of the level of unrest in the area. Locals are loath to talk to strangers, and there are clear signs of confusion and fear.

The Lebowa government's financial dilemma is aggravating its internal political problems and signals a bleak future for the region. In a strongly worded resolution adopted by the Legislative Assembly, the South African Government is called upon to increase aid to Lebowa. "The Legislative Assembly of Lebowa, after having been presented with what it regards as a most inadequate budget of the Minister of Finance, and after a comparative study of white, coloured, and Indian budgets for the same period ... and after observing budget grants to some of the black municipal councils, the Assembly fails to reconcile itself to the rationale that gave rise to the disparity in grants."

Report Termed 'Misleading'

MB121511 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1546 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Pretoria, May 11, SAPA — A report which appeared in the SUNDAY TIMES today has been rejected by the UDF [United Democratic Front] Northern Transvaal region as "misleading, alarmist and irresponsible journalism." In statement to SAPA this afternoon the UDF Northern Transvaal region condemned the SUNDAY TIMES "News Focus" report on Lebowa and the role of the UDF. "We particularly condemn the attempt to put words into the mouths of the UDF spokesman" the statement said. "The report said: the former ANC member talks of the spread of the liberation war, the undermining of the authority of the state and the destruction of Lebowa's system of government...." "This is a statement we do not identify with," the UDF said.

The UDF statement also rejected as "misleading" the reports claim of the UDF Northern Transvaal region having taken over the offices of the Students Representative Council at the University of the North. "We have our own offices in an Indian complex in Pietersburg and have never used any other premises as our headquarters. These claims are absurd," it said.

The UDF rejected a reference in the SUNDAY TIMES report to a UDF programme to eliminate "Grey Areas." "We see the deliberate distortion of fact and irresponsible causing of alarm among the white population as an attempt by the SUNDAY TIMES to justify, legitimise and encourage the violence that the farmers have conducted against our own defenceless people. The programme spelled out by this report is not the programme of the UDF and the UDF does not want sensationalist reporters to draw a programme for it," the statement said.

"As a result of this report the UDF takes the following measures: we call on our affiliates to be weary of journalists and not allow themselves to be interviewed unless the interviews are approved by the regional offices of the national offices of UDF. We also intend taking the matter up with the Media Council and we ask the SUNDAY TIMES to make corrections if our relationship with it is to return to normal. We would also like to point out this report is in direct contrast to another report which appears in the same newspaper and is written by Mr Thomas Lekgothoane, who was present at the interview," the statement concluded.

Mixed Reaction to New Provincial System Detailed

MB130606 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Diverse reaction has been received to the announcement by the minister of constitutional development and planning, Mr Chris Heunis, that a new streamlined provincial system is to become effective on 1 July. The president of the council of chairmen and chief directors of development boards in South Africa, Dr (Tom Boshof), says the boards are being abolished because they no longer fit in with the current constitutional system. Dr (Boshof) confirmed that functions which in the past had been meant for black people would in future be exercised in respect of all population groups.

The senior member of the Executive Committee [MEC] in the Transvaal provincial council responsible for local government, Mr (John Griffiths), has welcomed Mr Heunis' announcement on the new second tier system of government. He said that in the new system provision would be made for the participation of all communities contributing towards politics on the second tier.

The leader of the Progressive Federal Party in the council, Mr (Douglas Gibson), said that Mr Heunis had neglected to spell out exactly how the second tier would work when the system of provincial councils disappeared. The MEC responsible for local government and the leader of the Cape provincial council, Mr (Willem Bouwer), has expressed the hope that the council will be able to consolidate during its last session so that the provincial administration will be able to continue its activities after the disbanding of the council with the least possible disruption.

The leader of the opposition in the Cape provincial council, Mr (Herbert Hirsh), has undertaken that members of the PFP will be constructive during this session, despite his opinion that the government is not keeping pace with reality in the country.

The leader of the Conservative Party, Dr Andries Treurnicht, said in his reaction to Mr Heunis' announcement that it would appear that the disappearance of provincial councils would not result in devolution of power, but rather the centralization of power. He said that Mr Heunis had not made it clear how a majority government was to be prevented.

The New Republic Party spokesman on constitutional development and planning, Mr Derrick Watterson, said the new system of provincial government had not yet been explained clearly. Mr Watterson said that the new administrators would not have the same power as they had had previously, and the public would not be able to see to it that the power which they had was not abused.

The chief minister of KwaZulu, Chief Buthelezi, says he is sorry that the government did not grant his request for a moratorium on the dismantling of the Natal provincial council. Chief Buthelezi said it would be a pity if there was unilateral imposition by the government in setting up something to replace all the bodies being abolished.

Bill on Black 'Freehold' Rights Introduced

MB131057 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0948 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Parliament, May 13, SAPA — A bill providing for full "freehold" ownership of land by blacks in townships outside the national states, was tabled in parliament today. According to a memorandum on the Black Communities Development Amendment Bill, it would "remove the restrictions on the acquisition of ownership of immovable property by black persons in urban areas, generally under the jurisdiction of black local authorities and development boards," and specifically in "development areas." The freehold rights are an alternaitve to the 99-year leasehold system introduced a few years ago.

At a press briefing, the director general of constitutional development and planning, Dr Andreas van Wyk, said: "Any black person who is a South African citizen or who is legally resident in the republic will be able to buy property." The same applied to township developers, employers buying property for their employees "or anybody else approved by the minister." For example, he said, a Transkei citizen who was legally in Cape Town could buy property there in terms of the bill's provisions.

According to the memorandum, provision was also made for a "more streamlined procedure for black township establishment," which Dr van Wyk said had been hampered by procedural regulations in the past. The bill was not introducing a new system. It was "just extending rights of ownership, which non-blacks could get, to blacks." The memorandum said the bill did not describe the nature of the property rights in question "conveying as it does full right of ownership in accordance with the Roman-Dutch Common Law." "For this reason the term freehold is not used, as it is a term of English law of property which is foreign to our common law." To give effect to the principle of equivalent ownership for all South African citizens, various amendments had been made to the principal act which brought terminology and procedures in line with the requirements of the Land Survey Act and the Deeds Registries Act.

Although provision was made for the conversion of 99-year leasehold to ownership, the choice of type of tenure was left to the aspirant owner. "Thus 99-year leasehold is retained as an alternative form of tenure, more particularly since there are certain differences in the cost of acquiring leasehold or ownership." An example was that transfer duty was not payable on a leasehold transaction. The streamlined township establishment procedures "will provide the necessary certainty, which will encourage developers to risk capital." "These procedures will facilitate the supply of land by both the public and private sectors, and as such implement one of the important objects of the white paper on urbanisation, namely the timeous supply of land for the housing of urban people."

Since a market in property — particularly the undeveloped land component — in black urban areas had not yet developed, provision was made in the bill for the regulation of first generation disposal prices for 99-year leasehold and ownership, the memorandum said. These provisions were to be implemented for State, Local Authority and Development Board Land (which was also the major source of land) as this was a public resource. "This creates the opportunity to keep the price of undeveloped land low and so to stimulate the provision of housing by developers and individual home-builders." Giving examples of transfer costs for aspirant buyers, Dr van Wyk said conversion of a 99-year leasehold property valued at R10,000 would cost R375, consisting of conveyancing and transfer fees of R275 and R100, respectively. For a property valued at R20,000, the costs would increase to R596, of which R200 would be transfer fees. For a "new" transaction, costs involved in a property sold R10,000 would total R580, consisting of R185 for the mortgage bond, R20 for stamp duty, R275 for conveyancing and R100 for transfer fees. For a property sold at R40,000, the costs would be R1,582.

Commentary Stresses Demands To Restore Order

MB120730 Johannesburg International Service in English 0630 GMT 12 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] There are growing demands in South Africa that peace, law, and order should be restored, that radicalism should be eliminated, and that full attention should be given to the processes of negotiation and reform. Though radicals try to convince the world that revolution is imminent in South Africa and that there is no alternative to violence, various opinion polls conducted among black people have shown that they are opposing the unrest in growing numbers. The latest poll, conducted by the Human Sciences Research Council, shows that more than 75 percent of black people in the country believe that nothing is to be gained out of the current unrest situation. Confronted with this majority view, opposing the unrest in the country, the onus is now lying heavily on the country's security forces to restore stability and peaceful processes. On the issue of revolution in South Africa, the cards are stacked against the revolutionaries, to an extent which is not fully appreciated abroad. In this connection, a few facts have to be taken into account. First, the bulk of the population certainly does not favor revolution, realising as Zulu Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi does that revolution would destroy the country's infrastructure -- something which would take generations to rebuild, if at all. On the other hand, it has been argued that even small groups can bring about successful revolution, but South African topography and its advanced state of development militates against such groups.

Commentary Notes Status of Unions May Be Reviewed

MB130602 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 0545 GMT 13 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] Few features of the modern economy raise as much emotion and controversy as do trade unions. South Africans have, for many decades, escaped the effects of highly active unions, until introduction of labor reforms some 7 years ago. An important question, as relevant today as it was when labor reforms were introduced, still needs to be answered. And that is, when does trade unionism exceed the bounds of responsibility? There are those, albeit a very small group, who would even question the right of existence of a union.

After all, it is nothing more than a labor cartel, which would be totaly frowned upon were it to be formed, for example, among a group of retailers. But that trade unionism has a recognised role in South African society is implicit in the fact that, give or take a few thousand, about one-third of the total South African work force is unionised in one form or another. This already higher than the United States, and compares favourably with some of the leading industrial countries in Europe. In Africa it is the highest. It recognises the legitimate claim of labor, in a united form, to at least part of the wealth-creating process of an undertaking. This does not mean, as the Marxist would have it, all of the wealth created by an enterprise. It also recognises the legitimate role of unions to redress some of the imbalances which may have been created over the years under different social and political structure. At the time of labor reform, there was even tentative recognition of the role the emergent unions could play in acting as a kind of political escape valve while other processes were being determined.

Now that there are clear moves in political reform, the role the unions are playing in the political arena has become totally questionable. In the end, no one can deny that trade unions act responsibly when they act in the interests of their members. The questions which should be asked are: Is trade union leadership acting responsibly when it involves its union membership in purely general political matters, and forces a confrontation with management on these issues? Is it responsible trade unionism to allow a dispute to reach the point where sit-ins are held in stores, customers accosted,and other workers intimidated? Is it responsible trade unionism that causes severe dmage to a company's operations and profits, which, in the longer run could effect that company's job creating ability.

These are difficult times, for management and the workforce. A glance at company announcements in the newspapers will show that no extraordinary profits are being made in most sectors. A highly competitive environment and shrinking markets give companies little room to maneuver before facing financial disaster. Trade union leadership which does not recognise this and pushes on regardless in its confrontational stance to management — while at the same time bringing extraneous, political issues onto the workfloor — is obviously more interested in its pseudo political role than in the genuine itnerests of its members. In the process it is the employer who suffers and often becomes the victim of trade union action. If necessary — as has proved to be the case in Britain — the legal position and powers of employers will have to be reviewed.

Soweto Mayor Suspended by City Council

MB131657 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1654 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 13, SAPA — The mayor of Soweto, Mr Ephraim Tshabalala, was today suspended for 45 days by his own Council. This decision was taken at a special Soweto City Council meeting which was held at the Jabulani chambers Soweto today, SAPA's correspondent reports. The deputy mayor of Soweto, Mr Glen Jwara, who chaired the meeting, said the council had taken this decision in the absence of Mr Tshabalala — who was not present due to business commitments. Mr Jwara said during the suspension, the mayoral car would be taken away from Mr Tshabalala, as well as all other items belonging to the Council and which the suspended mayor used.

He added that the suspension was in terms of Regulation 81. He said the mayor had violated a Council decision by encouraging people to squat over and above the required number of 400 squatters per site. Mr Jwara said there were now more than 1030 squatters at the Ofolo gold course, which was an "unhealthy" situation. He further said that the Council's lawyers had been instructed to prepare charge sheets in terms of which Mr Thsabalala would be formally charged for contravening the Black Local Authorities Act.

The Council also called for Mr Tshabalala's resignation as both mayor and councillor because he had violated the Councils Act when he publicly disclosed matters regarding the squatter camps. Mr Jwara said the Council had decided that only 400 shacks were to remain at the gold course for a period of four months and after that, a site-and-service scheme would be developed near the Mofolo village.

Six Atteridgeville Schools To Be Closed

MB131428 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1427 GMT 13 May 86

[Text]Pretoria, May 13, SAPA — The Department of Education and Training has decided, with effect from to-morrow, to close six schools in Atteridgeville, a black residential area outside Pretoria, following the uncontrollable behaviour of pupils of these schools. Announcing the decision to suspend classes at the schools, Mr P.G. Felstead, regional director for the northern Transvaal, said parents meetings were to be held to acquaint parents with prevailing conditions at the schools which made their continued re-opening unnecessary. He did not say what will happen to teachers who will be without pupils to teach. Giving reasons for the closure of the schools Mr Felstead said:

— Pupils arrived late for school and that most of them did not return after the lunch break.
— Many of the pupils did not attend classes but preferred to mill around their school premises.
— Most of the pupils went to school without books and others with only a few.
— There was no discipline at the schools because pupils refused to be disciplined.
— Gambling and dagga [marijuana] smoking had taken place within the school premises and in some classrooms.

— Many pupils refused to do written work — even to write tests.

— Students representatives councils wanted to take over control of the schools. They arranged stayaways whenever they wished. They have chased away some pupils and teachers at some schools.

— Student organisations paid no heed to appeals made by national organisations to resume their studies but acted in blatant defiance of school regulations.

Mr Felstead said the affected schools — all secondary schools with teenage pupils — were: Saulridge Secondary School, Dr W.F. Nkomo, D.H. Peta, Flavious Mareka, Phelindaba and Hofmeyer High Schools.

Commenting on the drastic steps taken by the northern Transvaal region against the Atteridgeville schools, a Soweto high school master, who preferred to be anonymous, said lawlessness among Soweto pupils was also common. "It is a contagious thing which has affected various parts of the urban areas. Some teachers are afraid to punish their pupils for fear of being dealt with by their pupils. Pupils have taken control of the schools and teachers have to do what they want," he said. He suggested government approval of the National Education Crisis Committee. "That is a people's organisation formed by the people themselves to attend to black education problems. The organisation is acceptable to us. The government should stop forming organisations for us but should accept our own," he concluded.

Application for Alexandra Mass Funeral Refused

MB131831 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1828 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 13, SAPA — An application to hold a mass funeral at the Alexandra stadium on Thursday was turned down today by the acting magistrate of Randburg, Mr R. Mandelstam, the Alexandra Action Committee [AAC] said today. The AAC, at a press conference this in Johannesburg afternoon, said they would be meeting their lawyers later to apply for a court interdict to allow the mass funeral of eight people who died in Alexandra last month to go ahead this week. A spokesman for AAC also said the committee had been approached by "businessmen" who offered to try to "persuade the magistrate to allow the funeral." "They (the businessmen) asked us to stop people waving ANC, and South African Communist Party flags at the funeral. We don't order the people to wave the flags, how can we tell them not to wave them?" he said. "The only guarantee we can give is that it will be peaceful," he added. The spokesman did not further identify the "businessmen." "The last two mass funerals were peaceful and we can't understand why this was disallowed. We believe they (the authorities) are trying to further antagonise the Alexandra community," he said.

The AAC said that in a meeting with an Alexandra clergyman, the Randburg magistrate said funerals should not be used to solve "political problems." "But people are dying because of political problems and that is why the funerals are being held," the committee spokesman said. "The most infuriating thing is that in his one-sentence refusal the magistrate didn't even have the courtesy to give reasons for disallowing the funeral," the spokesman said.

According to the committee, relatives of the deceased from all over the country had already started arriving in Alexandra for the mass funeral. Th committee said they feared any security force presence at the funeral could "provoke people and cause more deaths." "The least the police and army can do is to get out of the township during the funeral," the spokesman said. The committee claimed it controlled the township and that crime had was actually decreasing until the police action last month. "The state is threatened because the people are running the township successfully through democratic structures," he added.

In an appeal to white parents, the AAC said: "You should tell your sons in the army to refuse to go into the townships because they are not there to protect the people but to kill us and our children. We believe South Africa belongs to all South Africans and needs all the people to build the country for the good of all."

Pervasive Police Presence After KwaNdebele Funeral

[Text] There is a heavy police presence reported in the KwaNdebele homeland, northeast of Pretoria. Police are said to have moved into the village of (Schlogte) after trouble flared during a funeral. The burial was apparently of a man allegedly beaten to death by the Mbukudo vigilante group. He is reported to have been killed after he went to the offices of the vigilante group to complain about harassment of youth in the area. Attendance at the funeral has been restricted to [word indistinct] people. The workers say violence has broken out after police allegedly fired teargas at students wishing to attend the ceremony. The youths are reported to have gone on a rampage, attacking PUTCO [Public Utility Transport Corporation] buses and setting fire to shops owned by members of the Mbukudo. There has been no comment from police.

Thousands Attend Galeshewe Youth's Funeral

MB131451 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1449 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Mafikeng, May 13, SAPA — Thousands of people arrived in Galeshewe, near Kimberley, today to attend the funeral of the 19-year-old St Boniface Boys High School student, Anthony "Hutshe" Segolodi, allegedly shot by security guards on April 30. The funeral service started at 10am today and sources in the township said that by midday people had already gathered at the Vergenoeg cemetry, heeding restrictions imposed by the Kimberley chief magistrate that the funeral service stop at 14h00. Other restrictions imposed include: the body of the deceased only be released from the funeral parlour an hour before the funeral service; the body must be transported from the church directly to the parlour; the service must take place between 10h00 and 14h00; no placards, posters or banners are to be displayed; the service may not be in the form of a political gathering.

Anthony Segolodi was allegedly shot by security guards on the eve of May Day, in violence which erupted in Galeshewe when a group of people attempted to petrol-bomb a local councillor's house. Two people were injured in the incident.

Police and the army were said to be patrolling the area today. Businesses in the area were closed this morning and attendance at schools was reported to be poor.

MB131623 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1616 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 13, SAPA — Four young men were released from Robben Island today before completing their sentences. The four: Mr Luyanda Mpahlwa, 27, Mr Mzuyikile Hadi, 21, Mr Mabhuti Mpontsana, 23, Mr Sibulelo Mthaza, 22, had not expected remission of their sentences. They left the island at 7am. Mr Mpontsana said: "We didn't expect to be released so soon. We were surprised when told yesterday that we would be set free today. It was sad to leave our comrades behind." They plan to spend a few days in Cape Town before going home.

Mr Mpahlwa, of Umtata, was jailed for four years for refusing to testify against Ntobeko Maqubela, who was charged with high treason and terrorism in 1982. He was due to be releasd in August. Mr Hadi, Mr Mpontsana, and Mr Mthaza, all from Queenstown, were sentenced to five years in 1981 for sabotage. They were due to be released in September. Each man celebrated his 21st birthday on Robben Island. Mr Mpontsana said: "We held a little party. Prisoners held in the A Section bought some sweets and biscuits for the party." He said they had been held in the open section of the prison with Mr James April, who was released on Friday. Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report]

Importance of Group Characteristics

"Acknowledgement of the importance of 'group characteristics' was of vital importance in South Africa's constitutional reform process, Mr Val Volker (NP [National Party] Klip River) said," Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 10 May reports on page 4. Volker said that it was important for education to remain an "own affair," falling under each group's control.

Conservative MPs Question Heunis

Another report on the same page notes that Conservative Party MP Jan Hoon called on Constitutional Development and Planning Minister Chris Heunis and the rest of the government to "state clearly whether it intended to establish a 'fourth Parliament' for blacks on the same basis as the existing three Houses for Whites, Coloureds and Indians." Hoon said that Heunis should also tell the House of Assembly whether he intend to make a " 'drastic' " changes in the Group Areas Act. Another page 4 report notes that Conservative Party MP Koos van der Merwe told Parliament that "South Africa was trapped in the 'mind-boggling rhetoric' of 'emperor' Chris Heunis." Van der Merwe called on Heunis to tell the house what methods he would use "to protect South Africa's minorities."

CITIZEN on UK Elections

In an editorial on page 6, THE CITIZEN says that this week's setback for the Conservative Party in Great Britain is "perturbing for South Africa. We have grown accustomed to having Mrs Thatcher's steadfastness in resisting serious punitive measures against South Africa." "If we hope that she gets out of her troubles and is able to win back the support of the electorate in Britain, it is because she is a friend of this country, wishes us well and wants to see a peaceful solution to our problems. Labour leader Neil Knnock, on the other hand, is a man whose hatred for this country and its Government has never been concealed." If Thatcher and the Conservatives lose the next general election, "South Africa will be in real trouble."

Growing Debts

"South Africa's companies — and individuals — are incurring substantially greater debts and the rate of increase over the last few years is escalating, according to a Dunn and Bradstreet analysis of figures released by Central Statistical Services," the paper reports on page 12. "In 1985 judgments passed for debt in the civil courts amounted to R667 million. This was a staggering 90 percent higher than in 1984." The annual increase rate in 1984 over 1983 was 60 percent and "the same trend is evident in the number of summonses issued, which in 1985 totalled 1,026,636 — a 17 percent increase over 1984."

Pick'n'Pay Strike

"Talks between the Commercial, Catering and Allied Workers Union and Pick'n'Pay were set to continue today after failing to reach an agreement in negotiations lasting six hours atthe weekend." Helen Simpson, Tim Clarke, and John Miller report on page 2 of Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 12 May. The union has issued a statement "saying it would not be intimidated by threats of dismissal or 'fancy legal footwork' " and a union spokesman said of Pick'n'Pay group chief Raymond Ackerman's charges of union intimidation that " 'the union is used to the Le Granges and Bothas saying the problems of the country are caused by agitators. Mr Ackerman is talking the same language.' " The spokesman said that while the union did not condone violence, it believed Pick'n'Pay was overreacting and noted that " 'there is bound to be retaliation' " for an attack by " 'vigilante customers' " on union members at Steeldale.

Conservatives Say Poll 'Fallacious'

"A Conservative Party [CP] spokesman said last night the published findings of a recent opinion poll were fallacious and in fact most whites in South Africa want ANC leader Nelson Mandela kept in jail," the paper reports on page 8. "Mr Clive Derby-Lewis director of the CP mouthpiece, THE STALLARD FOUNDATION, disputed the findings of the poll which said urban Whites were almost equally divided one the issue of Mandela's release."

Ban on KWV Wine in Canada

"Cape wine farmers have been paid R12.5 million from KWV's record profits for last year, a drop of about R1 million or 8 percent from the total payments of R13.6 million made for the previous year," the paper reports on page 23. "But their earnings for 1986 could be hit by the loss of export markets, incling a ban on KWV products by Canada, its biggest single export market." In its annual report, KWV said "the export market environment last year was characterised by unfavourable political climates which coupled with government changes in certain countries, directly led to boycotts, particularly where state monopolies were in control."

Christ To Liberate RSA

"Christ is going to liberate South Africa — through the ANC, the Russians or whichever power there may be, Dr Noco Smith of the Ned Geref Kerk in Afrika [Dutch Reformed Church in Africa] said yesterday at a memorial service for the 11 Winterveld shooting victims," Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English on 9 May reports on page 2. Smith told the mourners "whites would be liberated from domination and fear of blacks and blacks from anger."

IBM Director on Disinvestment

"An urgent call to open negotiations with all groups, including the ANC and Mr Nelson Mandela, has been made in Durban by the managing director of IBM South Africa, Mr Jack Clarke," another report on the same page says. Clarke said he was alarmed at the number of moderate black leaders who are supporting calls for disinvestment, not because they wanted companies to leave but because they felt they "had to exert pressure on the government." Clarke added that " 'if disinvestment were to become a reality, any leverage which foreign companies may have will disappear. There are forces to the left and right ... who want that to happen in the misguided belief that we can be left to sort out our own problems. That thinking is too naive to be taken seriously but too dangerous to ignore.' "

Police Whipping Condemned

Another page 2 report notes that the Black Sash Education Group, Education for an Aware South Africa, and Cape Town City Councillor Eulalie Stott have condemned the police whipping of students at Arcadia High School. The Black Sash group expressed concern over the "minimal" reporting of events at black schools, while Education for an Aware South Africa said the incident was another example " 'of a corrupt and illegitimate police force attempting to implement indefensible state education policies.' "

Former Student Whipped

"A 19-year-old former University of the Western Cape student, Mr Alton Barnes, said on Wednesday that he had been whipped by a plainclothes policeman in Mitchells Plain," the CAPE TIMES reports on page 3. "Mr Barnes had about eight welts on his face, arms, chest and back. He said a bleeding would on his right shoulder was caused by a policeman who had tripped him before whipping him."

CAPE TIMES on Namibia

"While there has been rapid movement in some fields in South Africa, there seems little hope of progress across the border in SWA/Namibia," the CAPE TIMES says in an editorial on the same page. There is no sign that agreement will be released on a Cuban withdrawal from Angola and "the signs point more to an Angolan stalemate, with the Cubans remaining firmly in place to guard against UNITA depredations, than to an imminent settlement in Angola. And that in turn means that a settlement in SWA/Namibia is more remote now than when hopes were last high eight years ago."

Column on EPG Talks

In the "London Dateline" column on the same page, John Battersby writes that the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group (EPG) peace plan "has already progressed much further along the road to establishing a dialogue with African nationalists then most observers predicted — but major obstacles lie ahead." The ANC is "publicly insisting that it had not changed its stance and would be calling for full implementation of the Commonwealth demands before agreeing to negotiate with Pretoria. But I am told that the ANC does not accept a direct link between Mr Mandela's release and a 'truce' and emphasizes that all political prisoners would have to be freed." However, Battersby says there are "three good reasons why South Africa should be cooperating with the Commonwealth. Firstly, it is the last opportunity to constructively exploit British goodwill towards South Africa. Secondly, it is the last available structure for delaying mandatory economic sanctions. Thirdly, it is the only prospect on the political horizon to — at worst — reduce the levels for violence and — at best — achieve an ANC moratorium on violence."

Government 'Backing Down' on Rent

"Government is believed to be backing down from its proposal empowering black local authorities to force employers to act as rent collection agents," Chris Cairncross and Lesley Lambert report on the front page of Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English on 12 May. The proposal is contained in the Black Local Authorities Amendment Bill which is now before a standing committee and "it is understood the Bill has come in for flack in the committee stage and there is every indication government will scrap the clause entirely."

Former PFP Leader on Reform, Sanctions

Richard Walker reports from New York on page 2 that former Progressive Federal Party leader Fredrik van Zyl Slabbert, speaking in Boston, said the government's greatest failure has been its failure to negotiate with the ANC and " 'they just don't understand that the ANC represents the middle ground.' " Slabbert also said that reform in South Africa was " 'too little, too late,' " but warned that sanctions could do more harm than good unless they were applied carefully. He also said that "constructive engagement was 'a good concept that died in the execution.' "

'Exodus' Continues

"The exodus of South Africans continued in January as the country lost 518 people compared with a gain of 1,547 in January last year," another report on the same page says. "Of the 1,247 people who left in January, 211 were professional, technical and related workers. SA gained 107 immigrants in these fields in that month."

Reserve Bank Will Not Meet Deadline

"The Reserve Bank will not meet the September deadline for a total withdrawal of its control in the forward market, as envisaged by the De Kock Commission," Alan Sendzul reports on the same page. "The Bank essentially has to stay because the forward market has been thrown into disarray by a lack of spot dollars which it now needs to meet maturing forward contracts. Pretoria's attempts to dilute its pricing control over forward dollars, in line with the commission's recommendations, have been hampered by the recent chronic shortage of spot dollars."

SACBC Dismisses Sanctions Report

"The Catholic Bishops Conference has dismissed as pure speculation a report that it had given qualified support to disinvestment and sanctions," another page 2 report says. "Friday's BUSINESS DAY reported that Catholic bishops in Britain had decided to boycott SA goods and that the decision had come 'after a controversial decision by the SA Catholics Bishops Conference [SACBC] last week giving the first qualified support to disinvestment and sanctions.' " An SACBC spokesman said the bishops had called for economic pressure but not sanctions or disivestment specifically.

Relly Rejects Mediation

John Battersby reports from London on page 3 on an interview with Anglo-American chairman Gavin Relly by the SAMPSON NEWSLETTER, published by Anthony Sampson. Relly told Sampson that "Anglo American has abandoned its efforts to bring SA Government and the African National Congress (ANC) together." " 'I don't think that we have a role to get the government and the ANC together. That is for strictly political forces.' " "He also expressed support for KwaZulu leader Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, described SA as one of the most socialist countries in the world, praised Botha for his 'dogged determination' and ruled out the breaking up of the Anglo American conglomerate." He said that his meeting with the ANC had forced the issue on Pretoria and that he had been blamed for " 'opening the floodgates.' " " 'P.W. Botha cross — but not very cross.' " " 'In fact, it was one of the nicest days I've ever spent — a picnic among South Africans talking in a friendly way about their future together. There are now so many initiatives, maturations on both sides. It would be counter-productive to continue with ours.' " On Buthelezi, Relly said that " 'you can't expect us to run away from the single black leader who says exactly what we think. I like Buthelezi and what he says. Business has talked to him for a long time.' " He said that South Africa was one of the most socialist countries in the world because the Afrikaners had built up a strong system to distribute benefits to their "tribe" and that this was a hindrance to growth. However, he was impressed with the president's " 'dogged determination to get on with reform. I know from trying to move our own people how difficult it can be.' "

Port Elizabeth Funeral

On page 5, the paper's correspondent reports from Port Elizabeth that at a funeral this weekend, boycott leader Mkhuseli Jack said that "the only way to 'stop the flames of black anger' was to release Nelson Mandela, unban the ANC and allow the exiles to come back home." He also said the boycott would be spread after the mayor of Port Elizabeth Ben Olivier "stated he was not prepared to talk to the consumer boycott leaders."

Government's Land Search

An article on page 5 of BUSINESS DAY says that the government's search for land to accommodate black migration to the urban areas has been spread countrywide but "there is no doubt that it is being concentrated on those areas most in need of economic stimulation and support." "Although it is now official policy to accept urbanisation as a natural phenomenon, it is also patently clear that government has not relinquished its determination to encourage greater decentralisation." This means the government will not "concentrate on purchases of land in the favoured urbanisation areas" such as Johannesburg. The idea is to redirect private sector efforts and migrant sectors of the community to areas which need resettlement and new enterprise.

BUSINESS DAY on Strike

BUSINESS DAY's editorial on page 6 says that as politics is the division of the spoils, no one should be surprised when the Pick'n'Pay dispute becomes political. "Clearly, we are dealing here with a convergence of industrial action, politics and criminality, a dangerous mixture that is calculated to arouse high emotion and to cloud judgment." The issue becomes political because "people who are denied satisfactory political expression will politicise their schools, their churches, their funerals and their labour unions. The remedy is not to berate them for doing so, but to negotiate political alternatives." However, both the company and union should try to separate politics from industrial action and "not to inflame political feelings while they try to deal with a wage dispute. Then they can join together to change the political structure."

Pandora's Box

In a second editorial on the same page, the paper says it respects Rev Leon Sullivan and his code for U.S. companies, which has played a "significant role in bringing about change." However, it has problems with his recent call for "corporate civil disobedience." "The problem is to decide which laws to obey." Are stayaways and consumer boycotts to be supported? What about "people's justice?" Or should corporations refuse to pay taxes? These examples show that "those who choose to flout some laws must expect others to flout other laws. It is a Pandora's box."

'Comrades' Rule Alexandra

On the same page, Sipho Ngcobo reports that Alexandra is in the grip of "the local political activists — the 'comrades.' They claim to have run all the affairs of the townships since the eruption of a terrific wave of unrest on February 15." "Under the banner and leadership of the political activists and the resultant high level of political consciousness, the local masses have reached a stage where there is little or no co-operation between them and government authorities." According to the "comrades," " 'a decision has been taken to form an alternative administrative structure to govern the township because the residents rejected any government-appoint administration.' " " 'Residents have successfully been mobilised so they can defend themselves against the police.' " Actions have been taken against town councillors, which have caused them to resign, and the police are now the major target. Police informers are killed. "People's courts" deal with all types of cases, and some say there are tires hanging on the wall to be used as "necklaces" for those found guilty. He describes a court session which he was able to attend after many shadowy contacts. All members of the court, which handles all kinds of offenses, are members of the Alexandra Action Committee. "In Alex hardly anybody goes to the police these days. They report their cases to the 'comrades.' " "The group monitors and co-ordinates day-to-day activities of the yard and street committees it has formed to create a barrier between the police and residents."

Leftist ANC

An article by Peter Wallington on page 8 cites Witwatersrand University Professor Tom Lodge as saying that roughly half of the ANC leadership is communist. He told the paper that the South African Communist Party was "secretive about their membership, and this made pinpointing members difficult." He cautioned about making too much of the distinction between nationalists and communists as "the gulf between the two factions was not that wide."

Unemployment Crisis

Thelma Tuch reports on the same page on the unemployment situation and the Black Sash's role in dealing with the trauma. "The level of unemployment has reached critical proportions." Employers break the law by not applying for Unemployment Insurance cards for their employees, the level of ignorance among workers is high, and they face considerable red tape. Worst off are school dropouts with no job at all. The worst area is the eastern Cape where 60 percent of the black labor force in Grahamstown and 56 percent of labor force in Port Elizabeth-Uitanhage have no jobs. Rural poverty has increased as remittances from the urban areas have stopped, and entire families may depend on grandmother's old age pension.

New Car Sales Down

Johannesburg THE STAR in English on 12 May reports on page 1 that "the impact of the perks tax on the pattern of car buying has been 'alarming' since its introduction a little over a year ago, according to studies carried out by motor firms." And they believe the worst is to come. The National Association of Automobile Manufacturers says there was an unprecedented increase in the demand for used cars at the expense of new models. In 1984 the ratio of used to new cars in total sales was 1.5 to one. Within months of the launch of the perks tax, the gap had widened to 2.5 cars for every new car. Worst of all, fleet owners — on whom the industry normally relies for at least 80 percent of all new cars — also started buying second hand cars. Since the beginning of 1984, sales of smaller cars have risen from 48 percent of all sales to about 64 percent, while medium models have fallen from 34 to 26 percent.

Home Crime Watch System

A report on page 4 says "residents of Linbro Park in Sandton are flocking to join a 'home crime watch' system launched to combat the 400 percent increase in crime in their suburb over the last two months." The suburb is just across the eastern bypass from the troubled Alexandra township.

Tutu Will Not Request Residence Permit

"Bishop Desmond Tutu will move into the official residence in Bishopscourt [Cape Town] after his instatement as Archbishop, but he will not ask for permission to live in a white areas," a report on page 10 says. In terms of the Group Areas Act, he may not occupy official residences in areas proclaimed for whites, but he could apply for a permit. "Bishop Tutu reacted with indignation when asked if he would seek permission to live at Bishopscourt. 'Why should I? This is my country. If I can live there because I can afford it or because of my position, why shouldn't I?' "

Nationalists on Group Areas

"The Government has been driven back to almost the final line of defences over its 38-year-old apartheid policy," political staff writer Bruce Cameron reports on page 13. While most in the National Party government are holding on to segregated group areas and to education, "cracks in what was previously a solid wall are appearing." "There are Nationalists who privately concede that the Group Areas Act will eventually have to go and that schools will have to be opened to all living in a particular community." Conservatives such as Education Minister De Klerk attempt to spread the wings of "own affairs" as far as possible and the more conservative elements in the governemnt harp about the dangers of mixing at lower income levels. "Current Nationalist thinking seems to indicate that the Government is unlikely to opt for a general nationwide implementation of grey areas, but will leave the decision to local authorities. This would enable them to avoid, to some extent, taking the rap — particularly in areas where the Nationalists are hard-pressed by the Right. Most Nationalists appear to accept that group areas cannot survive. How they will go is only a matter of time and method."

Soweto City Council

Soweto Mayor Ephraim Tshabalala, "was mandated to dissolve the council and remain with the town clerk to run the affairs of the township at a Sofasonke Party meeting held at the Eyethu Cinema yesterday," Ali Mphaki reports on the first page of Johannesburg SOWETAN in English on 12 May. The meeting was told most of the councillors were corrupt, and the mayor should be allowed to run the town for a "test" period of 2 or 3 years. The mayor would like to have powers similar to those given to homeland leaders and have the right to change the cabinet ministers as he saw fit. He said he wanted the Sofasonke Party to be the main party in Soweto such as Inkatha was in Natal.

AZAPO Member Transferred

"A Seshego branch official of the Azanian People's Organisation [AZAPO] who is employed by the Lebowa Government has been transferred to Bushbuckridge — over 200 kilometers away — in what the organisation says is a campaign of harassment of its members," the SOWETAN reports on page 2. The official, who worked for the Seshego superintendent's office, is vice chairman of the local AZAPO branch. The AZAPO publicity secretary called the move an attempt to " 'disorganise the Seshego branch.' "

Committee To Help Children

On the same page, the paper reports that "the Azanian Youth Council has formed a committee to help children who are exploited by businessmen. It will also help children who are allegedly fetched from orphanages to be hired as domestic servants."

SOWETAN on Township Authority

In its editorial on page 4, the paper says it is reasonable to ask "what the Government can do, or rather must do, about the collapse of the local authorities in black townships." Some townships have decided to create street and block committees, which might seem questionable, but this has been decided by the people themselves. What should be put in place to run the townships? The paper believes that those who have formed street and block committees should be consulted, although it is questionable if they are willing to be consulted by the government. "An even more sensible suggestion would then be to reinforce such a system by bringing back the old metropolitan way of running the black township in tandem with their nearest cities. When the Johannesburg City Council managed the business of Soweto many years ago, the townships were administered not perfectly, but reasonably well."

Fears of Mandela

Aggrey Dlaaste in his "On the Line" column on page 6 writes that much speculation is made over the release of Nelson Mandela but he says release him tomorrow and "see what happens." All political organizations should be unbanned too, or "all the perfume from P.W. Botha's Arabia will not sweeten the wave of death and unrest in the black townships." He believes the dilly-dallying is fooling no one and that blacks will not be satisfied until they "see Mr Mandela and other black leaders sitting right there in Cape Town thrashing out the destiny of this country, with the Government." He says he is afraid, however, that the white man "is afraid if they get those gentlemen to run the country with them, they will make such a damned success of this whole miserable business, the white man would never be able to hold his arrogant head up again."

BEELD on CP-AWB

In an editorial on page 8, Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans on 12 May says there is much truth in the report in "the Nationalist, the National Party [NP] mouthpiece, that the Conservative Party [CP] and the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging [Afrikaner Resistance Movement — AWB] can be viewed as creations of the NP." But, it adds, one could also put it differently: that the NP shed its skin, cast off parts that had become irrelevant due to the reform process, and what remained of what had been cast off was the CP, the AWB, and the HNP [Herstigte Nasionale Party — Reformed National Party]. "There are two forces which can oppose each other in politics: popularity and responsible government. A party could allow itself to be led by the sometimes fickle, opportunistic views of its voters, or it can use its greater wisdom to lead them in less popular but possibly safer directions. The later is at the heart of the government's reforms — long-term security for all. In the process, the NP lost some popularity because it threw overboard policies which soothed white voters." It is only through such painful honesty, the paper concludes, that the country's interests can be served.

RAPPORT on EPG

Johannesburg RAPPORT in Afrikaans of 11 May, in an editorial on page 10, says of the Eminent Persons Group [EPG]: "When the delegation of wise men arrives in the country on Tuesday, there will most likely be much greater public interest in their visit than was the case the last time they were here. Last time, they deliberately chose to keep out of the limelight. Instead of issuing judgments, they quietly proceeded to ask, listen, and talk." Referring to speculation on progress made by the group and possible mediation by them between government and the ANC, the paper cautions: "Experience has shown that too high expectations at too early a stage lead to disappointment. What could well be said, though, is that in future foreign groups which concern themselves with this country — even with the best of intentions — can learn a lesson in tactics and strategy from the wise men from the Commonwealth."

RAPPORT on NP Dilemma

In a second editorial on page 10, RAPPORT says: "The dilemma of the choice the NP has had to make in the past few years could not have put more clearly than in the party's official mouthpiece, THE NATIONALIST. On the one side, says an article in the publication, the NP is losing support because of its constitutional, political, and socioeconomic reforms. But one cannot expect that 10 million blacks be left without political rights indefinitely simply because they are black. Indeed, for a long time to come, this will remain the dilemma of the NP, the majority party in government, the choice between overwhelming white support and the broader interests of all South Africa's inhabitants." This, it adds, is a gamble. The party paper itself admits that there is no guarantee that reform is going to succeed, being bedeviled by too much rebel white resistance and the unwillingness of blacks to come to the negotiating table.

War in Steelpoort

On page 15, the paper reports there is a real threat of war between the farmers of the fertile Steelpoort valley in eastern Transvaal and their black neighbors in Sekhukhuneland, a section of Lebowa. "For the past 4 months, the farmers have been terrorized by elements of the United Democratic Front and the ANC. The angry farmers, facing the threat to their safety and survival, have given the government 2 weeks to solve the matter. Thereafter, they warn, they are going to enter Lebowa to wipe out the nest of 'comrades' and terrorists." The report says that the farmers' employees have been threatened and several of their vehicles have been damaged, equipment is stolen, fences are torn down, livestock maimed, and one farmer had his house and outbuildings burned down. The farmers of the area held talks with their member of parliament, Manpower Minister Pietie du Plessis, and demanded that the government provide immediate relief to their problem. "The farmers allege that the ANC has warned them their homes will be burned, and their families attacked. Most of the farmsteads are within 500 meters of the Lebowa border. 'And we believe them. Every threat so far made by the ANC has been carried out,' the farmers say."

Indian Onslaught

On page 14 the RAPPORT reports that Bloemfontein businessmen have prepared themselves for the onslaught and price wars which are expected once Indians begin trading in the Orange Free State in the near future, but some problems still remain to be solved. "The main problem is where the Indians will stay. They are not allowed to own property in white areas, but they may lease property. A few families from Natal who have opened a clothing factory at Thaba Nchu have already been to view some houses in the city." The report says Mr Norman Doubell, chairman of the Bloemfontein management committee, has indicated that a separate residential area may be developed for the Indians, as it does not seem there will be many of them settling in the province. "Most of the businessmen agree that the arrival of Indian businessmen will stimulate the city's economy. But it is also likely that clothing shops will have to drop their prices or face closure."

Open Movie Theaters

On page 9, the paper reports that in just 2 short months the country's movie theater world has changed radically as theaters all over have been opened to all races. Almost all the theaters in Cape Province, Natal, and the Orange Free State have no restrictions, even in the smaller towns. Nobody even sees the issue as worth discussing any longer. "But what certainly still is news are those places where these facilities have not been opened to all: Nigel, Krugersdorp, Roodepoort and, ironically, Pretoria." The report says that although the Krugersdorp city council decided 2 months ago not to open the theaters in its area, the matter is to be discussed again soon. "The Roodepoort town clerk, Mr Werner Zybrands, told RAPPORT that the five theaters in the shopping centers of the city have been opened, but the drive-in theater is still reserved for whites. 'It is right in the middle of a white residential area, and we will not be reconsidering our decision. We have made the reasons clear to the film distributors.'" The paper adds that Pretoria sources have said that the whole matter of opening the theaters is receiving attention, and that the city's management committee will make its decision before the end of June.

CAPE TIMES on Unrest Funerals

In an editorial on page 8, Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English on 12 May discussed the "appalling dilemma" of restrictions on unrest funerals. If an attempt is made to enforce the restrictions, "bloodshed is almost certain to follow," but if "the police stand by and do nothing, the law is brought into disrepute." What is happening at unrest funerals now "is a kind of brinksmanship on both sides, with the people observing some of restrictions and ignoring others and the police choosing, part of the time, to look the other way. Sooner or later there will be a miscalculation on either side and the consequences will be tragic." As long as the ANC remains banned and there is no negotiation, blacks will seek "to transform funerals into nationalist political rallies. This trend should be allowed to take its natural course. Vigorous political activity in the black commnity should be accepted as eminently desirable in helping to create a climate of negotiation."

Attitude on Equal Education

"The government's attitude towards black education has undoubtedly changed over the years," the CAPE TIMES says in another editorial on the same page. However, education will never be equal until it is no longer divided along racial lines. "So long as a dominant white political party retains the power to compartmentalize education departments according to race and to allocate funds on this basis, it has no right to claim on behalf of other population that they are getting a fair deal." There will not be a fair deal until the different education departments are replaced by a unitary education system and until blacks "have at least as much parliamentary say in the running of such a unitary system, and in the distribution of school funds, as whites. That, after all, constitutes part of what power-sharing is all about. Paternal white largesse is no longer an acceptable substitute for educational equality."

U.S. Antiapartheid Protests

In an article on the same page on antiapartheid protests at universities in the United States, Robin Hallett writes: "So is the whole disinvestment campaign something about which Pretoria has no need to have sleepless nights? In the short run it may seem negligible — but that is not the end of the matter. For a new generation of Americans anti-apartheid demonstrations serve to focus attention — even if through pretty clouded lenses — on the whole South African issue. One way and another South Africa is going to be a significant issue in American politics for a long time to come."

New Parent-Teacher-Student Group

"An appeal for the cessation of violence 'among organizations of the oppressed' has been made by the newly-formed Federation of Parent-Teacher-Student Associations (PTSAS) Western Cape, which was launched at the Samaj Centre in Rylands Estate on Wednesday," the CAPE TIMES reports on page 9. The group said it has noted " 'the State is continually playing off one organization of the people against the other. This has resulted in suspicion developing amongst liberatory organisations' " and said it would work for " 'a unified system of education in a single, non-racial democratic SA/Azania.' " It called for the removal of troops from the townships and schools, the unbanning of " 'progressive people's organizations,' " the return of political exiles, the unconditional release of political prisoners, and the unconditional withdrawal of charges of public violence against students, among other things.

Government Aggravates Instability

"The Government's mismanagement of the reform process had aggravated the instability of this country and led to further violence, the leader of the opposition, Mr Colin Eglin, said," Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 13 May reports on page 4. Speaking in parliament, Eglin, said that while it was true reform often was accompanied by instability, "it was also true that a lack of real reform created instability." Although ministers "tend to console themselves with the belief" that the unrest was the result of reform, "the perception of Black people was that it was caused by a slowness, or lack, of reform." Eglin said the government had created expectations which it failed to meet and its reform process was often seen as replacing one form of apartheid with another.

Concessions to Eastern Cape

"The government has said it is willing to grant concessions, including the institution of a uniform steel price between East London and Port Elizabeth, to help improve economic conditions in the motor industry in the area," another report on the same page says. Speaking in parliament, Constitutional Development and Planning Minister Chris Heunis said "the Government had great understanding of the economic conditions in the Eastern Cape" and was putting together a package of concessions for the region.

CITIZEN on Tutu Remarks

In an editorial on page 6, THE CITIZEN comments on Bishop Tutu's remarks to the International Press Institute criticizing the press in South Africa. While Tutu said that he believed South African papers pandered to white interests, "we think Bishop Tutu panders to radical interests by failing to tell the foreign countries and media about the true situation in South Africa, including the Black on Black violence, the necklacings, and other forms of savagery." "We think Bishop Tutu has abandoned the true tenets of his religion by being a political priest" and has helped to create "the world hostility with his outrageous attacks on this country and Government." While there are "severe restrictions" on the press in South Africa, "in the final analysis the South African Government has shown a recognition of the value of a free press that is not to be found in other parts of Africa," and there is no newspaper "that does not want a more just, more equitable, a more democratic and non-racial set-up" in the country, although they may disagree with Tutu's idea of one-man-one-vote majority rule.

Opposition to Catholic Church Call

"The Catholic Church's call for increased economic pressure has again met with strong opposition from Pretoria parishioners — this time in the central parish," the paper reports on page 11. "A majority" of people attending a weekend meeting of "grass-roots Catholics" to discuss the South African Catholic Bishops Conference's call "expressed opposition to disinvestment measures." The director of the Catholic Defense League said " 'there seems to be widespread suspicion among the laity that there are Marxist forces at work in the Church.' "

HNP Opposes Regional Services Councils

"The Herstigte Nasionale Party [Reformed National Party, HNP] opposition in the Pretoria City Council has accused the council — to the Regional Services Council's Delimination Commission — of misrepresenting feelings in the capital system about the new system," a report on page 14 says. The HNP said the council had given a picture of favorable reaction to the Regional Services Council but this was not the case. The HNP also said it was "irrevocably opposed to the institution of a Regional Services Council for Pretoria because it inevitably meant a further step toward integration."

School To Vote on Opening

"Parents of pupils at the Government-run Rondbosch Boys High and Preparatory Schools are to meet later this month to vote whether they favour open schools," THE CITIZEN reports on page 15. The vote follows discussions "between the staff, the school committee and Old Boys."

Danger of Shortlived Upswing

"Any moderate upswing in the economy may be shortlived if the question of the foreign debt repayments and the availability of foreign capital is not resolved satisfactorily, says Gencor [General Mining Union Corporation] chairman Ted Pavitt in his 1985 Review for Employees," Madden Cole reports on page 21. Noting that no change is expected in the rand/dollar exchange rate or the price of cold, Pavitt said this will inhibit growth in the mining sector and have negative effects in the engineering, transport, and construction fields.

Squatters' Shacks Demolished

"Heavily armed police yesterday fired tearsmoke and set dogs on Mofolo, Soweto squatters whose tin shacks were demolished for the second time in a week," Langa Skosana reports on the front page of Johannesburg SOWETAN in English on 13 May. "Several people were injured and at least two women were taken to hospital with dog bites and birdshot injuries."

UDF Leader in Court

"The United Democratic Front [UDF] chairman on the West Rand, Mr Phillip Tlhapane, appeared in the Rand Supreme Court yesterday on charges of murder, robbery with aggravating circumstances, possession of a firearm and ammunition and theft," the SOWETAN reports on page 2. Tlhapane appeared with four other men — three whites and one black — and the case was postponed until 1 September.

Northern Transvaal Boycott

"The Pietersburg Chamber of Commerce is to meet tonight to discuss the consumer boycott which started in several Northern Transvaal towns yesterday, according to its secretary, Mr L. Searle," Mathatha Tsedu reports on the same page. "Many blacks heeded the call in Pietersburg yesterday. Major chain stores were virtually devoid of black customers. Mr Searle said he did not know the reasons for the boycott and could not estimate the loss, 'if any,' until tonight's meeting."

Venda Detainees Released

"Six detainees, including two who were on a hunger strike, have been released from detention by Venda security police," the SOWETAN reports on page 3. One of the six is an organizer of the Black General Workers Union who, along with another man, had been on a hunger strike since 1 May.

SOWETAN on Soweto Violence

"There are serious indications that the eruptions of violence in Soweto might one day lead to something that would make Alexandra Township look like a Sunday school picnic," the SOWETAN says in an editorial on page 4. Attacks on motorists have become an everyday event and "there is fear that gangster elements have taken over the tactic and cars are robbed indiscriminately by youths who do not have any political motive or link. The day car owners take actions against the youths, there will be serious problems." Another "potential timebomb" is the "shacktown started by Mayor Mr E.T. Tshabalala," which could lead to a "Crossroads-like situation, whith all its socio-politico-economic problems smack in the middle of Soweto." However, "perhaps the most serious problem is that of a gang called Kabassas who are being used as a soft target by certain groups." It appears that "rightwing elements have taken over this soft option and are using the name Kabassas for their own sinister motives. Diepkloof has become something like a miniature Alexandra with people dying, houses being destroyed and general mayhem being the order of the day." Unless the government "makes haste to settle these factors," there is the possibility that they will "one day burst in one powerful explosion" and "this country will really see some thing it had never bargained for. And so will the world."

'Focus' on Soweto

The "Focus" column on the same page also discusses the "timebomb" in Soweto, noting that "residents are being pushed to the end of their tether by recent events in the townships." Residents believed as many as 20 people were killed in a "reign of terror" over the weekend and it has been alleged that off-duty policemen were responsible for the violence. Other factors that can lead to an "explosion" are the hijacking of cars and the lack of housing. Furthermore, "house rents and high electricity bills, which have been a big sore point over the years, could lead to conflict between the residents and the authorities. There are now rumblings for rents boycott." "Considering all these factors, it is anyone's guess if a big blow-up is in the cards in Soweto."

Malan on Violence

Johannesburg THE STAR in English on 13 May reports on page 4 that Defense Minister General Magnus Malan told the House of Representatives that " 'South Africa will not hold talks with people who propound violence and do not reject it unambiguously.' " He said "dealing with violent organizations would lead to 'capitulation, loss of freedom' and 'walking the path that the rest of Africa has walked.' " In another story on the same page Gen Malan told the House that conscription for coloreds would possibly be introduced in the future but only if the colored community wanted it. " 'The security of the country is indivisible. Defending the country is not the task or duty of one population group,' " he said.

Complaints Against SADF

The deputy defence minister, Adriaan Vlok, told the House of Representatives that "only eight of 40 complaints of Defence Force misconduct during unrest had proved well-founded," another page 4 report says. The SADF had taken action against the eight.

Call for 3-Day Stayaway

"The National Education Crisis Committee (NECC) has urged the South African business coummnity to heed the black community's call to recognise June 16 as a paid holiday," a page 9 report says. The NECC chairman said the call for national stayaway on 16 June was a "democratic decision taken by the majority of the country's population." The NECC has also called for work stoppages on 17 and 18 June. The NECC chairman said "the black community would use the three-day stayaway to review political progress."

Farmers' Threat

" 'We have had our say — now we will shoot if necessary,' was the last word from farmers in the Steelpoort Valley near Burgersfort, in the North Eastern Transvaal, to THE STAR yesterday," a page 9 article says. "They have threatened to take the law into their own hands, alleging that activists are raiding their farms and endangering their families." The farmers say their laborers are being prevented from working on the farms by ANC and United Democratic Front activists.

Views on ANC

"The African National Congress did not believe in anarchy, according to the Director of the Centre for Intergroup Studies at the University of Cape Town, Professor H.W. van der Merwe," another report on page 9 says. He said there was "growing concern within the ANC about 'radical elements' in this country. 'Their fears are matched by our growing fears about the Rightwing Afrikaners.' " Professor van der Merwe, who met with senior ANC officials on a recent visit to London and has met the ANC on several occasions, said the "ANC was prepared to talk to the South African Government, but that the group would not say this publicly."

STAR on Tutu's Criticism

Commenting on Bishop Desmond Tutu's criticism of the South African press, THE STAR says in an editorial on page 14 that "each newspaper will have to assess the degree of relevance to itself of Bishop Tutu's comments. THE STAR finds itself with no call to apologise to anyone." Difficulties confronting the South African press are evident: "a myriad laws inhibit publication;" some state agencies peddle propaganda and even disinformation; police reports on violence are skimpy and uninformative. But "we believe that there are still concerned newspapers in this country which continue to perform an inestimable service by giving the news and maintaining bridges across colour lines as the country polarises. If the day ever comes that THE STAR can no longer perform this service, or is so restricted in its ability to do the job that it begins knowingly to mislead its readers, we will tell them so. That day is not yet. May it never come."

Editorial on Alexandra Crackdown

"This weekend's crackdown on Alexandra Township raises the question whether the combined police and army boots might not have been brought down too heavily, particularly as the very presence of security forces is itself considered provocative in the townships," a second editorial says. "When the soldiers not only do not leave the township but virtually lay siege to it, the authorities ought to provide good and clearly stated reasons for the crackdown. House-to-house searches may indeed uncover lawless elements — but what do they do to the lawful lying abed?"

Growth of Rightwing

Political correspondent David Braun, writing on the editorial page, says "while South Africa's black politics simmer and seethe on the left of the political spectrum there is a steady process of realignment under way in white politics." The forces on the right are consolidating and using every means to reverse President Botha's reforms; the National Party is increasingly showing stresses and strains as it struggles to find solutions to the many pressures; and political movements to the left of the government are going to find their white support diminishing. "The white right has clearly adopted a 'total onslaught' strategy to win power from the Government." Right-wing solidarity is found in the informal but increasingly "cozy" alliance between the Volkswag [National Guard] (cultural and intellectual arm), the Conservative Party (parliamentary and business arm) and the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging [Afrikaner Resistance Movement] (military or home guard arm). "The alliance is dedicated to overthrowing the Government by every means available." Mindful of all this, the "National Party attempts to walk an increasingly treacherous road between rising expectations of meaningful reform and white resistance to power-sharing." National Education Minister F.W. de Klerk and Foreign Minister Pik Botha "epitomise the different tendencies in the National Party. One emphasises the own affairs (separate development) aspect of the party's policy, the other the power-sharing principles." "Whether one of these two wings will eventually break away from the party will depend on future developments in the country."

Tutu on Black Rule

A report from Vienna on page 15 of THE STAR says "Bishop Desmond Tutu has rejected the new South African Government proposals for black participation in local government, saying they were 'too little and too late.' " Speaking on Austrian television, Bishop Tutu said "black South Africans had proved that when they were not hamstrung they were fully capable of participation in government. 'We do not want black government,' he said. 'We want South African government. We don't want to shed blood.' Black majority rule, he said, would come 'sooner than most people believe.' "

KwaZulu-Natal Difficulties

"The KwaZulu/Natal indaba has not been stopped in its tracks by the Government's new provisional system, but it could make the acceptance of any recommendations more difficult," a page 15 article says. Government spokesmen are "steering around questions on what will happen if the KwaZulu/Natal indaba recommends a single legislature for the region."

Confidence in Rand Drops

Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English for 13 May reports on page 2 that "confidence in the rand appears to be ebbing despite the bearish trend of the dollar. The foreign exchange market is signalling that importers would be wise to take forward cover both on dollar/rand transactions and on their commitments in the other major foreign currencies." Forecasts are that the rand would drop as low as $0.45 although it might fluctuate between this and a possible $0.48. No one is talking about a $.050 rand.

BUSINESS DAY on People's Courts

Commenting on the "people's courts" which are operating in Alexandra, a page 6 editorial says "one does not need to be a lawyer to grasp the appalling dangers that lie in the emergence of kangaroo courts operating outside the safeguard of a mature legal system, but the striking thing about the alternative structure of local government is the degree to which it mimics the system that whites have been trying unilaterally to impose, down to the independent local police force." "Instead of sending in the Casspirs, government should be seeking intermediaries to open negotiation with the new power structure that is emerging. It should offer recognition to the system which township dwellers have devised for themselves, subject to the single condition that they submit to free and open elections. Then it would have a chance of bringing the 'people's courts' under the umbrella of law without which they will certainly, by force of human nature, degenerate into instruments of gang law."

Ambassador to U.S. Praised

Simon Barber reports from Washington on the editorial page on South African Ambassador to the United States Herbert Beukes, calling him "perhaps the most effective envoy SA has ever had here." "That Beukes has thrived in the job despite all the early tribulations can be ascribed less to the positive actions lately undertaken by his employers than to the nature of the man himself. In the simplest terms, he is well-liked, not only by the State Department — where he is widely regarded as a tremendous improvement over the stiff, formal Dr Fourie — but even among his government's most unforgiving opponents." Here for once is the official voice of Pretoria saying "mea culpa instead of go to hell." "In Washington, at least, SA's pariahdom is beginning, albeit slowly, to be replaced by something not far off acceptance. Herbert Beukes deserves much of the credit."

Position of Reserve Bank

A page 7 report says the "Reserve Bank will be unable to withdraw from the forward market — - an important recommendation of the De Kock Commission — in September this year." "The Bank, which alone provides forward cover to commercial banks, has it hands tied by the need to support the rand, foreign debt commitments and maturing forward contracts." Pretoria's growing dependence on the forward market to generate spot dollars has sidelined the suggestions of the De Kock Commission.

BEELD on EPG Visit

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans for 13 May says in an editorial on page 12 that the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Groups' [EPG] first visit to South Africa had evoked skepticism and amusement. Now the group has begun a follow-up visit and the attitude toward them is more positive. Those who regard the EPG's visit as uncalled-for meddling should realize that they are representing the Commonwealth, which could impose economic sanctions on South Africa. It is important for South Africa not to invite further economic sanctions from abroad. Noting that any foreign mediator should realize that it could only create a favorable climate for negotiation, it says that only the government and the ANC, for example, can decide if they want to talk to each other. Concluding, it says "we wish the visitors wisdom. South Africa is not so headstrong that it cannot learn from the wisdom of others."

BEELD Views UNITA

In another editorial BEELD says "indications are that a bloody battle will ensue when the MPLA forces attack UNITA this month after the rainy season." However, it says UNITA will be well-prepared because of U.S. military support. On the other side Russia is delivering weapons on an unprecedented scale to keep Dos Santos in power. What is more worrying, it notes, is that Russia has promised "joint action" to keep the MPLA in power. What the action will entail has not been spelled out, but America could be forced to give more than just military support to UNITA. Therefore, South Africa is bound to give support to UNITA as General Magnus Malan bluntly stated last year. It seems as if a stalemate situation has been reached in which there is little hope of a settlement plan for southwest Africa being reached in the foreseeable future. The MPLA cannot do without the Cubans, and America and South Africa will not allow UNITA to be overrun.

DIE VADERLAND on Tutu Remarks

Johannesburg DIE VADERLAND in Afrikaans on 13 May says in an editorial on page 8 that "Bishop Tutu's statement that white newspapers publish little news about black communities is correct." It is a valid objection but it does not happen without good reason. Papers are aimed at their specific readership. In black newspapers news on how whites think and live is nonexistent. The truth is that if white newspapers were to report extensively on blacks and vice versa, this type of reporting would not appeal to their readers. Concluding, it says "in spite of this white newspapers try to inform their readers on black thinking. The same cannot be said of black newspapers."

WEEKLY MAIL Publishes 'Apartheid Barometer'

MB120727 Johannesburg WEEKLY MAIL in English 9-15 May 86 p 4

["Apartheid Barometer"]

Increase in Police Force:
Minister of Law and Order Louis le Grange announced in parliament that the government had decided to increase the Police Force from 48,000 to 87,000 in the next 10 years. Replying to another question, he said the police had orders to fire on children only as a last resort. "But there were children and children." According to a recent statement by Helen Suzman (PFP [Progressive Federal Party] Houghton): of the 1,500 people killed in the last 19 months during unrest, 1,000 died at the hands of the police.

Military Extension of Internal Security Act:
During December 1985, when parliament was in recess, an amendment to the Defence Act was gazetted (Notice R2772 of December 13, 1985) which has far-reaching implications in the use of the SADF for performing police functions, particularly in the context of political unrest. In this amendment the SADF personnel are empowered in terms of provisions of the Police Act, the Criminal Procedures Act, and the Internal Security Act detain, search, confiscate, man roadblocks and prevent and disperse gatherings. Thus the role of the SADF, as an instrument of the state in the suppression of political protest, has been formalised.

Group Areas Act:
Between July 1985 and April 18 this year, 133 people were granted permission to live in a group area designated for a race group other than their own and 104 applications were refused, according to Minister of Constitutional Development and Planning Chris Heunis.

ZAMBIA

Kaunda Receives Ministers From Chad, Benin

AB131127 Dakar PANA in English 1002 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] Lusaka, 13 May (ZANA/PANA) — President Kaunda said yesterday he is concerned at the continuing loss of life in the Chad civil war which is being fanned by outsiders. Zambia was disturbed because the people of Chad had not been allowed to live in peace. Receiving Chadian Minister of Economic Affairs Mr Soumaila Mahamat at State House, Dr Kaunda said Zambians were praying for the day when Chadians would be left alone to determine their destiny. People both old and young are losing lives everyday which is not good for Chad. We are praying that time will come and come quickly when people of Chad will be left alone in peace to decide their own future, the president said. Mr Mahamat said he was in Zambia to deliver a special message from President Hissein Habre to Dr Kaunda on the latest situation in Chad. We know that Zambia follows closely the situation in Chad because you personally attach a lot of importance to peace in Africa and it is for this reason that I was sent to come and explain what is happening in our country today, Mr Mahamat said.

At a separate function, Dr Kaunda hailed the warm relations between Zambia and Benin. Speaking when he received that country's Minister of External Affairs Mr Fredirie Affo, the president said he was looking forward to the day when his counterpart, General Mathieu Kerekou, would visit Zambia. Mr Affo said he was here to deliver a special message from Gen Kerekou whom he said admired President Kaunda's leadership qualities and what he was doing for Africa.

India's Gandhi Arrives on 2-Day Official Visit

MB140702 Lusaka Domestic Service in English 0632 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi has arrived in the country for a 2-day official visit to Zambia. Mr Gandhi, who is accompanied by his wife Sonia, was met at the airport by President Kaunda; the secretary general of the party, Mr Grey Zulu; Prime Minister Keby Musokotwane; and high-ranking government officials.

The Indian prime minister, who is on a 5-day tour of black African states bordering white minority-ruled South Africa, will also visit Zimbabwe, Angola, and Tanzania for talks which will focus on South Africa and Pretoria's occupation of Namibia. Mugabe Opens Population Conference in Harare

MB121159 Harare Domestic Service in English 1115 GMT 12 May 86

[Excerpt] The prime minister, Comrade Robert Mugabe, has called on delegates the All-Africa Parliamentary Conference on Population and Development to come up with such resolutions as take into account Africa's socio-economic system. Opening the conference in Harare this morning, Comrade Mugabe said no population program should be taken in isolation from policies on health, education and employment, environment and use of available resources. He said under Zimbabwe's 5-year development plan, concern is expressed at the present population growth rate of 2.84 percent relative to the gross domestic product. The prime minister said it is for this reason that his government, since independence, has had family planning programs to reduce that growth and improve the quality of life.

Iran-Iraq War

Iraqi planes bombed a Tehran-bound passenger train at a station north of Ahvaz in Khuzestan Province, killing 54 civilians and wounding 246 others, according to IRNA reports. Iranian Prime Minister Mir Hoseyn Musavi warned that the attack will not go unanswered, while a military statement declared that Iran will "decisively respond" to the Iraqi action, IRNA reported. Tehran radio subsequently revealed that the Iranian Foreign Ministry has sent a note to the UN secretary general in which it "strongly condemns" the Iraqi air strike.

As for Iraq's attack in the northern Hajj 'Umran area, a military report cited by Tehran radio stated that Iraq lost over 2,500 troops killed or wounded in the offensive, which was "fully crushed" by Iranian forces. Over 15 Iraqi tanks were destroyed and an Iraqi helicopter airstrip in Diyanah was bombed by Iranian planes, IRNA reported earlier. On the other hand, communiques broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio claimed that Iraq captured several peaks overlooking the Hajj 'Umran basin in an offensive that was "settled completely" in Iraq's "favor." Further south, in the Faqqeh area, Iranian forces defeated another Iraqi attack, killing or wounding over 400 enemy troops and destroying over 22 tanks, according to a military report cited by IRNA. For Iraq's part, a communique reported that an Iranian offensive in the East Maysan area was repulsed with 780 Iranians killed and scores captured, according to Voice of the Masses.

In air activity, Iranian planes raided the Iraqi oil installations and refinery in Kirkuk, causing "substantial damage" to them, according to a communique cited by IRNA.

The Baghdad paper AL-THAWRAH asserted that an undisclosed number of fighters from eight Arab countries, including Syria, Egypt, and Jordan, are to depart for southern Iraq to participate in the fighting against Iranian forces in the Al-Faw area, according to WAKH.

Sudan

The composition of the new cabinet was announced by Prime Minister Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi in a 15 May statement to the Constituent Assembly reported by SUNA, which noted that Al-Mahdi himself is the new defense minister while Democratic Unionist Party (DUP) Secretary General Al-Sharif Zayn al-'Abidin al-Hindi becomes deputy prime minister and foreign minister. The majority of portfolios are distributed among the Al-Ummah National Party and the DUP, but the Cabinet also includes four southerners and a new minister for "peace and unity" whose brief reflects the importance of the south in the government's priorities, according to an earlier KUNA report.

As for the new government's foreign policy, Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi told a 14 May press conference that Sudan will maintain good-neighborly relations with Libya but that it is still keen to maintain relations with the United States. Sudan will seek relations with the superpowers without military, security, or political affiliations, he added. The new government will review treaties concluded by former President Ja'far al-Numayri, including the defense pact with Egypt, and it will hold talks with Egyptian officials on the integration agreement to find an acceptable alternative. He also said legislation to rectify the 1983 Islamic laws will be one of his government's top priorities.

DRA

PDPA Secretary General Najibullah announced the strengthening and consolidation of the PDPA "collective" leadership in a 14 May speech carried by BAKHTAR. He said authority will henceforth be divided in a "logical manner" with Babrak Karmal concentrating on the work of new state organs and Soltan Ali Keshtmand focusing on the tasks of government and economic policy.

Jordan

Three students were killed and 18 policemen were injured during clashes between student demonstrators and police at Yarmuk University, an Interior Ministry spokesman announced in a statement broadcast by Amman radio 15 May. Accusing a student "sabotage group" of exploiting the dismissal of 32 students from the university 13 May, the spokesman said the protests began that day and continued the following day when the demonstrators caused "havoc" on the campus. The police managed to control the situation and to arrest several agitators, he stated.

Syria

Reaction to Peres Statement — Commenting on Israeli Prime Minister Shim'on Peres' statement that there is no chance of a political settlement with Syria as long as President Hafiz al-Asad remains in power, Damascus radio affirmed that Syria seeks a "just and comprehensive" peace but it rejects the Arab "capitulation" envisaged in Israel's understanding of peace. The main obstacle to peace in the Middle East is Israel's occupation and seizure of other people's territory, its denial of Palestinian national rights, and its drive to establish a "Greater Israel," the radio maintained. An AL-BA'TH editorial cited by the radio stressed that Al-Asad's leadership is a "firm guarantee" that the Arab struggle will be maintained.

Lebanese Hostages — In Lebanon, a caller claiming affiliation with Islamic Jihad warned that the Jihad's foreign hostages will be "the first who will pay" for "pressure" on Syria and the Jihad group, according to AFP. The caller did not say how many hostages remain but he disclosed that some have already been executed. The clandestine Radio Free Lebanon said the caller also warned Syria against trying to secure the release of the U.S. and French hostages.

Israel

West Bank — A curfew was imposed in Nabulus following violent demonstrations by Palestinian residents protesting a scheduled Independence Day march by Jewish settlers, Jerusalem radio reported. At least five Palestinians were injured in clashes with police.

Arms Smuggling — Responding to the arrest by U.S. authorities of Israeli citizen Ze'ev Reiss on suspicion of arms smuggling, the Defense Ministry announced that it knows nothing about Reiss and that an investigation indicates that he does not hold a permit to deal in exporting arms, according to Jerusalem radio.

Kuwait

Finance Minister Jasim al-Kharafi recently revealed that Kuwait is studying the possibility of diverting some of its investments from the West to the East and Third World countries including the Soviet Union and China, KUNA reported. The minister was replying to a question raised in the National Assembly on the future of Kuwait's investments in the West in light of the freezing of Libyan assets in the United States.

PLO's Al-Wazir on Adherence to Cairo Agreement

JN141811 Baghdad Voice of the PLO in Arabic 1718 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Brother Abu Jihad [Khalil al-Wazir], deputy commander in chief of the Paelstinian revolution forces, has affirmed that the PLO adheres to the Cairo agreement governing relations between the PLO and the official Lebanese authorities concluded in Cairo in 1969. In a statement published in Beirut, Abu Jihad said that relations between the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples are stronger than any agreement. In this regard, he stressed the PLO's belief that the Cairo agreement should govern the official relations between the PLO and the Lebanese state. He also affirmed the PLO's rejection of any interference in Lebanon's domestic affairs, adding: But we stick to our right to defend ourselves and protect our camps from the Zionist aggression or from any aggression against their existence.

Commentary Views Possible Syrian-Israeli Clash

JN122030 Baghdad Voice of the PLO in Arabic 1658 GMT 12 May 86

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] Arab, Israeli, and Western news reports say that war between Syria and Israel is imminent and that its outbreak is all but decided. Some reports say that the Israeli objective is to deal a blow to the ever-increasing Syrian military power before it becomes too difficult for Israel to do so. Before anything else, we must emphasize that the Zionist enemy's endeavor is to destroy any Arab military power which may pose at one moment or another a military threat to the Zionist entity if an all-out Arab-Israeli war were to break out.

Within this context, it becomes clear and understandable why the Israeli enemy seeks to prolong the Iraqi-Iranian war and does its best to keep it raging. In short, the destruction of any Arab military power which is steadily increasing constitutes a strategic objective for the Israeli enemy. However, this objective, although strategic, does not alone constitute a motive for the outbreak of war. There are many circumstances, objectives, political reasons, and various designs which are involved and which make war a necessity.

The eurption of war may be necessary to arrange some kind of a settlement within the attainment of a strategic objective or as a result of the limited war. The expected war between Syria and Israel is within this context. In other words, many fear the results of a war between Syria and Israel will be later employed to attain some kind of political settlement which the Israeli enemy and Washington would try to tailor in accordance with their objectives and hostile designs, particularly in respect to the Palestinian cause and its liquidation.

Why this fear? Because the war, if it takes place, will be limited and not comprehenisve in view of Arab division. This fear is also substantiated by the fact that the Syrian regime has started offering the required concessions. Without any preliminaries, the Syrian president personally resumed his attacks against the PLO and its leader Yasir 'Arafat and announced that he will not permit the state of affairs in Lebanon to return to what it was before 1982. We do not doubt that there is anyone who believes that this announcement is addressed to Israel.

No one also doubts that the attack against the PLO and its leader Yasir 'Arafat reassures Israel before anyone else. Objectively speaking, we say that if there is a slight chance that a political settlement of the Middle East problem could be attained as a result of the expected war, then why does the Syrian side now resume its media campaign against the PLO and its leader Yasir 'Arafat? This campaign seeks to clarify that the differences with the PLO are still pending, that the PLO continues to be persona non grata in Damascus, and that coordination with it as an independent party continues to be rejected by Damascus.

We have the right to ask this question and to ask too whether a real war can take place against Israel without the PLO, wich pursues an effective war against it. Can a real war take place while the Israeli enemy does not want the Palestinians to have any presence in Lebanon and while the Syrian side announces that it will not permit the situation in Lebanon to return to what it was before 1982? This means that the Syrian side will not allow Palestinian fighters to return to the state of affairs that prevailed before the Israeli invasion of Lebanon in the summer of 1982.

Why then this announcement which was made in light of another announcement about an expected war with the enemy? How then can the equation stand? This is a big question. Will war break out to reply to this question?

Release of Workers Not End of Dispute With Qatar

GF150538 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English 15 May 86 p 1

[Article by a staff reporter]

[Text] Release of 30 men held hostage by Qatar has failed to diffuse the Fasht al Dibal crisis.

And fears are high that Qatar may now press its territorial dispute through further military action.

All diplomatic efforts which Bahrain has continually supported — to resolve the crisis have ended in stalemate.

With Qatari troops in place on the tiny island, and being reinforced, other GCC states are, according to informed sources, viewing the deadlock as "explosive".

A senior observer told the GDN [Gulf Daily News]: "There has been no military withdrawal whatsoever following the release of the 30 hostages.

"Qatar is maintaining heavy artillery, rockets and soldiers on the island and a further huge arsenal of weapons and men is stationed south opposite the Hawar Islands."

Recent internal problems in Qatar are also fuelling fears of an escalation of the crisis from Doha.

"There people are unpredictable and have already proved capable of treating innocent people in an uncivilised manner," said the observer.

Qatar's army and air-force is known to be on a state of high alert and normal air corridors for civilian aircraft are closed.

In the face of this tension, however, Bahrain is maintaining hopes of a peaceful solution.

"There is a state of confusion over what the Qataris are up to," said the observer.

"The captives were freed following constant diplomatic pressure which was the government's first priority. Troop withdrawal was the second.

"Since then, however, all mediation efforts to end the stand-off have hit a stone wall."

KUWAIT

Government Seeks To Diversify Foreign Investments

LD141248 Kuwait KUNA in English 1156 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] London, May 14 (KUNA) — Kuwait's announcement that it will seek to diversify its foreign investments has created considerable interest among financial circles in London, where a significant part of the country's investment activities are based. Initially, market-watchers greeted the announcement, by Finance Minister Jasim al-Kharafi, with concern, fearing that large sums invested in the West could be pulled out and diverted to Third World and Socialist countries.

Al-Kharafi had said that Kuwait was studying the possibility of boosting its investment in countries such as the Soviet Union, China, India, Turkey and South Korea. He was replying to a question in the National Assembly about the future of Kuwaiti investments in the West, especially after the freezing of Libyan assets in the United States.

Although financial observers here have said they expect no significant immediate change in Kuwaiti investment policy, the announcement has raised interest in the long-term effects of Kuwait's desire for more diversification. At present, the bulk of Kuwaiti investments are in Western markets, including some 4.22 billion dinars (14.7 billion dollars) in the U.S. and a major London-based operation under teh direction of the highly-regarded Kuwait investment office.

THE GUARDIAN newspaper, in a commentary on the Kuwaiti announcement, said Al-Kharafi's statement was "very important" on two counts. Firstly, because of the declining U.S. currency, the statement will encourage other countries and firms with big dollar investments to seek other markets for their cash. However the paper pointed out that many Third World economies with a promising investment potential lack the necessary financial mechanisms to attract capital from abroad.

Therefore Kuwait's declared wish to diversify its investments is likely to encourage countries such as India to develop new financial instruments and products, in order to attract foreign equity investments in their industries, which are rapidly becoming profitable and competitive. The paper described Kuwait as "a sophisticated investor" and concluded that while the Kuwaiti announcement may not have much short-term effect, in the long run it could mark a new trend in the financial world. "When (Kuwait) speaks, others should listen", THE GUARDIAN commented.

Tornado Deal Reflects 'Essence' of Defense Policy

PM141332 Jeddah 'UKAZ in Arabic 7 May 86 p 1

[Unattributed "News Analysis": "The Tornado Deal: Its Significance and Its Dimensions"]

[Text] The Tornado aircraft which will fly in the kingdom's sky today are the first batch of a 132-aircraft deal worth about 5 million pounds sterling which observers consider to be one of the biggest military deals in contemporary history.

The observers believe that this deal clearly reflects the essence of the kingdom's defense policy, which is based on a number of principles, the most important of which are: First: The kingdom's desire to build and strengthen its defense capabilities in the midst of a turbulent world and an inflammable area within the framework of a strategy primarily aimed at strengthening security and stability, defending our gains, and protecting all sacred things.

Second: The kingdom is always anxious to diversify its sources of armament and to benefit from the latest products of the technology of the age and of the world's arsenals. The Tornado deal in this regard proves that the kingdom is capable of obtaining its arms and military hardware requirements from any quarter that understands the reality of its requirements, meets its requests, and does not subject such deals to extortion of any kind.

Third: The kingdom buys arms directly with its money and unconditionally. It does not resort to borrowing, which always gives it the freedom of decision-making Fourth: The observers assert that the kingdom's success in concluding the Tornado deal was a success for its defense policy which is based on the above principles and on maintaining a strategic balance in the area where military quarters point out to the fact that Israel's growing military power in the Middle East makes it necessary to maintain a balance which, if disturbed, will expose the area to the danger of a conflagration breaking out at any time.

Fifth: The observers believe from a purely political and military standpoint that it is natural for the kingdom, being the cornerstone of any regional or international effort to defuse the situation in the area, particularly at a time when the Iraq-Iran war has reached a stalemate, to acquire all means of strength and military sufficiency in order to prepare the suitable ground that would enable it to play its ideal political role of maintaining stability in the area.Sixth: The military circles and the quarters concerned note with great appreciation the progress the kingdom has made in obtaining the latest equipment for its armed forces as well as in providing the cadres and the manpower capable of using the modern equipment and aircraft. This emanates from a firm and basic concept of the kingdom's defense policy, which provides that real strength lies not only in providing aircraft, guns, and missiles but also in a manpower capable of absorbing this equipment and using it in accordance with preset objectives and strategy.

Agfund Chief Rules Out Early Arab Summit

LD141545 Kuwait KUNA in English 1306 GMT 14 May 86

[By Samir Quaryouti]

[Text] Rome, May 14 (KUNA) — Prince Talal ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz of Saudi Arabia ruled out Wednesday the convening of an early Arab summit due to "the entangled Arab problems" and said the Arab world can not advance even one step in the absence of democratic freedoms.

In an exclusive interview with KUNA, Prince Talal who is president of the Arabian Gulf Program for Support of U.S. Development Organizations (Agfund), proposed a summit which avoids contentious political subjects and rather concentrates on development issues, food security and integration. Prince Talal said Arab ruptures and political differences were placing big obstacles in the face of holding the proposed Arab summit.

"If we stay clear from the controversial problems which have become known to every Arab, then our leaders can come to minimal agreement," the Saudi prince noted. He said Arab governments cannot ignore either superpowers and should forge friendly ties based on mutual respect and understanding.

Prince Talal said progress and prosperity come through democratic life and it is up to each Arab country to choose the form of democracy it wishes and suits its circumstances. "It will be very difficult for the Arab world and developing nations in general to achieve progress without first accepting democracy and freedoms of expression and thinking," said Prince Talal who yesterday attended a meeting of the food and agriculture organization.

He said the Arab nation has to give more attention to its growing future needs in view of its high population growth rate. According to U.S. figures supported by Arab League studies, the Agfund president said, the Arab import bill of cereals, oils and meats is to range between 90 and 250 billion dollars compared with a population of 260-290 millions in the year 2000. He said without serious efforts to increase Arab food productivity, the Arab nation is destined to face a food catastrophe.

On Arab American relations, the Saudi Prince said "anti-Arab feelings in the U.S. has reached unprecedented levels not only because of the strong Zionist lobby there but also due to Arab behavoir...and the idiocy of some Arabs." Prince Talal said the Arab would has many friends in the West but they have been dismayed by lack of Arab unity.

Speaking of Gulf affairs, the Agfund president said the Gulf Cooperation Council might become just another Arab League if "Gulf citizens are not involed in council meetings, deliberations and resolutions." The council was founded in 1981 by Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar, Oman and the United Arab Emirates to enhance economic and political cooperation.

He said the Arab Gulf states are now facing a "terrifying" economic crisis in the aftermath of the oil boom of the 1970's. The Prince said instead of pinning blame, efforts should be channeled towards curing the economic ills of the Gulf region.

Commenting on the Palestinian cause, Prince Talal said he saw no early settlement of the problem but Arab intellectuals have to draw world public opinion to the necessity of resolving it.

Mubarak Views Palestinian Question, Other Issues

PM131049 Paris LE MATIN in French 9 May 86 p 10

[Alain Chemali dispatch: "Race for Mubarak"]

[text] Cairo — Egyptian President Husni Mubarak celebrated his 58th birthday on 4 May. It was an almost young, fully fit man who hurried into Al-'Urubah palace where he has his office. He had only just finished his daily squash session. Every morning between 0600 and 0700 the Rais starts his day with this exercise, his close aides explained. However, the previous day he had a 'secret' meeting which went on until 0300 with Lebanese President Amin al-Jumayyil, who was in Cairo on the first leg of a tour of several Arab capitals.

This secret visit was not mentioned at all during the interview with Husni Mubarak. For the time being the Egyptian president's main concern is to restore Egypt to its true role in the Arab world: "We are a pivot in the region, and nobody will rob us of our place."

The cornerstone of his action is still the attempt to find a peaceful solution to the Palestinian problem. "The Palestinians' right to self-determination in the framework of a Jordanian-Palestinian confederation must be recognized. Nobody can ignore the PLO; we must be realistic, and we will be able to find a solution." The main obstacle to this solution is obviously still "the Arab states' inability to agree. They are fighting among themselves and each is seeking its own interest. Egypt has good relations with most of these states: Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Jordan. It has problems primarily with Syria and Libya."

With regard to Syria, Mubarak reaffirmed that President al-Asad ought to withdraw from Lebanon. As for the Palestinian question, "the Syrian president said in Yugoslavia a few days ago that the problem ought to be solved peacefully. He admitted this during the Fes summit, but when he returned home he said that only force could win the day. Frankly, I do not understand what the Syrian president wants; if he were sincere he could cooperate easily." With regard to relations with the United States, the Rais emphasized the fact that many Arab states, including Syria, have good relations with Washington and that he had doubts about the implementation of the recent threats of American reprisals against Syria.

"The Great Fear"

But the problem of peace remains. "The situation was one of complete deadlock from the Israeli invasion of Lebanon until the Jordanian-Palestinian agreement of 11 February 1985. Today the great fear is that there will be very serious consequences if the United States does not agree, and we will have even more terrorism. The Palestinians want a land, and they are one of the main causes of terrorism. And by recognizing their rights we deprive some countries of the opportunity of using the Palestinian cause for their own benefit."

President Mubarak believes, however, that he lacks the power to pressure the Americans: "We are dealing with a superpower, and I can do not more than make contact and provide explanations to persuade them to accept the Palestinians' right to self-determination." On the Israeli side, the Rais has no prejudices: "We must negotiate with any Israeli government (Likud or Labor). We signed the Camp David agreements with Begin, but Peres is much more flexible and I would like to reach some agreements with him before his term of office is over. As far as Shamir is concerned, he did not agree with the Camp David negotiations, and he now thinks we are violating the agreements."

The Camp David agreements enabled Egypt to recover all its territory and oil and to open the Suez Canal. The Egyptian president hopes that the second of these agreements relating to the peaceful solution of the Palestinian problem will start to be implemented and that some Arab states will regret not joining in the process. The Egyptian approach is clear.

A few days ago Mubarak met the PLO leader, and he is due to meet King Husayn shortly. "I am going to revive the situation before we reach deadlock," he explained. "'Arafat emphasized the conditions for self-determination and he is prepared to recognize Resolution 242, which is a decisive precondition for Palestinian participation in an international conference."

[Text] Egypt is closely following the consultations which the seven member Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group is holding with the racist regime in South Africa. Ahmad Sidqi, head of the Foreign Ministry's African Department, has stated that the racist regime is continuing its endeavors to foil the current efforts to achieve a settlement in South Africa. In addition, the so-called reforms announced by the racist regime's president are merely an attempt to cover up Pretoria's practices and to prevent Namibia from attaining its independence in accordance with UN Resolution 435.

State of Emergency Declared at Cotton Plantations

NC141724 Paris AFP in English 1638 GMT 14 may 86

[Text] Cairo, May 14 (AFP) — Agriculture Minister Yusuf Wali has declared a state of emergency in cotton plantations throughout Egypt to enable the government to fight crop-threatening parasites, officials said here Wednesday. The officials said workers' weekly time off had been suspended and primary and secondary school pupils had been urged to take part in campaigns to eliminate the parasites. Some 50,000 teams had been outfitted with insecticides to check the spread of disease.

According to official figures, cotton accounts for six per cent of Egyptian exports. During the 1985-1986 period, production totalled 9.2 million quantars, against 7.9 million in 1984-85. A total of 2.79 million quantars (125,000 tonnes) was sold at the cotton exchange in Alexandria, with local mills using the remaining 6.5 million quantars.

The total area under cotton production for 1986-87 is expected to reach two million feddans (1.25 million acres) with production estimated at 10 million quantars, leaving an export margin of 3.5 to 3.6 million quantars. In 1984-1985, some 3.1 million quantars (140,000 tonnes) were exported for a total value of more than 300 million dollars. In 1983-1984, exports totalled 3.3 million quantars.

Relations With Sudan Facing 'Unprecedented Tension'

PM141424 Cairo AL-WAFD in Arabic 22 Apr 86 p 10

[Majdi Sarhan dispatch from Sudan: "Strong Libyan Presence in Sudan Prevents Building Bridges Between Cairo and Khartoum; Egyptian Students in Sudan Pay the Price of U.S. Aggression Against Libya"]

[Excerpts] It has become certain here in Khartoum that Egyptian-Sudanese relations will be the first challenge the new Sudanese Government will face. All signs indicate that these historical and strong relations will in the near future experience unprecedented tension, particularly under a Sudanese Government led by Sadiq al-Mahdi and assuming a new political structure that includes many trends that have their strong reservations about Egyptian-Sudanese relations, especially the agreements concluded between Egypt and Sudan, both old and recent. Foremost among these agreements are the Nile waters agreement and the integration agreement. The Egyptian Government realized, with the approach of the recent Sudanese elections, that these elections will decide the future of Egyptian-Sudanese relations. The Democratic Unionist Party is the only Sudanese party that has stuck to its principle — that Sudan's relations with Egypt form a unity between the two peoples of the Nile valley dictated by the natural extension of economic, political, social, and strategic interests. Leaders of this party were the only political leaders to visit Egypt before the recent elections, which confirms the Egyptian leadership's support for this party.

One of the most important issues that will directly affect Egyptian-Sudanese relations is the coming to power in Sudan of the Al-Ummah Party and its leader Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi, the improvement of Sudanese-Libyan relations and Al-Qadhdhafi's role in supporting certain political powers in Sudan during the recent elections, the recent U.S. aggression against Libya and the exploitation by Al-Qadhdhafi's allies in Sudan of the aggression in an attempt to ruin the relations between Egypt and Sudan, the question of integration, and finally the presence of deposed president Ja'far al-Numayri in Cairo and the demand by the Sudanese political forces for his extradition to Sudan in order to face trial. In our evaluation and appraisal of the future of Egyptian-Sudanese relations we must not overlook the visit which Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi was supposed to make to Cairo during the last few days of the elections as part of his tour of some Arab countries and the circumstances and implications involving the postponment of the visit twice. Observers and political leaders in Sudan believe that Al-Mahdi's visit to Egypt was probably postponed following contact between the Egyptian leadership and the leadership of the Democratic Unionist Party, Egypt's strong Sudanese ally, which expressed the view that Al-Mahdi's visit would strengthen his standing in the elections. Nevertheless, the reasons for postponing this visit remain conflicting and incomprehensible. The Egyptian leadership announced that the postponment was at the request of Al-Mahdi himself after everything had been prepared for the visit. Egyptian Ambassador in Khartoum Hasan 'Abbas Mushrifah stresses that the first time the visit was postponed at the request of the teaching faculty at Cairo University, Al-Mahdi was supposed to deliver a lecture, after the visit's itinerary had become entangled. [as published]

Thus the two sides gave conflicting reasons for the postponment or cancelation of the visit. But the question remains regarding the real reasons for postponing Al-Mahdi's visit to Cairo on 8 April. Was the postponment of the visit the second time Al-Mahdi's answer to the Egyptian side's request to postpone the visit the first time?

We will now move to the other issue that will directly influence the future of the Sudanese-Egyptian relations, namely the remarkable improvement in Sudanese-Libyan relations and Al-Qadhdhafi's penetration of the Sudanese political forces' ranks to the extent that he has acquired strong allies in Sudan in whom he was able to fire the spirit of hatred for Egypt and the Egyptian people. The forces concerned here are some of those new trends that emerged under different names following the Rajab [April] uprising, such as the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party, the Sudanese Communist Party, the small Sudanese Nasirite-oriented parties, and the revolutionary committees that include a considerable number of university students. These allies have revealed their true intentions toward Egyptian-Sudanese relations following the recent U.S. raid on Libya. Some of these did not hesitate to reiterate and to stress that Egypt played a role in these raids for they consider Egypt the biggest U.S. ally in the Arab area. And since the United States is their enemy then Egypt is their enemy too. It was then that groups of those who support this idea marched to the Egyptian consulate in Khartoum following the day the news of the raid on Libya broke. These groups shouted anti-Egyptian slogans. The Egyptian students in Sudan were not spared the manhandling and anger of Al-Qadhdhafi's allies. They were beaten and suffered injuries inside the college premises and even in their homes.

At the level of the major Sudanese parties we find that they have reservations regarding Egyptian-Sudanese relations being influenced by the improvement in Sudanese-Libyan relations.

The Al-Ummah Party believes, as its Secretary General 'Amir Nur al-Dayim puts it, that Egypt must view its relations with Libya objectively and that the new Sudanese leadership must seek to remove the bitterness and problems between Egypt and Libya while maintaining and developing Sudanese-Libyan relations. The Sudanese people will not forget Libya's firm and clear stand with them during their predicament. For its part the Democratic Unionist Party has declared its desire to develop Sudanese-libyan relations. As for Dr Hasan al-Turabi, Secretary General of the Islamic Front — the Muslim Brotherhood — he believes that the future of Egyptian-Sudanese relations depends on the Egyptian Government changing its present stand to an Arab stand on which the future of the Egyptian-Sudanese stands on the Middle East problem and African problems depend.

Next comes the question of integration in determining the framework of Sudanese-Egyptian relations. All the political forces in Sudan have reservations regarding these relations to the point that the Sudanese leadership during its transitional role was prompted to announce the freezing and reviewing of the integration agreement. In this regard Sudanese Information Minister Muhammad Hamid al-Bashir said that the Sudanese trend is toward evaluating the integration agreement and rectifying its course and not to cancel it.

Finally comes the problem of former president Ja'far al-Numayri's presence in Cairo and the Egyptian leadership's insistence on keeping him and giving excuses for not responding to the demand to extradite him to Sudan. This issue is at the forefront of the factors that would determine the future of Egyptian-Sudanese relations. In the past few days several fingers were pointed at the deposed president accusing him of using his residence in Cairo as a center for leading and hatching conspiracies aimed at crushing the uprising and returning to power. Thus the the problem of Al-Numayri's presence in Egypt is casting its shadow on the future of Egyptian-Sudanese relations. The possiblity that an official request will be made to the Egyptian Government by the new Sudanese Government to extradite Al-Numayri will remain a possibility. The party leaders still insist that Al-Numayri is politically active in Egypt. In a statement to AL-WAFD, the Al-Ummah Party secretary general said that the contacts which Al-Numayri is carrying out with the leaders of the May regime are causing concern to the Sudanese people, who feel that Al-Numayri is still being given total protection by the Egyptian Government in carrying out activities which, although they may not pose a threat to the democratic system in Sudan, are an indication of ill intentions. Now what will Egypt's stand be if it is officially asked to extradite Al-Numayri and what if Egypt refuses to extradite him? The coming days will provide the answer to these two questions.

Communique No 2,226 Issued on 13-14 May Operations

JN141701 Baghdad Voice of the Masses in Arabic 1608 GMT 14 May 86

[Communique No 2,226 issued by the Armed Forces General Command on 14 May 1986]

[Text] In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. It is another day of God-blessed victory recorded in our bright history by the vigor of our men. The following is a roundup of activities for yesterday evening and today:

1. The Khomeyniite scoundrels are hopelessly trying to find a way out of the defeat surrounding them. The hopeless enemy last night tried to attack our forward positions in the areas which the heroic IV Army Corps seized with the vigor and bravery of its men. The enemy sent a brigade from its 19th Division composed of five regiments of charlatan Khomeyni's guards backed by tanks and artillery. The men of the heroic IV Army Corps lay in wait for the enemy, and as soon as the enemy forces were within range, they opened their merciless fire on them. The enemy forces were crushed and their bodies littered the valleys. Only those who fled or surrendered were saved. In an attempt to save their situation, the enemy sent two companies. Their fate was no better than that of the brigade. They were completely routed. Confirmed enemy losses are 780 dead and scores of prisoners. Six enemy tanks, an armored personnel carrier, seven vehicles of different types, and seven ammunition dumps were destroyed. Our force also seized large quantities of arms, including a usable Chieftain tank. God bless the soldiers of the heroic IV Army Corps — commanders, officers, and men. Praised be God for His victory.

2. The Army's helicopter gunships are Iraq's pride. The courage and bravery of the helicopter pilots reinforces our country's victory over its renegade enemies. The heroes of the helicopter gunships had a great day today supporting our ground forces while they were liberating national soil. They inflicted on the criminal enemy heavy losses in personnel and equipment. They were the epitome of courage and loyalty. Having carried out 135 brave combat missions, the pilots returned to their bases safely in God's care.

3. Our Air Force continued its heroic activities today, giving splendid support to the ground forces of the V Army Corps while they were liberating our proud mountain peaks. They also inflicted heavy losses on the enemy in other operational theaters during 101 combat missions. Having carried out their duty courageously as usual, our brave eagles returned to their bases with their planes safely in God's care.

4. One of our units in the VI Army Corps sector east of the Tigris raided enemy positions on the opposite side. The unit clashed with the scoundrels who were using gunboats and rafts. Using various types of weapons and backed by heavy artillery fire, the unit succeeded in destroying four boats and three rafts, killing all their occupants, and setting two ammunition dumps on fire. The unit returned safely to its base.

5. A brave patrol which was on duty in the no-man's land in front of our positions in the V Army Corps northern sector succeeded in seizing five 120-mm mortars and two radio communication sets. The patrol returned safely to its base, God be praised.

6. The following was achieved in the III Army Corps sector east of Al-Basrah: five enemy personnel were killed; and one infantry position, one vehicle, one ammunition dump, and two observation posts were destroyed.

7. The forces of charlatanry and buffoonery shelled the suburbs of Khanaqin and Khurmal with long-range artillery. Two civilians were injured in Khurmal.

Interior Ministry Announces Deaths in Student Riots

JN151247 Amman Domestic Service in Arabic 1100 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] An official spokesman of the Ministry of Interior has stated the following: During the past 2 years, the Yarmuk University campus has been the scene of several student demonstrations and riots. During this period, the university has done its best through dialogue and discussion to tackle this situation. However, the university has noted that the agitators of those student disturbances was always the same student group which consists of not more than a few scores of students. This group managed to organize a demonstration against the university's decision to charge Engineering College students fees for practical training. Although the university administration later reduced these fees to 15 dinars, the sabotage group continued to instigate student demonstrations, using all kinds of reasons and excuses, and disturbing classes at the university. Thus, the University Council was compelled to make a decision on 3 May 1986, in accordance with the university's law and regulations, to dismiss 32 students from different semesters as of the beginning of the summer holiday and after the exams at the end of the current semester so students would not waste this semester. All this was done to preserve the university's educational process in a positive and stable atmosphere, thereby enabling the students to continue their studies in a calm university atmosphere away from anarchy and chaos.

On the morning of Tuesday, 13 May 1986, the university administration observed that certain student elements were distributing copies of a statement to the students and at the same time instigating them to regroup on the university campus. Later, several hundred students staged a demonstration and a group of these students tried to attack university employees. A member of the university administration was injured and admitted to the hospital. The university administration was thus compelled to request the assistance of the security organs in the city of Irbid. Police took up position outside the university walls to prevent suspect elements from infiltrating student circles and exploiting this incident for other purposes.

The students continued to gather and demonstrate. They staged sit-ins in some of the university buildings in order to continue the demonstrations, chaos, and sabotage acts until the following morning, Wednesday 14 May 1986. On that day, they stormed one of the exam halls, tore up exam papers, attacked several professors and students, and forced students taking exams to leave the exam halls. Throughout yesterday, Wednesday, the student demonstrators continued their riots and acts of sabotage inside the university campus. They broke doors, smashed windows, and tampered with all the university property they could lay hands on.

In the meantime, the university administration sought the help of a number of official and public figures in the city and the governorate in order to persuade the students to stop the rioting, chaos, and sabotage acts and leave the university campus. The dialigue with the students continued until late last night. However, the students refused to respond to all the attempts that were made. When the rioting and sabotage acts increased, the university administration requested, at the behest of a large number of professors and students, the intervention of the police to end the riots and chaos and to restore peace and order to the university campus.

The police entered the university campus at 0015 without carrying any weapons. They requested that the demonstrators leave the university campus. The student demonstrators confronted the police and attacked them with stones and empty bottles. Two police officers and 16 policemen sustained various injuries and were admitted to the hospital for treatment. Due to stampedes and attacks with stones and empty bottles and also as a result of the clash that took place, two female students, Maha Muhammad Qasim and Marwah Tahir al-Shaykh, and one male student, Ibrahim Muhammad Mahmud Hammad, died and several others sustained slight injuries. They were treated and later discharged from hospital. The police succeeded in controlling the situation and restoring peace and order to the university campus. Several student agitators were apprehended and are now under interrogation.

The official spokesman expressed regret over the riots and sabotage acts to which Yarmuk University was exposed at the hand of a sabotage group which has harmed the university and society in general and which has led to these regrettable results, whose responsibility is borne by that misled sabotage group.

The official spokesman of the Ministry of Interior affirmed that no individual or faction will be permitted to tamper with the kingdom's security and stability or to expose its institutions and accomplishments to sabotage and harm. The most severe measures will be taken against anyone who tries to tamper with the security of the homeland and the safety of the citizens.

French, U.S. Hostages 'To Pay' for Pressure on Syria

NC150758 Paris AFP in English 0753 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Beirut, May 15 (AFP) — A caller claiming affiliation with the Islamic Jihad group warned on Thursday that French and American hostages in Lebanon would be "the first to pay" for pressure on Syria for their release. The caller said some hostages had already been killed, but gave no details.

In a telephone call to a foreign news agency here, the caller said "all countries, whether American, French or Arab" must cease "their pressure on Syria and on our organization," the Islamic Jihad.

The U.S. Government on Wednesday confirmed reports that Syria was trying to secure the release of Western hostages held in Lebanon. "The Syrian Government obviously has influence in this matter," said a White House statement. The U.S. also announced on Wednesday that Syria was involved in a major military buildup in Lebanon.

The Thursday statement in Islamic Jihad's name said "the first who will pay (for pressure on Syria) will be the hostages we are holding, whose number has largely diminished... because we have executed some of them." The caller refused to say how many hostages remained.

The call, which could not be identified, began with the words, "God is all powerful and merciful," followed by a verse from the Koran. Islamic Jihad announced in a typewritten statement last March 10 that only written claims concerning French hostages it was holding — accompenied by photographs of the hostages — should be taken as authentic.

The caller said that Islamic Jihad was aware of "pressures" by the United States, France and "two Arab countries" on Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad to help get the hostages freed. He warned "all parties involved" that "the earth will tremble below them" if they did not stop "these manoeuvres" against Syria and Islamic Jihad.

"We will again use our destructive methods," the caller said. The group has claimed responsibility for the kidnaps of five Americans and four Frenchmen. It has in the past months announced the killings of two hostages, U.S. diplomat William Buckley and French sociologist Michel Seurat, but their bodies have not been found.

Syria Warned Against Mediation

[Text] AFP reports that a caller claiming to represent the Islamic Jihad organization has phoned a foreign news agency in Beirut, warning that the U.S. and French hostages will be the first to pay for the pressure that the United States, France, and certain Arab states are bringing to bear on Syria and the Islamic Jihad in an attempt to ensure the hostages' release.

The caller warned Syria against making any efforts to secure the release of the hostages. He added: Despite our respect for Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad, we warn against any efforts to bring about the release of the U.S. and French hostages. We also warn against any charges of Hizballah involvement in the kidnappings. The caller further added that the number of U.S. and French hostages who are still alive has largely diminished. The caller, however, declined to reveal the number.

Amal gunmen attempted to kidnap the Austrian ambassador a few days ago. This prompted Minister Nabih Birri to declare that he was responsible for protection of both the ambassador and the premises of the Austrian diplomatic mission. He then assigned this task to Firas.

[Text] Education Minister Dr Salim al-Huss has issued a decision suspending work at the Education Ministry on Thursday in protest over attacks on the American University and other educational institutions. In a statement on the issue, Dr Al-Huss said: I am compelled to declare this action with regret. Since the Education Ministry is responsible for the educational sector, and has no function without it, it regards itself as directly affected by what is happening.

Paqraduni Discusses Dialogue With Damascus

NC140836 (Clandestine) Radio Free Lebanon in Arabic
0445 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Karim Paqraduni, deputy chairman of the Lebanese Forces Executive Committee, has affirmed that the Lebanese Forces are prepared to engage in dialogue with Damascus, but not while under artillery fire. Damascus must declare a truce, he said, and permit an intra-Lebanese dialogue to take place. He added: Our plan for a solution is a Lebanese one and not exclusively Christian. We seek to establish a front that will include both Christians and Muslims. The Lebanese Forces, he explained, do not want a solution achieved without Syrian involvement. Syria can provide part of the solution, but not all of it. Therefore, others must also be involved. He pointed out that the differences with Syria are due basically to the Syrian forces' illegitimate presence in Lebanon.

Referring to the tripartite agreement, Paqraduni declared that there are three basic points within it that detract from Lebanon's exercise of its sovereignty. He disclosed that the Lebanese Forces have rejected Syria's request that the term of office for the president of the republic be shortened as a prerequisite to the resumption of dialogue.

Paqraduni maintained that the farther the displacement of the Christians is allowed to go, the more successful is the partition scheme, for the Christians are the unifying element in Lebanon, being spread all over the country, from north to south and from the sea to the Al-Biqa' valley. Finally, Paqraduni affirmed that an independent Christian force is the best and most basic guarantee of Lebanon's defense.

Hizballah Rejects Ba'th Party Official Accusations

JN141847 Paris Radio Monte Carlo in Arabic
1730 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] There have been clashes recently in the Al-Biqa' area between between Hizballah and the Ba'th Party organization in Lebanon. More details from Nabil Darwish:

[Begin recording] Hizballah rejected the accusations leveled by 'Asim Qansuh, secretary general of the Ba'th Party organization in Lebanon, against the Islamic current which he held responsible for the deteriorating security situation in West Beirut. Hizballah distributed a statement to newspapers today which says that the statements made by 'Asim Qansuh holding the Muslims responsible for the lack of security in Beirut and Lebanon are hasty. Last Sunday, Qansuh announced in a dinner banquet that the forces which claim to be Christian or Muslim are behind the lack of security in Beirut in particular. Qansuh condemned the attacks on the American University of Beirut and the kidnapping of foreigners and Christians in West Beirut. He wondered if this is the Islamic understanding of security.

According to a responsible Hizballah source, the Islamic current is not responsible at all for the lack of security. The source said that those who are really responsible are the parties who fear threats along the red lines drawn by international forces. The Hizballah statement adds that the opportunists, the ineffectual national leaders, and those who ran in the face of the Israeli invaders and made compromises with the Phalangist regime of President Amin al-Jumayyil are really responsible for this situation and not the Muslims who fought the Israelis. The statement concludes: The hour of truth has drawn nearer with the approach of a U.S.-Zionist aggression against Syria and

Lebanon. It is noteworthy that clashes erupted in Ba'labakk, in the Al-Biqa' plain, between the Syrian forces and the Hizballah militias between 2 and 7 May. Quoting an informed Lebanese source, AFP said that the Syrian forces had increased pressure on Hizballah. [end recording]

U.S. Spokesman's Statements on Terrorism Cited

REUTER quotes Speakes, who was commenting on a U.S. television report on Syria's help to release the hostages in Lebanon, as saying that the United States does not have any independent or decisive proof that Syria participated in recent terrorism in Britain and the FRG. Speakes' admissions come as a refutation of U.S. and Zionist propaganda, which claims that Syria supports terrorism and is aimed at carrying out an aggression against Syria following U.S. aggression against Libya on the same pretext.

Commentaries Evaluate Israel's Peres Remarks

Damascus Radio Reacts

JN141418 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 1130 GMT 14 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] Israeli Prime Minister Shim'on Peres made a statement to Israeli media yesterday in which he said that there is no chance of reaching a political settlement with Syria as long as President Hafiz al-Asad rules this Arab country. In order to understand this statement we should remember that there is a big difference between the Israeli rulers' understanding of peace and the understanding of the international community, represented by the United Nations, of peace in the Middle East.

Israeli rulers talk about a peace in which Israel is allowed to occupy and annex Arab territory and to annul the Palestinian people's national rights, including their right to self-determination and to establish their national state on their soil. Israeli rulers understand peace as Arab capitulation to Israeli plans aimed at establishing a greater Israel extending from the Nile to the Euphrates and at opening the entire region up to Israeli military, economic, and cultural hegemony within the framework of a U.S. policy of hegemony over the whole world.

This Israeli understanding of peace is unique [words indistinct]. No genuine peace can be established on the grounds of this Israeli understanding. Anybody who accepts this understanding will agree to abandon the UN Charter, international law, and human rights as well as create wars and armed conflicts for the coming generations. This is because people cannot accept occupation or seizure of rights and cannot remain silent in the face of injustice.

If Israel really wants peace, what prevents it from announcing its agreement with the UN resolutions calling for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from all Arab territories occupied by force as well as the realization of the Palestinian people's national rights? If Israel wants to take advantage of peace opportunities, why is it rejecting the international conference called for by the United Nations to establish peace in the Middle East with the participation of all parties concerned and the two superpowers, the United States and the USSR?

The Israeli rulers' misuse of peace cannot do away with the fact that the main obstacle to peace in the Middle East is the Israeli rulers' insistence on occupying and seizing other people's territory by force, seizing the Palestinian people's national rights, and working continuously to establish a greater Israel from the Nile to the Euphrates. The Israeli rulers' many statements on peace cannot hide from world public opinion that the strategic alliance between Israel and the United States is responsible for the high tension in the region as well as the dangers of large conflicts that may be produced by this tension.

The Israeli understanding of peace is rejected by Syria — the people, the government, the party, and the leader — as well as by the Arab masses and all those who are concerned about peace, truth, and justice in the world. No force in the world can make Syria relinquish Arab territory and rights or accept Israeli occupation of Arab territory and the Israeli seizure of the Palestinian people's national rights.

Leader Hafiz al-Asad, who abides by the UN principles and resolutions as well as by just peace and who rejects capitulation to imperialist and Zionist aggression and hegemony, will find at his side the Arab masses and the nation's national, pan-Arab, and progressive forces. On the opposite front, Al-Asad will find imperialism, Zionism, and all those who violate the law and disregard UN principles and resolutions.

Syria seeks a just and comprehensive peace that is based on Israel's withdrawal from all Arab territory occupied in 1967 and the recognition of the Palestinian people's inalienable national rights. Syria believes that the way to this peace is the international conference called for by the United Nations. Syria says yes to peace but at the same time says no to capitulation.

AL-BA'TH Comments

[From the press review]

[Text] The campaign of threats to launch aggression against Syria continues unabated, causing concern on Arab and international levels. Western circles affirm the Washington-Tel Aviv coordination in this regard. Imperialist and Zionist threats to Syria were not prompted by alleged Syrian involvement in so-called international terrorism, as Washington and Tel Aviv claim. This is merely a cover to hide the truth that enemy Prime Minister Shim'on Peres revealed recently. Peres said that these threats are prompted by Syria's rejection, or President al-Asad's rejection, of the U.S. and Israeli settlement plans in the region.

The problem, as Peres himself says, is that Syria does not compromise or accept deals. Israel's endeavors concerning a deal over the Golan heights, security arrangements, or any formula to revive Camp David were completely rejected by Damascus.

In an editorial on this subject today, AL-BA'TH says: The Arab masses are convinced that President Hafiz al-Asad's policy is aimed at liberating all the occupied Arab territories and restoring the usurped Arab rights in the short run and at realizing unity, freedom, and socialism and building a united Arab socialist society in the long run. Therefore, the Arab masses are adhering to this policy and are rallying behind its maker, finding it an embodiment of their aspirations and an honest expression of the correct Arab stand and the required practical Arab policy. The Arab masses consider this policy to be the result of genuine, enlightened planning that takes into account the dimensions of the Zionist plots which are aimed at establishing greater Israel in the Arab homeland.

The presence of Al-Asad at the helm of the Arab struggle is the firm guarantee to maintain the struggle of the Arab masses and affirm their adherence to the pan-Arab aims and to the Arab nation's rights and sovereignty. AL-BA'TH notes that we seek firm, just peace that would end the occupation, restore Arab rights, and fulfill the U.N. Charter and resolutions. As for capitulation, which means opening the doors for Israel and the United States and repeating the treasonous lull during which Al-Sadat defected to the enemy camp, it is rejected outright; it is unacceptable now and in the future.

If the situation as Peres summed it up is caused by the Arab rejection stand, which is led by struggler Hafiz al-Asad, then Syria is proud of this stand, which aborted all plots and halted the march of capitulation.

Concluding, AL-BA'TH says: No matter how worried or fed up Peres or his Washington allies might be, they must know that this historic stand, which President Hafiz al-Asad has created with patience and perseverance, has become the fate of the Arab masses which cannot be abandoned. We are proud of this stand. We are proud of our leader and of his policy and wisdom. Our Arab masses regard this leadership as a strong bastion for their aims and a certain guarantee for their future and destiny.

Al-Ahmar Assails U.S. Policy, Aggression

JN111703 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 1515 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] [Text] Damascus — The second scientific-political seminarorganized by the magazine AL-NAHJ opened at noon today under the slogan: "The U.S. Aggression Against Libya, Threatening Syria With Aggression, and Their Effect on the Situation in the Middle East and the Mediterranean Basin as Well as Their Grave Consequences on Peace and Security in the World."

Attending the opening ceremony were Comrade 'Abdallah al-Ahmar, assistant secretary general of the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party; a number of comrade members of the party's national and regional commands; members of the Progressive National Front Central Command in Syria; a number of ministers; and leaders of the Palestinian resistance factions. Also attending were representatives of the Lebanese national forces, the Arab national parties, the communist and workers parties of the socialist bloc countries, the progressive parties of some capitalist and developing countries, international organizations, and Arab trade unions.

Comrade 'Abdallah al-Ahmar, Ba'th Party assistant secretary general, opened the seminar with a speech in which he conveyed the greetings of comrade struggler Hafiz al-Asad, Ba'th Party secretary general and president of the republic, to the brothers participating in the seminar. He welcomed them on behalf of the party's command to steadfast Syria, which is confronting aggression and schemes to dominate peoples. He said: Your meeting in Damascus expresses the unity and cohesion of the Arab and world liberation forces as well as their solidarity with Syria against the aggressive U.S. imperialist-Zionist policy. He added that the aggression against Libya and the threats to Syria constitute a link in the series of aggressions which imperialism is launching against our Arab nation and its central cause.

Comrade al-Ahmar told the participants in the seminar that the U.S. Administration and its allies are now trying to bring the world back to the logic of old colonialism — the logic of invasion, aggression, and hegemony — as well as the policy of systematic intimidation and terrorism against peoples who strive to lead independent lives, choose their way of life themselves, and safeguard their independence. Comrade al-Ahmar pointed out that the peoples who were liberated from injustice and slavery and who made their way defending themselves and their independence do not fear pressures and will not be terrorized and intimidated by threats.

Al-Ahmar added that the U.S. Administration views Syria as an obstacle to its policy and schemes in the region. He said that Syria adheres to its principles and is determined to confront the aggression and all schemes against the Arab nation's struggle with the aim of defending the Syrian people's freedom and the Arab nation's rights.

Al-Ahmar said that Syria will not stand alone in confronting the aggression and threats because the Arab masses and the forces of peace and socialism, headed by the Soviet Union, stand alongside Syria. He explained that on the pretext of combating terrorism, the United States pursues a systematic state terrorism against peoples who struggle for their just causes. Moreover, he said, the United States provides support and protection for Israel's terrorism and aggression against the Arab nation despite the fact that the United States has special responsibilities, dictated by its status as a superpower, to protect world peace.

At the end of his speech, Comrade al-Ahmar thanked the magazine AL-NAHJ for this initiative and wished the participants in the seminar success in attaining their objectives.

Peres Discusses Issues in Independence Day Interviews

Syrian Terrorist Involvement Viewed

TA141045 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 0805 GMT 14 May 86

[Interview with Prime Minister Shim'on Peres by correspondents Shim'on Schiffer and 'Oded Ben-'Ami, date and place not given; recorded]

[Excerpt] [Schiffer] Mr Prime Minister, on this 38th independence day of Israel, is there any room for satisfaction regarding Israel's political and security situation?

[Peres] I think there is room both for satisfaction and concern. First, my feeling on this day is that, after all, we have 3 and 1/2 million Jews here, and this is a great thing. I wish we had more, but I remember David Ben-Gurion during Israel's first Independence Day; his dream was to have 1 or 2 million Jews here. To have 3 and 1/2 million Jews here is a great thing. Second, I think the fact there is no war in Lebanon, to wake up in the morning and not to see the headlines on the casualties, the great price we paid, I think this is a very great thing. I believe that there has been a great improvement in Israel's international position. It looks different today. Take, for example, the fight against terrorism: Had it taken place 2 years ago the conventional forces [as heard] would have accused Israel. Today, Israel is not being blamed. There is a very serious struggle against international terrorism, and we do not have a place of honor in it, and I do not regret it. There are negotiations with Egypt, difficult negotiations; and despite the fact that there are ups and downs in our relations with Jordan, I have not given up on them. These are the positive things in my opinion: There is no war, there are negotiations, the style is more moderate — certainly on our side, but to some extent also on the Arab side.

What I am concerned about is that if we do not pursue the peace initiative, then all of a sudden all of the rage which is latent in the Middle East, if I can use this expression, may break out. We do not have normal relationships such as those which exist in Europe, for example. Relationships here still conceal a great deal of rage, and in a region in which the balance between the military and social powers is against the latter and in favor of the former — I am speaking of the Arab states...[changes thought] The situation here is that the weapons are modern whereas the considerations are old-fashioned, and this combination is what gives me great concern.

[Ben-'Ami] Mr Prime Minister, at the end of our 37th Independence Day the spotlight is on the tension, which is perhaps only imaginary, with Syria. You yourself distinguished between Syria's involvement in international terrorism and between war threats against Israel. We want to know what are the facts we have regarding Syria's real involvement in the attempted attack on the El Al plane in London, and in international terrorism generally?

[Peres] First, the very fact that three Syrian diplomats have been expelled from London proves that the British Government believes there was a link between the Syrian Embassy in London and between those who tried to attack the El Al plane. As you know, the British are very moderate and reasonable, and if they took such a far-reaching step this amounts to public admission of such a link.

[Schiffer] Doesn't this oblige Israel to issue unequivocal, clear statements on the issue?

[Peres] Yes, certainly. However, I would again like to suggest that the Israeli voice be only one of many voices. If we come out before everybody else with the loudest voice then we will save others the need to express their own opinions.

[Schiffer] However, the Syrians planned to attack an El Al plane?

[Peres] Today an attack on any plane, whether El Al or not, is considered to be a strike at the freedom of international air routes. This is an extremely grave thing, and it does not matter if it takes a little longer for the United States and Europe to become convinced that there are clear Syrian fingerprints here. Generally speaking, however, the free world is becoming more and more aware of Syria's central role in terrorism. All the active terror organizations, those of Hawatimah, Jibril, Habash, Abu Nidal [Sabri al-Banna], Abu Musa [Sa'id Musa Muragha], are either on Syrian territory or under Syrian control. The Syrians are now trying to extricate themselves from this situation by saying that they are against international terrorism but in favor of so called freedom actions. I think this is the right opportunity for us not to make this distinction which the Syrians are trying to make, in other words, to regard Syria as a country which has to take a stand on terrorism, on which side of terrorism it stands, the side which harbors terrorists, helps them and justifies them, or the side which publicly condemns terrorism. The problem here is not only the El Al plane, apparently there is a connection, even if not completely proven, between Syrians and the attack on the La Belle nightclub in Berlin, West Germany. In my opinion we must wait for all this to become clearer, and then it will transpire that Syria, which is crafty and quiet, fulfills a role in terrorism which comes close to that fulfilled by Libya.

[Schiffer] Mr Prime Minister, I want to know what is taking place in the territory between Israel and Syria. We have heard that Israel, via the United States, has asked to inspect the Syrian dugouts in the Al-Biqa'. How do things stand now?

[Peres] Israel must decide what is more important: the issue of international terrorism, or the changes, the limited changes which have taken place in the Al-Biqa'. In my opinion, from the political and all other viewpoints, it is preferable to concentrate our attention on an issue which we have in common with many partners, and which gives us daily problems, rather than on an issue which, even though it gives us an uncomfortalbe feeling, is more of a long-term problem. If we do the two things together we will find that both are ineffective, and therefore I reiterate that we must concentrate all our attention on international terrorism, because this is the issue which causes daily problems, and this is also the issue on which we can recruit wide international cooperation.

[Ben-'Ami] In that case, sir, who do you think was behind the verbal escalation which caused all this tension? Is this related to the fact that it is spring which like autumn is a period of tension?

[Peres] No. Several things happened here. First, there is somebody who does this methodically, namely Mr 'Arafat himself. He issued communiques in all the Arab countries stating that Israel was about to attack the Lebanese refugee camps and was about to attack Syria. He had received information from the most qualified sources in Israel that we were about to attack, and gave them wide dissemination, not without evil intentions. He even gave the date for our attack, and when the date passed without any attack he came out with a new story: that the Soviets got involved and prevented our attack. This is completely and utterly false, but he spread these stories methodically and we even received an appeal from an Arab state: In the name of God, do not attack the refugee camps, do not do it. All this was completely false.

[Schiffer] Was this country Egypt?

[Peres] I could have named the country, but did not. Now, in addition to this we had the London affair, which was extremely grave, and we also had the affair in Berlin. These three things together raised the tension.

[Schiffer] Mr Prime Minister, regarding the issue of political arrangements, do you believe that Syria is a lost cause, have you made any attempts to reach some kind of dialogue with President Al-Asad in the last year, or is there no chance?

[Peres] We have made indirect efforts to reach a dialogue with the Syrians at two different levels: That is, on the local and limited level, in the area of the Golan Heights and Lebanon; and on the higher level of comprehensive negotiations. On the issue of comprehensive negotiations we immediately received a negative answer; on the issue of negotiations limited to a certain area the Syrians initially wavered, but then rejected us. However, you know that we always concentrate on our own problems, and we have enough problems to prevent us from seeing the problems that others have. I do not think that the Syrians are in an excellent position. Were I a Syrian, or better yet, a Syrian journalist, I would analyse the situation in Syria as following:
The economic situation is absolutely disastrous; their foreign currency reserves are next to zero; agricultural exports have decreased; the Gross National Product has dropped by 10 percent during the last year; the aid they receive comes mainly from Saudi Arabia, and also from Iran. There is tension with Iran against the background of Hizballah in Lebanon. We see that the economic situation is extremely difficult; they have restricted the use of electricity, the purchase of foreign currency. I think this is also a cause for internal dissatisfaction, and I would not be surprised if terror attacks within Syria stem also from dissatisfaction in the economic sphere.

[Schiffer] And what are your conclusions? Please continue.

[Peres] Their success in Lebanon is not all that great. You know, we are impressed by Al-Asad. I think that Al-Asad has many admirers in Israel, but on what do they base their admiration? He entered Lebanon and inherited a miserable situation from us. The only thing that changed was the party suffering from the situation; the situation itself has not changed: civil war, car bombs, terrorism, deception, conflict. Where does all this lead? The attack on Libya also alarmed him, I am convinced of this, first, by the very fact that it could be done, second, by the fact that it was done for a specific reason, such as international terrorism, and third, by the fact that there are limitations to Soviet involvement and Soviet technology. Now if you look at this picture, well, I do not know what will happen in Syria. What I am clear about — although I suggest that we keep our minds and thoughts open and not bind ourselves to a certain idea — is that Al-Asad is the most ambitious Arab leader, and this ambition is tempered by patience. I do not think he is fighting for the Golan Heights or for peace. His war is to be the leader of the Arab world, whether by conquest, intrigue, or politics. Under these conditions the chance of reaching a dialogue with Al-Asad seems to me to be minimal if not nil.

Where can we achieve something? Well, while he is an extremist in terms of strategy, he is more moderate in terms of tactics. Up to now he maintained these tactics. So we can reach tactical arrangements with him, like we did in the Golan Heights, and just as there has been some kind of an arrangement in Lebanon, a quiet and unwritten arrangement. Beyond this, unfortunately, I do not see any real chances.

[Ben-'Ami] Mr prime minister, let us take leave of President al-Asad for the time being and turn to Jordan. You have recently spoke of quiet understandings with Jordan. This is what was said following a Cabinet session. Can you tell us the nature of these understandings?

[Peres] Yes. First of all, they are not secret. We told the Jordanians that we agree to hold negotiations with a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation, and this is an understanding. You know that out of the five names proposed by them we have accepted two. Second, the Jordanians have insisted on an international forum, and we accepted this. Third, they insisted that negotiations be based on [UN Resolutions] 242 and 338, and we accepted this. These are important understandings. I can add a fourth understanding: that both they and we have agreed that the Americans be mediators in the attempt to reach a dialogue. Lastly, and I am not saying it is an understanding between us and them, but rather that it is an understanding on Jordan's part: Jordan is the first country which has seriously tried to involve 'Arafat in the negotiations, and they reached the conclusion, which was publicized, that this gentleman cannot be a partner to negotiations. Let me remind you that Al-Sadat at first also attempted to involve 'Arafat in the negotiations, and during the first meetings at the directors general level the PLO flag was on the table. The PLO was invited, but did not show up. The Jordanian conclusion that perhaps they should do it together with the PLO, but that they cannot do it with 'Arafat, is perhaps the outcome of Jordan's experience, but in my opinion it removes an obstacle that has always blocked any chance of future negotiations.

[Schiffer] Mr Prime Minister, your remarks express your long and sincere efforts to advance the process with Jordan, but when we sum up the situation, or at least to quote officials in the U.S. Administration, they say that the political process in our region is paralyzed. The question is: What more can be done? Do you have any idea that you want to try?

[Peres] I do not want to discuss this publicly and before the time is ripe. I know that when one is holding negotiations, and unfortunately also during wars, there are difficult situations, and then an alternative must be sought. I believe there is an alternative and I am convinced it must be tried. Concerning these sincere efforts, and I agree with you that those were sincere efforts on the part of Israel to open new avenues to peace, I think Israel has attained new and important international recognition. I do not think that I should be harsh in my words and unreasonable in my behavior. I prefer to be reasonable both in words and behavior.

[Schiffer] Are you willing to say what initiative is still possible in the near future.

[Peres] No.

[Ben-'Ami] Sir, with your permission let us turn to Egypt. It was recently reported that President Mubarak intends to sign bilateral agreements with you. However, the Tabah issue, for example, is in the deep-freeze, even though there have been reports that the talks by the directors general will renew. Where is all this leading; where are we heading in our relations with Egypt?

[Peres] Look, a new and time-consuming factor has entered into the Tabah issue, and this is the issue of legal consultation. Once you introduce legal consultation into a political process then the political process slowly loses its drive, and this is natural, because the lawyers on both sides want to make sure of every word, every comma, and rightly so.

[Ben-'Ami] And the politicians are not doing this?

[Peres] The politicians are being aided by the legal advisers. However, let me remind you of battles we waged, bitter battles which ended in unusual success, even though ultimately only God knows if we needed them. For example, we waged a fierce battle to protect our oil interests in the event our supply was cut off. In that case the United States undertook to supply us. Perhaps this was good and our efforts were correct, but if you compare what we invested with what we actually needed, I ask myself whether we did not go too far here. What happens in negotiations is that somebody always comes and says, let's make sure of this and that point, and it is extremely difficult to argue with overcareful men when this happens. Carefulness is a quality which cannot be downplayed, the only problem is that it is time-consuming. I believe the negotiations on Tabah got stuck due to the addition of the legal element to the political negotiations. By the way, for clarity's sake I want to say that this is more true on the Egyptian side than on the Israeli. I think that Israel has gone a long way, and Egypt has also gone quite a long way, but now we are in the midst of the legal stage, and I hope we find a legal solution providing maximum guarantees to both sides.

[Ben-'Ami] Will this take place within days? Weeks? Can you estimate the time?

[Peres] No. I never deal with dates.

[Schiffer] Perhaps we can give some timetable for what can be expected to take place in our relations with Egypt. To ask the question which has been raised throughout this year: Is there still a chance for a meeting between you and the Egyptian president?

[Peres] I would not rule out this possibility. However, I would also not like to make it a central political objective. I think it is important, but I would not like to regard it as a prize for something. I believe that if the Egyptian president and I meet we could advance the peace issue in our region. I am ready to meet him, but I am not willing to make it an objective in itself.

[Ben-'Ami] These negotiations have another angle, the Palestinian factor, which is an important, vital factor here. We are speaking of the Palestinian leadership; where does this element fit into the negotiations?

[Schiffer] Do you have an alternative leadership upon which you can rely, an alternative Palestinian leadership in the territories?

[Peres] The problem of an alternative Palestinian leadership, or of an alternative among the present leaders, is as follows: They cannot make a move by themselves. The thing that destroys the Palestinian issue is not the absence of leadership, but the fear faced by those leaders who are willing to enter negotiations. It is no longer 'Arafat by himself, we have Abu Musa [Sa'id Musa Muragha] and Hawatimah. For example, in my opinion the mayor of Nabulus was murdered not by the PLO, but rather by another organization. Therefore, the problem facing this leadership is that of protection, which can be provided by Jordan or one of the terror organizations. However, if you are protected by one of the terror organizations then the other organizations will operate. Afterall, they also murder each other. Therefore, let me reiterate that the difficulty is not in establishing a leadership, but rather of freeing the leaders from the fear of terror.

[Schiffer] So far, however, experience has shown that it is not desirable to be a Palestinian leader who is not under the patronage of the Palestinian organizations.

[Peres] Look, even those who are under the patronage of the Palestinian organizations are not safe, look at Al-Sartawi and Al-Qawasimi, there are murders left and right. The truth is that the use of violence greatly curtails the ability of the Palestinians to negotiate.

[Schiffer] What, then, can you do in this situation, when Israel continues to hold the territories? So far there is no alternative leadership, and this situation of the occupation and the mix of Arab and Jewish populations continues.

[Peres] First of all it is necessary to preserve a situation of openness in the territories. The problem of the territories is not only linked to the solution of the Palestinian problem, it is also linked to how Israel will look in the future. This week the government discussed the issue of demography. Today, there are 560,000 Arab inhabitants in Gaza, without passports, on a territory of 350,000 dunams. This is the greatest density in the world, I was told it is even more dense than Hong Kong. What do we want to do, annex it? And I am not even speaking here of the problems in Judaea and Samaria. Therefore, both from the standpoint of preserving the chances for peace, and the desire to preserve Israel's Jewish identity, our generation must not rashly annex the territories, whether by law or by force. A situation of openness in the territories is also a situation of openness in the negotiations. We also have to remember that Judaea and Samaria are populated by Jordanian citizens and we must therefore allow Jordan to maintain ties with these inhabitants. There was some confusion in the territories, mainly in Judaea and Samaria. At some point they believed that Husayn and 'Arafat were joining forces, and therefore, they thought they could go with both of them at the same time. The result of this was that Jordan lost much of its influence. It is now returning and trying to increase its influence, and since they are Jordanian citizens and we are not too excited about the PLO, this action presents some sort of opportunity for the future.

[Ben-'Ami] In that case, Mr prime minister, do you believe it will be possible to implement the plan which was headlined 'Gaza First,' that is, to start the experiment there?

[Peres] This issue is most complicated. This is not a choice for us to make, but rather for the Arabs. This is an Arab option. I believe that Jordan has in no way given up on its hope of retaining a link with Gaza, contrary to what is written in many Israeli newspapers. Now, if we proceed with Egypt without Jordan we will be causing a rupture that would make progress impossible. If, for example, all the Arabs unite and say: Let us examine the possibility of implementing autonomy in Gaza, then we should examine it, but we have not reached that point yet.

[Schiffer] However, what is your proposal? Do you propose, when we examine the issue of 'Gaza First,' that there be a link between the Palestinians and Egypt, or another alternative such as the traditional Jordanian alternative? What is your practical suggestion?

[Peres] First of all, I am proposing nothing. I think the proposals must come from the Arab side. Any proposal that we make will immediately face total Arab opposition. In this case the initiative must come from the Arab side. The Arabs know that this government, like previous governments, was ready to discuss self-administration [minhal 'azmi] for the territories, and we bring up this option again. We will not impose it, but if the Palestinians wake up from their sleep, or rather from their nightmare, and are ready to discuss self-administration in Gaza and in Judaea and Samaria, we will do so gladly.

[Ben-'Ami] And until then are we to sit and wait?

[Peres] I am not suggesting that we sit or wait. My suggestion is that we constantly search for alternatives. However, I am not willing to talk about them until we find them.

[Schiffer] With your permission, sir, let us move on to several international issues. Recently you visited France and, as reported, the matter of France supplying a nuclear reactor to Israel was raised. Mr prime minister, we have heard that in principle the French are prepared to sell us such a reactor, but in the same vein they are prepared to sell such a reactor to Iraq. This naturally creates a problem.

[Peres] First of all they did not say this. They asked our opinion on the sale of a reactor to Iraq. The difference between Iraq and Israel is a very small one: Iraq has oil, and therefore I doubt that it needs nuclear power for energy purposes, while we do not have oil. We are talking sincerely about a reactor to supply energy and energy alone. When I was asked I said the difference was simple: They need a reactor in order to create trouble; we need a reactor in order to produce electric power. These are two completely different things. Thus, a priori, we are honestly suspicious about the Iraqis' motives for purchasing a reactor. Incidentally, I do not really know if this desire exists. I would also like to mention that the Iraq-Iran war currently costs Iraq $500 million a month. The Iraqi economy is not what it used to be. It should be understood that the war's continuation and the drop in oil prices have had an effect on Iraq. I do not know what Iraq wants today; it seems to me they prefer more tanks and planes than reactors. As for our concerns, basically they must be economic. At the moment the dream of many Israelis, myself included, is to reach a state of independence in water, bread, energy, arms, and education.

[Ben-'Ami] Mr Peres, at the time the matter was raised, you opposed the bombing of the Iraqi nuclear reactor. Now that you are prime minister and that time has passed, do you still hold the same opinion, that the reactor should not have been bombed?

[Peres] A prime minister has to forego several luxuries, among them the luxury of dealing with history, and this is what I am doing.

[Ben-'Ami] Nevertheless, what is your opinion as a private individual?

[Peres] I am not prepared to delve into an analysis of this now. It would only cause controversy. In any event the reactor was bombed and the matter is over. What do I need another controversy for now? Is the country short on controversies?

[Schiffer] Sir, we will now try to look into recent remarks concerning the Eastern bloc while examining Israel's international relations. Is there any room for a breakthrough with countries behind the Iron Curtain? Poland's name is being mentioned more and more.

[Peres] The word breakthrough is too pretentious, but there is something to this. However, it is very modest and I would not hinge great hopes on it. The basic problem is what is happening both in the Soviet Union and in the Soviet Union's relations with the United States of America. We are living in very changeable and dynamic times. I think, for example, the Soviet Union is different following Chernobyl. It is not only a matter of a reactor being damaged; the country's national security and self-confidence have also been harmed; this is what I mean. In addition, the hopes which the Americans and the Soviets hinged on the summit meeting between Reagan and Gorbachev did not materialize. And on top of all these events, the Soviets have considerable problems. Their economic situation is apparently more serious than ever before. Oil was their major export item, and they lost 50 percent of the value of this export. They also used oil and gas to pay the West for technology. The situation in Afghanistan is not good. Again, I do not want to describe this as the end of the world. The Soviet Union is an enormous superpower, filling a sixth of the globe; it has resources and people, and I do not want to go from one extremity to the other.

[Schiffer] But what is your conclusion, sir?

[Peres] My conclusion is simple. I believe there is room for a reassessment of Soviet foreign policy in the not too distant future, as a result of all the current processes and events. I know there are Soviet leaders who say: Let us sit out the 2 years Reagan has left in office and then begin U.S.-Soviet detente. However, actual events are not so patient, and we must continually monitor developments. After all, we are not managing U.S.-Soviet relations. We have a clear-cut and vital interest in Soviet Jewry. However, this interest is a function of global, international relations, and hence our interest in these relations. On the eve of the Geneva summit we had high hopes, but they were not realized, neither at an international level nor at a level directly concerning us. Now there is a new situation. I do not know what conclusions will be drawn from this situation, but I believe they will be different from the previous ones.

[Schiffer] Do our ties with Eastern bloc countries, excluding the Soviet Union, depend on some degree of improved relations with the Soviet Union, or is there a bilateral rapprochement between us and Poland or between us and Hungary?

[Peres] I tend to think that when the Eastern bloc countries make a political move, they do not do so apart from Moscow. One thing that must be said unambiguously is that there are not two blocs in the world; there is one bloc, the communist bloc, and then there is the free world. The situation in the communist bloc, although very organized, is not good. The situation is not good, but the organization is good. In the free world, the organization is imperfect, but the situation is better

Relations With U.S. Discussed

[Interview with Prime Minister Shim'on Peres by Nahman Shay and political correspondent 'Oz Frankel on the eve of Israel's Independence Day; place not given]

[Excerpt] [Frankel] Sir, on the eve of Israel's 38th Independence Day you received a check for nearly $400 million from the U.S. ambassador. I assume, I know, that you and all of us are grateful for this aid which the United States has extended to us. However, do you not see any contradiction between, on the one hand, the striving and aspirations implied in the word independence, and our continual dependence on the United States, on the other?

[Peres] When I review U.S. history, I recall that the United States also received assistance in its early stages. The U.S. ambassador to France was then Benjamin Franklin, and the first big loan the United States received came from France. In general, the United States is a very generous country, and the truth is that our heavy dependence is the result of extensive external problems which confront us. If no superpower were involved in the Middle East, we would not have to spend so much money on, for example, defense needs. However, the Soviet Union supplies enormous quantities of arms and at low prices, and if we want to maintain free countries and democratic rule in the world, there is no alternative but to balance the aid extended by the nondemocratic powers with aid from democratic countries, until the time when peace is attained. At the same time I think that we really must make a supreme effort to attain economic independence. I often think that if in the past 10 years the country's economic growth had been similar to that during the past 30 years, Israel's GNP today would stand at $38 billion, and not $23 billion; then we really would not require aid.

[Shay] However, not only in the economic sphere but on every political or strategic issue it seems that in the past year we have been in the shadow of the United States more than in the past. One example is "star wars", while another is the establishment of broadcasting stations in Israel.

[Peres] I think care should be taken not to do Israel an injustice. We are, after all, a small country, a lone democratic country in a very complex region. Do not compare Israel to European countries, to France or England. Their dependence on the United States is 10 times greater. In fact, the United States protects the continent of Europe not only economically, but militarily. Furthermore, the extent of economic aid is tremendous, approximately $130 billion annually. Thus, the aid we receive is much less than that received by European countries, and therefore our dependence is less.

You raised various issues. I do not believe, for example, that the United States would invite us to participate in the "star wars' project just to contribute something to us. It wants our contribution, too. Our interests certainly coincide with the United States' in this area. The "star wars" research project includes, for example, antimissile weapons, or antimissile missiles. We have experience in missiles from katyushas to surface-to-surface missiles with ranges of hundreds of kilometers. Were such missiles not positioned toward us, we would not have to seek weapons against them. Therefore, it is in the United States' interest to make use of Israel's research ability, and it is in Israel's interest to develop weapons necessary to defend itself. The same applies to the U.S. broadcasting station. As long as wild slander campaigns are waged against us by other stations, why should we not permit a free country that assists us to make its voice heard?

Taking into consideration the difference in size between the United States and Israel, relations between us can certainly be described as mutual. I also think that today the United States considers Israel as one of three or four countries on which it can rely more than other countries, not because of our military capability, but because we are an exceptional combination of a democratic country with conviction, and a country which can defend itself with its younger generation.

[Shay] Does this give-and-take relationship which you have outlined between Israel and the United States leave room for a future political move without the United States, or will any such move be conditional on some U.S. participation?

[Peres] As long as the world is in a state of being what is called bipolar, that is composed of a Soviet pole and a U.S. pole, and as long as the Soviets support the Arabs, we have no alternative but to make use of the United States to neutralize Soviet action. The difference between the Soviet and U.S. positions is the fact that the Soviets support one side, the Arab side, while the Americans support the side of rapprochement between the Arabs and us. Because the Arabs themselves are, how shall I put it, ashamed to appear openly in favor of peace, it is good that the United States enables them to overcome this embarrassment.

Egypt's Basyuni on Tabah Talks, Tension With Syria

[Text] Egyptian Charge d'Affaires Muhammad Basyuni says the Tabah talks will be resumed next Monday in Israel. Basyuni was talking to reporter David Essing at President Herzog's annual Independence Day reception for the diplomatic corps in Jerusalem. Basyuni said he had conveyed a message from Egyptian President Husni Mubarak on Israel's Independence Day.

[Begin recording] [Basyuni] I just congratulated him about the national day of Israel, and his excellency's hope that next year that we can implement and go ahead for the comprehensive peace and all over the area.

[Essing] Mr Basyuni, Israel and Egypt are about to resume negotiations on Tabah. What progress is being made in those negotations? When will they begin again?

[Basyuni] The Egyptian delegation will come to Israel Sunday, and we will resume the talks Monday and Tuesday, and really, there is a lot of progress. We still discuss the arbitration procedures, and I hope that we can find a solution for the compromise of the arbitration and especially the question in this meeting.

[Essing] What is the major problem now that is holding up progress in the Tabah talks?

[Basyuni] The main problem is the question, and I hope that we can find a common understanding in this meeting.

[Essing] Have you been in contact with the Israeli Government about the tension between Israel and Syria?

[Basyuni] Really, you know, the tension is only in the press, and I don't know exactly if there is something like that or not. But I see in the press, but now I notice that the Israeli Government would like to make the tone less. And really, we hope, as I told you, to find the solution to cool this tension and let us put all our efforts for finding a comprehensive peace and a good solution for all of us here. [end recording]

5 Injured in Nabulus Demonstrations; Curfew Imposed

[Text] The center of the town of Nabulus has been placed under curfew following violent demonstrations in which at least five Nabulus residents were wounded this morning. Jerry Cheslow reports:

The demonstrations began at 0945 this morning. Nabulus Arab sources say the town was reacting angrily against a scheduled march through Nabulus by Jewish settlers to mark Independence Day. Several hundred Palestinian students left Al-Najah University and headed for the center of town. On the way they stoned a border police vehicle.

The policemen summoned held and fired into the air. Reinforcements arrived and the students fled into the narrow alleyways of the casbah's central market. According to military sources the students continued stoning the border policemen from the casbah. The soldiers fired rubber bullets and tear-gas, then they fired into the air, then at the demonstrators, wounding at least two men. Palestinian sources say three men were shot, one in the head, another in the lung, and a third in the leg. Three women were also hurt. Military sources say that they were hit by stones thrown by the demostrators. A curfew was imposed on the center of Nabulus 2 hours ago.

Citizen Detained on Arms Charges; Ministry Reacts

[Text] Another Israeli suspected of having tried to smuggle arms to Iran or Iraq has been detained in the United States. Our correspondent in Washington Razi Barqay reports that Ze'ev Reiss, a member of Kibbutz Giv'at Brenner and a representative of the kibbutz industry in the United States, was picked up at New York's Kennedy Airport and will be transferred to Texas for trial.

The spokesman of the Israeli Embassy in Washington said there is no connection between Reiss and the defense establishment. The Defense Ministry announced it knows nothing about Reiss and that an investigation which was conducted indicates that he does not hold a permit from the ministry to deal in exporting arms. Reiss was detained along with three others, and they were charged with attempting to smuggle TOW missiles to the Persian Gulf.

Our correspondent says there is no connection between this affair and the group which was detained in Bermuda. A justice of the Bermuda Supreme Court yesterday heard the arguments of the two sides on the expulsion of the suspects to the United States, and said that he will shortly announce his ruling. The five people detained in this affair, including three Israelis, are still being held in Bermuda.

AL-QUDS on Jordan's Policy Toward Palestinians

TA091700 Jerusalem AL-QUDS in Arabic
7 May 86 pp 1, 11

[Editorial "The Advisers and the Errors"]

[Text] The American newspaper the CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR has written that King Husayn's advisers committed immense political errors when they entertained the possibility of Jordan entering separate peace talks with Israel. We are all aware that these advisers committed a grave mistake when they counseled King Husayn to deliver his speech on 19 February in which he announced the suspension of relations between Jordan and the PLO.

This was followed by further serious mistakes such as the delegations that went to Amman after the speech, who were even ignored by Jordanian propaganda within a few days. These advisers are undoubtedly the same ones who suggested that obstacles be placed over the bridges, and who compiled a long list of names of those allowed or not allowed to cross them. They are the very advisers who daily are adding new practices of harassment that ultimately harm the special and historical relations between the Jordanian and Palestinian peoples.

We do not know the logic of their thinking. Restrictions, harassment, intimidation, and promises will not lead the Palestinian people, who are holding out on their land despite an occupation whose darkness has lasted 19 years, to give up their origin, nationality, and deep affiliation.

The Palestinian people aspire to a just, enduring, and comprehensive peace based on their legitimate national rights — the same awaited peace for the achievement of which they have been sacrificing for many years.

These advisers should perhaps study the history of the Palestinian people to understand their qualities and traits.

Receives Al-Mahdi Message From Envoy

LD142156 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland in Arabic 2015 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] The brother leader of the revolution this evening received the envoy of the Sudanese prime minister, Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi, who handed him a message from the prime minister of Sudan. In the message, Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi offered his condolences for the martyrs who had fallen to the fire of U.S. state terrorism from among the sons and daughters of the Arab Libyan people.

In his letter, Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi declared his condemnation of the U.S.-Atlanticist aggression against the people of the Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, saying: We must do something to confront the terrorism practiced by a superpower that has taken leave of its senses and has begun behaving with the logic of highwaymen.

Cyprus Paper: Al-Qadhdhafi Urges Closure of UK Bases

NC150525 Nicosia CYPRUS MAIL in English 15 May 86 p 1

[Text] Nicosia, (r)— Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi has urged Cyprus to close sovereign British bases on the island, according to the text of a speech released by the Libyan Embassy here yesterday.

"Cypriots should shut down the British bases or we will be forced into a new confrontation that will inflict destruction on the island" Al-Qadhdhafi said.

"These bases pose dangers to Libya's security, Syria's security and the security of Lebanon. They contribute to sinful, barbarous, savage, crusader aggression led by the United States" he added.

An embassy official was unable to say when or where the undated speech was delivered.

A Cypriot spokesman said the government was studying the speech but could not yet comment.

An official source meanwhile noted the government had denied that the two bases, retained by Britain when Cyprus became independent in 1960, were in any way involved in last month's U.S. air raids on Tripoli and Banghazi.

President Spiros Kiprianou's long-term aim was the demilitarization of Cyprus, he added.

Ed. note: Col al-Qadhdhafi's speech was delivered in Banghazi a few days after the American air strike on April 15.

Former Prime Minister Interviewed by Cairo Paper

PM131024 Cairo AL-AHRAM INTERNATIONAL EDITION in Arabic 9 May 86 p 13

[Report on interview with former Libyan Prime Minister 'Abd al-Hamid al-Bakkush by Muhammad Zayid; date, place not given]

[Excerpts] 'Abd al-Hamid al-Bakkush says: According to definite information reaching the Libyan Liberation Organization daily from the most reliable sources, the situation in Libya now is quite the opposite of the illusory idea which seems to dominate the minds of Arab citizens and makes them believe that they are faced with an invincible mystery force. U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz has recently stated that the United States has irrefutable evidence of general resentment in Libya and strong evidence that the Libyan Army is unhappy with Al-Qadhdhafi's rule. That is a true and realistic statement. There have been eight attempts to topple Al-Qadhdhafi. One such attempt was made recently; it was very well planned, nearly achieved its objectives, and would have succeeded if some foreigners had not betrayed it. If there is any explanation of Al-Qadhdhafi's ability to prolong the life of his regime it is certainly not his strength or his regime's stability. The explanation is his terrorism and murder of Libyans in the streets. You ask me what are the most likely possibilities now. I say with certainty that Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi will resort to more and uglier terrorism because he does not learn from his mistakes. The United States will resort to violence and that will prompt the Libyan Army to quickly overthrow Al-Qadhdhafi, especially if the next strike is aimed at Libyan utilities. Al-Qadhdhafi's only weapon, which he uses to rule Libya, finance international terrorism, and trouble the whole world without any intellectual assets is oil. If his only weapon were hit, he would lose control of his own private guards. It is true that I have always said that Al-Qadhdhafi was 100-percent "an American agent" and I have emphasized that any signs pointing to the contrary were mere deception, no more and no less. Then the U.S. attack occurred, so I am called upon to provide an explanation for the contradiction between what I have maintained and what actually happened to the contrary.

The truth is that there is no contradiction. It is just that certain developments have turned one ally against another. Let me explain that. It is a historical certainty that the Americans facilitated Mu'ammar's rise to power. The first stage of Al-Qadhdhafi's relations with the United States was the stage of recruiting him to cause trouble in the Arab region and in the neighboring countries and to put as many obstacles as possible in the way of Egyptian-Libyan unity to kill the possibility of any such strong state eventually emerging, and also to open a front on Egypt's western borders as a substitute for Egypt's eastern front with Israel.

The second stage in Al-Qadhdhafi's relations with the Americans began early in 1980. They criticize him for involvement in international terrorism but they were the ones who pushed him into it. In the beginning they encouraged him to participate with the Palestinian organizations in activities inside and outside Israel in order to foment sedition among these organizations and he managed to polarize some of them, and when he used terrorism against his political opponents they kept quiet about it.

The year 1981 saw the third stage and the divorce between the United States and Mu'ammar. That was when Al-Qadhdhafi went out of control and expanded the circle of terrorism on his own. When they tried to deter him they discovered that his deviation was such that it was impossible to control him. After the many terrorist operations in which he was involved and which hurt the United States and the rest of the world it was time to strike, not to finish him off personally — they still do not have an alternative regime to Al-Qadhdhafi's — but merely to keep him from carrying on with his own terrorism. So the disagreement is over the terrorism which a son carries out against the will of his father. Hence the recent U.S. strike, and I say very clearly that, far from condemning it, I welcome it because it might facilitate internal salvation from this regime.

No, there was no failure in hitting the targets. All the targets identified during the period of threats were fully and most accurately hit. The camps of Bab al-'Aziziyah, Sidi Blal, Baninah, and 'Uqbah Ibn Nafi' were destroyed. Confirmed figures, which he does not dare announce, show that he lost 50 military aircraft — Migs and Mirages — 3 civilian planes were destroyed, and about 300 military personnel were killed. The 30 civilian casualties were because the U.S. aircraft bombed the intelligence building, which is surrounded by some embassies and residential buildings.

It is not true at all that any of Al-Qadhdhafi's children or members of his family were hit in the American raid. Al-Qadhdhafi only claimed that to impress upon the Libyan people that he had been involved in facing the U.S. aggression. As regards his claim that his adopted daughter was killed, it is true that a girl was killed but the father of that girl is a military man and is still alive; Al-Qadhdhafi never had an adopted daughter.

Do not believe that a five-member committee now rules Libya, as Al-Qadhdhafi claimed. He is just trying to absorb the public wrath. He sensed the grave danger of that wrath after facing certain defeat, he who always triumphs in every confrontation with any Arab state with the exception of Egypt. This five-member committee consists of former Revolution Command Council members who are all not even allowed to enter military camps or use military vehicles.

JANA Editor Views Spain's Talks on Severing Relations

LD142212 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 2036 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] The Spanish EL PAIS newspaper has confirmed that the Spanish Government is studying the possibility of the severing of diplomatic relations with Libya.

On this attitude, the JANA European Affairs Editor pointed out that Spain is turning its back on its historic relations with the Arabs and its ties with the Arab and the Islamic nation, and by doing so it is categorically practicing an immoral principle. The editor explained that what makes the Spanish attitude even more strange — an attitude which is in coordination with the U.S. attitude which is hostile to the Great Jamahiriyah — is that the Spanish Government doing this is a socialist government which has turned its back on its history and on the Arabs who built Spain and made it the biggest source of olives and oranges. He said we well understand the wounds which pain the Spanish Government and know also when we make these wounds worse, and let Spain know emphatically that Ceuta and Mellila are two Arab cities and that the Canary Islands belong to Africa.

Baghdad: Opposition Urges 'Rise Against Leaders'

JN141603 Baghdad Voice of the Masses in Arabic 1500 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Tripoli — The Libyan opposition has held Al-Qadhdhafi's regime fully responsible for the material and moral damage caused to the Libyan people and also for the harm done to their dignity and independence. A statement issued by the Libyan Committee for National Salvation in Tripoli and obtained by the IRAQI NEWS AGENCY in Cairo today condemns the U.S. air raid, which damaged Libyan cities and killed and injured scores of innocent Libyans while the real criminal and his terrorist clique escaped unharmed.

The statement condemns those Arab states that are colluding with Al-Qadhdhafi's regime, which has shown no respect for Arab feelings, history, or joint defense pacts. The statement praises Iraq's steadfastness in its defense of Arab territory and honor against the expansionist Iranian aggression and wonders about the real Arab attitude toward the war which Iraq is waging on behalf of the Arab nation.

The statement calls on the Libyan people's masses and Armed Forces to rise against the leaders of the bloody dictatorship which has harmed Libya's honorable history and national and pan-Arab struggle.

Report on Al-Mahdi's 13 May News Conference

JN141102 Khartoum SUNA in English 1040 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, May 14, (SUNA) — Formation of the new Cabinet has been completed but the Prime Minister al-Sadiq al-Mahdi said it would be declared Thursday at the Constituent Assembly.

Speaking at a press conference here Tuesday night Al-Mahdi said the postponement of the Cabinet's announcement was due to a request by the assembly's speaker Muhammad Ibrahim Khalil who advised to announce the Cabinet formation from inside the assembly.

Al-Mahdi said the formation of the government was delayed by (passive attitude) due to the walk out of southern parties and the Sudan National Party deputies from the assembly May 6.

The deputies walked out of the said session, which was devoted for the election of the constitutional posts including the five member State Supreme Council, the prime minister and the house speaker, press ahead with their demands [word indistinct] the issue of their representation in the Cabinet by one third of the portfolios.

(We have held prolonged meetings with those parties and we have finally reached a basic for their participation in the government and the preparation for the constitutional conference). The prime minister said.

(The southerners will be represented in the executive appartus according to their proportion in the population of the country's inhabitants), he added.

The prime minister said the Cabinet and names of the ministers were ready but he added that the assembly's speaker has suggested to announce the government formation from inside the assembly (as it is not in a recess.)

Al-Mahdi said he met with the concerned officials and acquainted himself with the country's pressing issues including finding a peaceful settlement for the problem of southern Sudan.

When asked whether the south will be divided into three regions or will be a unified one region the premier said it was up to the southerners to choose the way of administration they like in their regions saying that the central government would implement what would be reached by them.

It is to be recalled that some southerners want a unified region while others mainly from Equatoria area wanted a divided three southern regions.

Al-Mahdi said he made it clear to the southern political groups that his government does not intend to approach them through what he described as Numayri's way of divide and role.

We talked with the southern parties with objective of gaining their support to the government and we have reached an acceptable formula for their participation in the government and for their participation in the upcoming constitutional conference, he added.

Regarding peace talks with the rebels of Sudan People's Liberation Movement (SPLM), Al-Mahdi said a delegation was sent to the SPLM leader John Garang to assure him that the new government was keen on the convening of the constitutional conference.

The delegation would set a new date for the arrangements of the conference, originally scheduled to take place May 7. He said the previous date was impossible because the government has not been formed.

Al-Mahdi told the press conference that due concern would be given to the upgrading of the People's Armed Forces' capabilities to safeguard the country's security.

Al-Mahdi himself is expected to assume the portfolio of the Defence Ministry in the impending Cabinet which will announce in the assembly tomorrow.

Turning to the economic issue the premier said he was glad that Western and Eastern foreign quarters including the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund have expressed willingness to open a new chapter with Sudan. We hope that these quarters will understand our position.

The prime minister is apparently referring to IMF last Feb. decision on cutting off credits for Sudan who asked for rephasing of about 250 million dollar of debt arrears inherited from the regime of ousted President Numayri.

With regard to the foreign policy of his new government the prime minister said Sudan would exert efforts to achieve Arab solidarity through a Sudanese vision.

Al-Mahdi voiced that Sudan since the ousted of Numayri has begun correcting its foreign policy to be based on moderation and non-alignment.

The premier conceded that there were some differences between Sudan and the U.S. due to the American-Libyan conflict, but we will maintain our good neighbourly relations with Libya and at the same time we are keen to maintain our relations with U.S. as a superpower.

According to our political credibility Sudan will manage to establish relations with the superpowers without military, secu rity or political affiliation because the politics of Sudan does not allow political polarization. The premier told the press conference.

Replying to journalists' questions Al-Mahdi said all joint pacts which had been signed during the defunct regime of the ousted president including the defence pact with Egypt and which were not considered by the former Transitional Government will [be] subject to a thorough study.

Any pact that would drag Sudan into regional and international line-up will be against our declared policy, he explained. Regarding the integration between Sudan and Egypt, he said, his government was keen on achieving real economic projects with sisterly Egypt but he added that Sudan would thoroughly reconsider bilateral agreements to find out how far they bind Sudan to political axis he said his government would not hesitate to abrogate any agreement that contradicts Sudan's non-aligned foreign policy.

The unique ties between Sudan and Egypt should be characterized in the presence of the two peoples because the institutions existing under Numayri were designed for propaganda to make him appear that he was protexted by Egypt to secure his political position, the premier said.

But the current regime is not running after these things. We are running after real economic and cultural projects in the interest of the two peoples, he added.

Al-Mahdi said his government would discuss with the Egyptian officials the affair of integration to find an accepted alternative which would signify the reality of the unique relations.

Asked about the priorities of his government programme regarding the internal policy Al-Mahdi highlighted that the food, security, justice and rectifying legislations including the controversial Moslem Shari'ah laws will be high on the priorities of the government.

The premier said he entrusted the attorney general chamber to hammer out alternative legislations for the 1983 Islamic legislations which were introduced by the ex-president Numayri.

It is to be recalled that the partners in the impending government are agreed on abrogation of these legislation while the Islamic National Front (INF) the major force in the opposition is [words indistinct] them until their [word indistinct]

On the other hand Al-Mahdi disclosed that a special body will be established in the new government to follow up closely details for the convening of the constitutional conference which will decide the shape of government and the relation between the centre and the regions.

ZEMEN Terms Talks With Somalia 'Good Start'

EA131249 Addis Ababa Domestic Service in Amharic
0915 GMT 13 May 86

[Text] We now present an editorial from ADDIS ZEMEN entitled "A Good Start." The editorial deals with the first meeting of the ad hoc Ethiopia-Somalia joint committee, which aims at resolving the problems between the two countries through dialogue. The meeting was held in Addis Ababa.

In its editorial ZEMEN points out that the discovery of a joint solution to the common problems of the two countries will not only guarantee peace in the region but also help to expand and strengthen development work. Refraining from attempts to resolve differences between countries through force but, instead, trying to resolve them through dialogue, noninterference in internal affairs, and respect for territorial integrity and mutual dignity are points which occupy a very important place in the UN and OAU Charters. Respect for these points strengthens goodneighborliness, brotherly relations, and peaceful coexistence between countries, and especially between neighboring countries. It also creates favorable conditions for expanding joint cooperation in all spheres and for enhancing development. It is clear that disregard for these conditions invites negative results.

Since the inception of our continental organization, the OAU, efforts have been made and are still being made to strengthen relations in all spheres between member countries and to move the continent out of its backward state into a better state of development.

Nevertheless, certain problems left behind by colonialism have hindered this kind of constructive activity. In some regions problems which could be resolved easily are magnified, and this invites interference by imperialism. This situation has created a spirit of enmity instead of a spirit of goodneighborliness and brotherly relations. The Horn of Africa is one of the regions where such a situation exists. Even though there are blood ties between the peoples of Ethiopia and Somalia, the people have not yet benefited from this.

Hence, it is clear that these differences should be set aside to make room for goodneighborliness, brotherly relations, and peaceful coexistence. Since revolutionary Ethiopia has no aim other than peace and social development, it has repeatedly stated that it will continue to strive for peace in the region, for greater cooperation, and greater mutual development. This testifies to our country's peaceful stand. The establishment of IGADD, the Djibouti-based inter-governmental Authority on Drought and Development to which both countries belong, has a major contribution to make in this respect.

The exchange of ideas between the leaders of Ethiopia and Somalia, who attended the Djibouti meeting, has created a new situation in relations between the two countries. An ad hoc committee has been established to discuss the joint problems of the two countries and to formulate ideas for solutions. In this respect the first meeting of the Ethiopia-Somalia ad hoc committee in Addis Ababa last week built foundations for those efforts. The Ethiopia-Somalia ad hoc committee has been charged with a great responsibility. In general, the meeting held between Ethiopia and Somalia is a good start to the peace efforts embarked upon by the two countries. ZEMEN ends its editorial by saying that the successful continuation of this process is the desire of the peoples of the two countries.

Further Reportage on Visit of PLO Chairman 'Arafat

Final Communique Issued

["Final communique" issued at the end of visit to Benin by PLO Chairman Yasir 'Arafat on 13 May — recorded]

[Text] At the invitation of the head of state, His Excellency Mathieu Kerekou, His Excellency Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, and commander in chief of the Palestinian Revolutionary Forces, paid a friendly working visit to the People's Republic of Benin from 12 to 13 May, 1986. Chairman Yasir 'Arafat and the delegation accompanying him were welcomed on arrival by President Mathieu Kerekou, chairman of the Central Committee of the People's Revolution Party of Benin, president of the Republic, head of state, and chairman of the National Executive Council, along with an important delegation of the party and the state. Militants of the people's revolution of Benin accorded the PLO leader and his delegation an enthusiastic and very warm welcome.

During his stay in the People's Republic of Benin, PLO Chairman Yasir 'Arafat and the head of state, President Mathieu Kerekou, held discussions in a cordial atmosphere, which enabled the two leaders to review issues of common interest, particularly the situation in the Middle East and Africa.

Expressing their concern over the prevailing situation in the Middle East, and notably concerning the Palestinian issue, the two leaders reaffirmed the fundamental principles of self-determination for peoples and human rights, and strongly condemned the expansionist policy of aggression and genocide of the Israeli state against the Palestinian people and the Arab states. The two leaders emphasized that there cannot be lasting peace in the region so long as the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people are not recognized, including their right to return to their fatherland, toself-determination, and to the establishment of a sovereign and independent state under the leadership of the PLO, the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people, and so long as Zionist Israel does not end the illegal occupation of the Arab and Palestinian territories, and does not withdraw its troops.

To this effect, the two leaders stated that the most appropriate framework for negotiations toward the restoration of peace in the Middle East is the organization of an international peace conference under the auspicies of the United Nations, and with the effective participation of the PLO, the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

His Excellency Yasir 'Arafat informed the head of state, President Mathieu Kerekou, of the situation of the PLO action at the level of the Palestinian people, the Arab people,and states, and at the international level, as well as the recent developments in the situation in the Middle East. His Excellency President Mathieu Kerekou warmly congratulated the PLO leader and the heroic Palestinian people for the determination and courage with which they carry out the just liberation struggle for the establishment of an independent, sovereign, and internationally recognized Palestinian Arab state. He reaffirmed the constant and unflinching support of the working people of Benin to the valiant struggling Palestinian people.

The two leaders vehemently condemned the policy of domination and the oppressive acts carried out by the Zionist state of Israel in occupied Palestinian territories, thus defying world opinion and pertinent UN resolutions. They reaffirmed their strong condemnation of the Israeli raid on the PLO Headquarters in Tunis, and stressed the solidarity of their peoples with the Tunisian people.

Concerning the Iran-Iraq war which has caused enormous losses in human lives and considerable material damage, the two leaders noted with concern that the continuation of this war serves as a pretext for imperialist powers to continue their maneuvers of division and destabilization of the Middle East countries, thus weakening the position of the Third World. The two leaders made an urgent appeal to the two parties in conflict to put an end to their military acts of destruction and invite them to seek a peaceful solution to this armed conflict through negotiations.

On the prevailing situation in South Africa, the two leaders reiterated their firm condemnation of the despicable system of apartheid, and their unconditional support for the just struggle of the heroic people of South Africa, and for their democratic movement under the leadership of the ANC. They called for an immediate and total dismantling of the apartheid system set up by a racist minority, in favor of an egalitarian, democratic society that is not based on race.

While noting their satisfaction with the increasing anti-apartheid campaign at the international level, the two leaders appealed to the international community to intensify this campaign, and to put the necessary pressure on the racist Pretoria regime for the immediate and unconditional release of Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners, and for it to enter into direct negotiations with ANC, the vanguard movement for the liberation struggle of the South African people, for the total abolition of the apartheid system. They expressed the fervent hope that all nations and international organizations will participate massively in the international conference on sanctions against the racist Pretoria regime to take place in Paris in June 1986.

Examining the Namibian issue, the two leaders stressed the pertinent resolutions of the OAU, the Arab League, the Nonaligned Movement and the United Nations on this issue which is of much concern to peace- and justice-loving countries. While reaffirming their unflinching support to the just struggle of the Namibian people, under the leadership of its vanguard movement SWAPO, the two leaders made an urgent appeal to the United Nations, notably the Security Council to ensure the effective implementation of its resolution 435/78 on Namibia's independence.

The two leaders vehemently denounce the destabilization policy as well as the repeated aggression of the racist Pretoria against the Frontline States, and they reaffirm their support and solidarity with the southern African states which are struggling to consolidate their sovereignty, and to maintain and strengthen their security. They appeal to all peace- and justice-loving countries, and to international organizations to participate massively in the international conference on Namibia's independence scheduled to take place in Vienna in July 1986.

On the situation in Chad, the two leaders strongly deplored [words indistinct] the Chadian people by years of civil war. They highly appreciated the laudable efforts made by the OAU for a peaceful solution to this conflict, and instantly invite the various parties to the conflict to overcome their partisan quarrels to rapidly engage in true negotiations leading to national reconciliation and the restoration of peace in Chad.

Concerning the situation in Latin America and the Caribbean, the two leaders condemned all maneuvers aimed at destabilizing the progressive states in the region. They reaffirmed their support for the Sandinista government in Nicaragua and the laudable efforts of the countries in the region for a peaceful solution to the problems in Latin America.

At the conclusion of the discussions, His Excellency Yasir 'Arafat expressed the appreciation and profound gratitude of the Palestinian people to the valiant people of the Beninese people's revolution, and to its prestigious leader, President Mathieu Kerekou. A general agreement on economic and technical cooperation was signed between the PLO and the People's Republic of Benin.

During his stay in the People's Republic of Benin, His Excellency Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, commander in chief of the Palestinian Revolution Forces, laid a wreath at the monument for the matrys of the Beninese revolution. He renewed his sincere gratitude to the head of state, the government, and people of Benin for the warm and fraternal reception accorded him and his delegation.

Those who took part in the discussions on the Beninese side were Romain Vilon Guezo, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the People's Revolution Party of Benin [PRPB], chairman of the Standing Committee of the Revolutionary National Assembly; Roger Barba, member of the Political Bureau of the PRPB Central Committee, first vice chairman of the Standing Committee of the Revolutionary National Assembly; Edouard Zodehougan, minister delegate to the Presidency in charge of interior, public security and territorial administration acting for the minister of foreign affairs and cooperation; El Hadj Adamou Hamza, permanent secretary at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation; Edmond (Kako Povo), director of the Department for Africa and the Arab World at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation.

Those who took part on the Palestinian side were Abd al-Rahim Ahmad, member of the PLO Executive Committee; Abu Ala Ahmad, economic adviser to the PLO chairman; Salman al-Hirfi, adviser to the PLO chairman on African Affairs; Imad Shakhur, adviser at the Presidency; Samir Baker, PLO ambassador to Lagos, Amin Abul (Hashura), deputy director of the PLO Bureau in Paris.

[Text] Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, gave a press conference at the People's Hall of the Republican Palace in Cotonou shortly before his departure. This took place in the presence of our great comrade in arms, President Mathieu Kerekou, the central authorities of the party and the state, as well as members of the diplomatic corps. It was in an atmosphere of sincere solidarity and revolutionary fervor that our illustrious guest began his press conference. Chairman Yasir 'Arafat in his introduction first of all expressed his gratitude to the Beninese people and their party for the reception accorded him as well as the sincere and unfliching support given by our country to the PLO and its chairman. Yasir 'Arafat then emphasized that his organization and our country, Benin, share identical views because, he indicated, they are involved in the same struggle, that of creating a world of justice, peace, freedom, and fraternity. The chairman of the PLO Executive Committee then explained at length the prevailing situation in the occupied Arab territories, a situation characterized by the relentless, dauntless ,and heroic struggle of the Palestinian militants in spite of maneuvers to discourage them and repeated aggression of the Zionists and imperialists against the Palestinian people. Chairman Yasir 'Arafat explained how Zionist Israel and the imperialists strive relentleslly with hatred to destroy the Arab nation in general and the Palestinian nation in particular. It was an occasion for the chairman of the PLO Executive Committee to talk about the foreign interference in the Iran-Iraq war, the situation in Beirut, the bombing of the Palestinian base in Tunisia, and so on. This brilliant introduction enlightened people on the real situation in the region. The answers given to questions further helped to shed light on the Palestinian issue. This press conference was the last engagement of His Excellency Yasir 'Arafat in Benin.

BURKINA FASO

Foreign Minister Meets Press After African Tour

AB132222 Ouagadougou Domestic Service in French
1300 GMT 13 May 86

[News conference given by Basile Guissou, minister of external relations and cooperation, on 12 May in Ouagadougou after a 25-day visit to Angola, Zaire, Gabon, India, Brunei, and Iran — recorded]

[Excerpts] [Guissou] I took messages from the comrade president of Burkina Faso to his counterparts of Angola, Zaire, and Gabon.

This is for the African part of the tour. Later on, I took part in New Dehli in the Nonaligned Movement ministerial conference in preparation for the Harare Nonaligned summit due to be held in June. The ministerial conference was charged with preparing the dossiers to be submitted to the summit. They touch first on the critical economic situation and the need for the so-called Third World countries to develop South-South cooperation. The dossiers also touch on political matters such as the Western Sahara conflict, the Chadian situation, the war between Iran and Iraq, as well as the recent developments in the situation in the Mediterranean with the U.S. terrorist air raids against the cities of Tripoli and Benghazi.

After the meeting, I went successively to Bandar Seri Begawan, the capital of Brunei Darussalam, with another message from the comrade president, and lastly to the Islamic Republic of Iran where I handed a message from the comrade president to his counterpartPresident Ali Khamenei. That is the tour I have just made. Let us say that I was charged essentially with precise missions: conveying messages to the presidents of these various countries on bilateral cooperation. In the same vein, I also held talks with my colleagues, but the purpose of my visits was more to convey messages than to examine bilateral issues as such. That is what I can say in connection with the African tour.

[First unidentified reporter] Your African tour took you essentially to Angola, Zaire, and Gabon. Could you tell us what motivated the choice of these three particular African countries?

[Guissou] You newsmen are aware that several Zairian delegations have visited Burkina. My Zairian counterpart visited Burkina Faso at least four times. This also goes for Gabonese ministerial delegations which have visited Ouagadougou. It was therefore normal for Burkina to manifest itself — even if only by mere courtesy — toward countries showing interest in our country. This is also in respect for the heads of these countries who sent their ministers to our country on many occasions.

With regard to the People's Republic of Angola, you know that in spite of the distance between us... [changes thought] This country is now confronted with quite a difficult situation. It faces daily aggressive attacks by the South African racists and by the UNITA puppets who are supported financially by the United States. It was quite normal for Burkina Faso to show concrete solidarity with the Angolan people, by going there to show support on-the-spot. That is what I can say to justify our visits to these three countries.

[Second unidentified reporter] Comrade Minister, you also visited Tehran, as you said. We know that Iran and Iraq are at war. Can you tell us the official position of Burkina Faso on the conflict?

[Guissou] I told you just now that I attended the ministerial meeting of the Nonaligned countries in New Dehli, India. Burkina Faso was appointed unanimously to chair the political commission during the preparatory meeting. This was a tribute paid to our revolution and its political leadership. We accepted the appointment and carried out the task. I cannot cover ourselves in glory, but I think that I chaired the political commission with a maximum of lucidity, clearsightedness, and a sense of political tactfulness which enabled me to treat such delicate matters as the Iran-Iraq war, the Western Sahara question, and the Chadian situation.

With regard to the Iran-Iraq war, we believe that in our capacity as an active mediator for a cease-fire and peace, we must show prudence in undertaking any possible moves and avoid as often as possible taking stands unlikely to foster a possible cease-fire. This is why we have abstained up until now in our official utterances from choosing sides in that conflict. We must rather continue to work toward halting that war which we believe is a useless sacrifice of human lives.

[First reporter] Comrade Minister, you also visited the state of Brunei, a state about which the majority of Burkinabe know nothing. Can you first present that state briefly and then tell us what you discussed with the officials of that country?

[Guissou] That country is a member of the Islamic Conference Organization [ICO] and the United Nations with which Burkina Faso has very good relations. During the recent ICO ministerial meeting in Fes, Morocco, we sat side by side. You can guess that the Brunei delegation often sits side by side with our delegation because both countries have names beginning with the letter B and as a result we often sit side by side at almost every meeting. This facilitates the contacts. This is how contacts have been made, discussions held.

My Brunei counterpart, Prince Mohamed Bolkiah, has invited me on several occasions to visit his country. Through our modest persons, our respective heads of state have had the opportunity to exchange views and they want to materialize these relations by establishing diplomatic relations and exploring possible avenues of bilateral cooperation. This trip was the first one, and was successful. I believe that there is grounds for hope that mutually profitable relations can be developed with that country which is also a small country like ours.

[Second reporter] Comrade Minister, this question is not related to your trip, but it concerns the Burkinabe people all the same. In the past few days, the Western press has spoken of the expulsion of some sub-Saharan Africans from Algeria. Comrade Minister, what do you know about this?

[Guissou] I feel this is not a new problem. Already, some time ago, we faced the same problem of expulsion of African nationals from Nigeria. We do not yet have details on the circumstances of these expulsions. But what we can say is that we have very good relations with our Algerian brothers and comrades. We are convinced that the Algerian Government and people will always take useful measures to avoid painful situations. So, I would not like to trust media reports. I would rather wait for authoritative sources before we can express any position. But we also learned of this through the press like everyone else.

[Third unidentified reporter] In New Dehli where you took part in the Nonaligned meeting, did other member express further positions on the U.S. air raids against the cities of Tripoli and Benghazi?

[Guissou] I said it at the beginning of this meeting. As a matter of fact, the political commission examined this question, which was one of the hottest issues on the agenda. Of course, we condemned these terrorist raids against a sovereign member-state of the United Nations and the OAU and an African state.

We decided at the request of our delegation — note this! — we decided to send a delegation made up of ministers from member-states of the Security Council such as Congo to meet with Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi in Tripoli as a sign of the solidarity of the Nonaligned countries with Libya following the U.S. terrorist aggression. We also instructed the same delegation to proceed to New York to take part in the Security Council debate which took place thanks to the active support of Burkina Faso. It condemned the terrorist raids which left many victims including children, innocent victims barely aged 18 months. So we denounced that indiscriminate terrorist aggression.

The New Dehli meeting examined other topical issues including the real threats of similar attacks against sovereign countries by those who arrogate to themselves to behave in a way that violates all international laws and regulations on the coexistence among states.

[Third reporter] Comrade Minister, during your trip, you also examined the Western Sahara problem. Can one expect the effective participation of the SDAR in meetings even in the event of a boycott by countrias that refuse to recognize the SDAR?

[Guissou] I believe that Burkina Faso and all progressive peoples and their countries are happy about the current evolution toward a peaceful solution to the Western Sahara question. We have grounds to hope that a rapid solution will be found to the conflict inasmuch as the parties involved have agreed — thanks to the United Nations and the current OAU chairman — to hold discussions. These are positive developments that give us hope that a rapid solution can be found to this painful problem which has caused serious concern within the OAU.

In this regard, I will recall that although Burkina has always spelled out its position clearly in favor of the self-determination of the Saharan people, it has also rejected positions tending to weaken the OAU through the withdrawal of some of its members. We have always said that we feel the OAU is a forum for all countries to hold discussions despite whatever differences may exist among them. We deplored the withdrawal of Morocco and we have always expressed our hope to see Morocco return to the OAU for discussions even though our fundamental position on the issue is well-known.

[Second reporter] Comrade Minister, you have also visited Tehran. What does life look like in that country which is engaged in an Islamic revolution under the leadership of Ayatollah Khomeyni?

[Guissou] Well, I think this is a diplomatic overture by Burkina Faso, a redeployment of our diplomatic activities on the international scene. As you can see on the map, our trip took us to virtually all regions of tension, including to southern Africa. As you know, Iran is a large producer of oil and natural gas. It is very rich. It is also a powerful country to contend with politically at the international level. This is why I feel that it is quite normal for Burkina Faso to get in touch with a country that counts a lot in the Gulf region. Its weight has been considerably increased since the inception of the Islamic revolution in 1979. This revolution has led to social transformations and moralization the depth of which can hardly be perceived from outside. The moralization of the society, the search for a cultural identity, and the rejection of mental, cultural, or other alien influences is so marked that it deserves particular attention.

I feel that one must do away with prejudices, especially the counterrevolutionary, often pro-imperialist and even imperialist campaign against the struggle of the Iranian people. Doing away with such prejudices, one will actually understand that country's rejection of imperialist domination and any foreign stranglehold on Iran. This rejection began, I believe, in September 1977-1978 and resulted in the proclamation of the Islamic Republic of Iran.

During our visit, it was said that our views were convergent on certain points. This is true. I believe that one must not only see the Islamic aspect of the Iranian revolution. That revolution also has socioeconomic aspects. It rejects the misery of the people and the frantic enrichment by a minority.

In fact, the Iranian citizen has now gone beyond the mere vital minimum needs. He eats his fill and he is dressed in decent garments. He is not obliged to subserviently copy foreign models. Even though this attracts sometimes unjustified attacks, we can certainly say that a people has stood up in Iran and they are making efforts to remain free. This commands respect whatever view one may have on such a position.

We met a people determined to overcome some natural or artificial obstacles resulting from their options — ideological, political, cultural, and even sociological — which they have the absolute right to uphold but which some people tend to oppose. We feel that the Burkinabe people have much to gain in learning of the transformations in other countries such as Iran. They can thus derive experience from what is going on there in order to improve their own conditions back home. That is what we can say about our visit to the Islamic Republic of Iran.

[First reporter] Comrade Minister, you have returned from a mission to Angola, Zaire, Gabon, India, Brunei, and Iran. Can one say in conclusion that the mission was successful?

[Guissou] Yes. There is no doubt about this: I will affirm that the mission was a success because everywhere we went, we received a fraternal and friendly welcome. We were able to assess how much the options and orientation of our country are respected and taken into consideration.

We have support. Many peoples admire us and expect us to continue along our path, make improvements, learn lessons from our failures, and always march forward.

NIGERIA

Radio Examines Chernobyl Accident, Nuclear Reactors

AB141740 Lagos Domestic Service in English
0600 GMT 14 May 86

[News analysis]

[Text] On the 25th of April a fatal nuclear accident occurred at the Chernobyl nuclear pmwer station in the Soviet Union. Fire had (?burst) one of the reactors, leading to radioactive leak into the atmosphere. The Soviet Union had said that only four people died as a result of the radiation emitted from the reactor. Western scientists are insisting that the death toll was on the order of thousands of people. What is, however, clear is that the incident at the Chernobyl nuclear power station is one of the worst nuclear accidents so far recorded, since nuclear reaction became a huge source of energy.

The fact that more than 20,000 people were evacuated from a radius of about 100 km from the scene of the accident underscores the dimension of the problem. Also, vegetables and (?meats) from the Soviet Union and some East European countries are being refused in Western Europe and other parts of the world. This is for fear of radioactive contamination. Neighbors of the Soviet Union have panicked in the wake of the nuclear accident. Some of them, in fact, recorded radiation much higher than normal.

But their fears are now being allayed as assurances are being given by the Soviet authorities that the situation is under control. However, for the past 2 weeks, the incident has made the use of nuclear reactors as a source of energy a topical issue around the globe. The current discussion on the issue, for one thing, has somehow increased average knowledge about nuclear reactors. Many people now know that these reactors are devices which generate a large amount of heat and radiation. It is also known that a dark compound of uranium is responsible for the release of the heat and radiation. Nuclear scientists have further explained that the resultant energy is being used to generate electricity and to satisfy heat requirements of heavy industries like food processing, pulp and paper, iron and steel, as well as chemicals.

The utility of nuclear energy is demonstrated by the fact that it is now responsible for 15 percent of the total power generation in the world. There are 101 nuclear power stations in the United States alone. The Japanese derive 26 percent of their total energy needs from their nuclear power stations. France must save up to 1.2 million barrels of oil daily by obtaining three-quarters of her energy needs from nuclear reactors. Today 26 countries are using nuclear reactors as a source of energy.

The misfortune of this development lies in the controversy surrounding it. Protagonists of nuclear energy believe that it is a field of engineering that has relieved mankind of heavy dependence on traditional sources of energy. Those opposed to it have supported themselves with the fact that no amount of safety measures would prevent fatal accidents that can threaten human existence. They argue that since the development of nuclear power stations, not less than 20,000 accidents have been recorded. At least 1,000 were said to be quite fatal. It is also the concern of those opposed to nuclear power generation that the disposal of its solid and gaseous wastes remains a big hazard to life.

In spite of these contentions, governments in countries where nuclear power stations are being proliferated insist that such stations are cost-effective. Therefore, they have ignored thousands of antinuclear power demonstrations. The demonstrations are bound to increase in intensity as the Chernobyl nuclear accident serves as a reminder to everyone that the search for alternative sources of energy has culminated in the storage of lethal radioactive material which constitutes a real threat to mankind.

Dos Santos Sends Message to USSR's Gorbachev

MB141431 Luanda Domestic Service in Portuguese 1200 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Comrade Jose Eduardo dos Santos, chairman of the MPLA-Labor Party and president of the People's Republic of Angola, has sent a message to CPSU General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev thanking him for the warm reception and hospitality accorded to the Angolan delegation during its visit to the USSR. The message, sent by the Angolan head of state after his return to Luanda, said this visit was an important step in strengthening friendship, solidarity, and cooperation between the two peoples, parties, and governments.

In a commentary dedicated to the recent visit by the Angolan head of state to the USSR, ANGOP also emphasized friendship, cooperation, and solidarity existing between the two countries for many years as evidence of shared principles and objectives which have always united the two peoples. ANGOP says in the commentary that the visit of Comrade President Jose Eduardo dos Santos confirmed that there is something more than mere interstate relations between the two countries. ANGOP underlined that, in addition to diplomatic and economic ties between Angola and the USSR, there are identical points of view and principles on current international issues.

UNITA Official Discusses Zambian Help to MPLA

MB141936 London BBC World Service in English 1515 GMT 14 May 86

["Focus on Africa" program]

[Text] Relations between Zambia and UNITA have suddenly taken a sharp turn for the worse. President Kaunda has attacked an American decision to supply Stinger missiles to the guerrillas in their fight against the MPLA government in Luanda. For their part, UNITA has threatened to retaliate against Zambia if they assist the MPLA government in any way. Zambia, of course, shares a common border with the part of Angola controlled by UNITA. On the line to Paris, Robin White asked Jeremiah Chitunda, UNITA's secretary for foreign affairs, how he saw relations between his movement and Zambia.

[Begin recording] [Chitunda] We deplore the attitudes of the Zambian Government, in particular of President Kenneth Kaunda who at a time when the Zambian leader should help, should continue to make efforts to help Angolans find peace and reconcile with one another, the Zambian leaders think to commit themselves more and more to the Soviet Union (?and their side), thereby deepening the gap and the wound between Angolans themselves. We have noticed for the past several weeks and several months in addition to the rhetoric that remains clearly anti-UNITA and against our resistance, these are [words indistinct] occupation, we have noticed on a number of times shots being fired from the Zambian side against Angolans on the UNITA side. Our means of transportation has been shot at by Zambian police along the border. There have been acts of kidnappings and these hostile acts by Zambia have been mounting.

[White] Presumably, there must be some reason for the Zambians firing at you — if they have.

[Chitunda] We can't think of any actions or any attitudes on our side that could trigger that type of behavior from the Zambian side except perhaps the effort to create conditions in Zambia that would be taken advantage of or that could allow eventually the MPLA, the Cubans, and the Soviet forces to utilize the Zambian territory for fight against UNITA in the part of Angola that we control right now.

[White] Have you any evidence that could support your claim that the MPLA might be about or is already in Zambian soil?

[Chitunda] We think that the idea of using the Zambian territory to invade Angola has been entertained by the MPLA, authorities and by Lusaka and we insist on the (?premise) that if (?any attack was to happen), Zambia would have to bear the full responsibility for our prompt reply to that type of hostile action.

[White] But do you have any information at all that MPLA troops are already in Zambia?

[Chitunda] Not the MPLA forces yet on the Zambian territory, but we are aware of a movement in that sense.

[White] So, are you claiming that the Zambian government and the MPLA have reached some kind of agreement?

[Chitunda] We think there is such agreement, yes.

[White] Why do you think that? What is your information?

[Chitunda] We have very reliable sources of information on that. We have been monitoring very carefully the developments in this affair but it is a little bit premature to reveal the exact nature of this information.

[White] As you spoke earlier, you claimed earlier that Zambian troops have been firing at you from across the border. Have you fired back? Has there actually been any fighting at all between yourselves and the Zambians?

[Chitunda] Our response has been very limited and purely defensive, but we are preparing to respond in a much more effective and broader way. We have the means, we have the know-how, and we have the people on our side.

[White] But as yet been no major exchange of fire between yourselves and Zambians?

[Chitunda] Not in the form of declared armed conflict, yet. [end recording]

PLO's 'Arafat Arrives on Visit; Talks Begin

MB141354 Luanda Domestic Service in Portuguese 1200 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Official talks between the PLO and the MPLA-Labor Party started in Luanda today. Here we have a report from our correspondent Pedro Correia.

[Begin Correia recording] Talks between PLO and MPLA-Labor Party delegations began in Luanda today. Comrade Jose Eduardo dos Santos, chairman of the MPLA-Labor Party and president of the republic, and Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of PLO, head their respective delegations. Yasir 'Arafat arrived in Luanda yesterday on a 2-day official and friendly visit. The talks center on southern African and Middle East issues, particularly the Palestinian issue. Other issues of common interest may also be discussed.

Yasir 'Arafat has already visited Mali, Nigeria, Gabon, Congo, Burkina Faso, Togo, and Niger. The aim of his visit is to thank these countries and peoples for their support of the struggle of the Palestinian people for their self-determination and their right to create an autonomous and independent Palestinian state. During his visit, PLO Chairman 'Arafat emphasized the ties between the Israel regime and the South African apartheid regime. [end recording]

SOUTH AFRICA

P.W. Botha Speaks to President's Council 15 May

Condemns 'Meddling'

MB151236 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1235 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] President's Council, May 15, SAPA — The government had no intention of abdicating and would use all its might, which had not even remotely been fully exerted so far, against those bent on violence, the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, said today. Addressing the President's Council, he said uncertainties and confusion which had grown out of disinformation disseminated by the country's enemies and was aggravated by "meddling" groups visiting from abroad. "The more uncalled-for intervention takes place, the more confusion and misconceptions will be resisted by South Africans," Mr Botha said. South Africa did not want to disengage its foreign relations, "but the uncalled-for interference at times assume proportions which prove conclusively that some countries wish to obscure their problems by interfering with ours." Some of these groups were well-intentioned but the activities of others had only resulted in adding to the confusion.

Mr Botha also appealed for an end to violence and called on all "balanced and responsible South Africans" to help the government to get the country on the road to prosperity, stability and security. This could only be done along constitutional lines, he said.

A false impression was often created that the government was remiss in maintaining what had been built up over many generations, "and that we are on the road to abdication." "I reject this false impression," President Botha said. "We will not allow our spiritual and material heritage, built up over 300 years, to fall willy nilly into the hands of a revolutionary power clique. The powers of stability and responsibility outstrip the forces of chaos."

He felt it necessary to repeat clearly the government's view on reform and negotiation. The near cliche that reform was bound to bring uncertainty was often accompanied by doubt concerning the government's ability to effectively administer the process of reform and to guarantee an acceptable solution. "This uncertainty and doubt have, understandably so, induced many people to insist that the government should be specific, not only as regards the direction of the process of reform, but also as regards the contents of the end result," Mr Botha said.

Many demanded from the government a declaration of intent to provide impetus to the negotiating process. Many people in this category, and others, had stated the government should not be prescriptive and required an open-ended agenda. "Clearly there is a real risk that if the government should comply with the request for a declaration of intent, it would stand accused of being prescriptive. To complicate matters even further, some people and institutions have laid down certain preconditions which they require to be met even before they enter into a process of negotiation."

Others subscribed to political models and concepts which could not be applied to the RSA while others attempted to gain support for "contemptuous disloyalty to the country abroad." "As far as the South African government is concerned it remains adamant that it is prepared to negotiate with citizens of South Africa, provided that they do not resort to violence as a means of attaining their political and other goals, or call on foreign agencies to support them," Mr Botha said.

The government was not a minor party in a so-called faction fight. Legally the government represented the state and any reform proposals would have to recognise this. "Negotiation, of necessity, implies that participants should accept that not all their requirements are likely to be met and it implies a willingness to listen, to discuss and seek solutions." Such solutions would result from deliberations by South Africans in the interest of South Africa. "Essentially it is a process of give and take during which people are required, on the one hand, to scale down their demands and, on the other, to be lenient when required to make concessions to satisfy reasonable demands. It is in this spirit that the government approaches the process of negotiation," he said.

He appealed to all who chose peaceful constitutional change to display the same disposition. "Having said this I am constrained to decline requests to be specific about the end product precisely because it must be a product of negotiation." Parliament was dealing with a number of measures which were the result of such negotiation and his government had gone far to meet legitimate demands. "I am not at the disposal of people who make excessive demands," President Botha said and listed his government's set of democratic, Christian norms required for negotiation. He had suggested creating a national council which could:

— create opportunities for joint planning and preparation of a new constitutional dispensation;
— give black communities an interim say in government; and — promote healthy relations and human dignity, rights and freedoms.

"Radicalism from neither side can make any contribution," he said. "I would however be neglecting my duty if I did not put it clearly that the government is determined to maintain order. Those who perpetrate violence are served notice that unless they forsake violence, they will unavoidably face the full might at the state's disposal and which has not even remotely been fully employed. It is my deepest wish that senseless violence will now come to an end," he said. There was no cause for panic but good cause for responsible action. "South Africa is worth much more than those who play recklessly with its greatest interests," Mr Botha said.

Delineates Nonnegotiable Principles

MB151238 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1237 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] President's Council, May 15, SAPA — The state president, Mr P.W. Botha, today spelt out certain important principles which were not negotiable in the new constitutional set-up. Addressing the President's Council, Mr Botha said whatever negotiated solutions one could produce would have to be implemented by parliament since negotiated reform had to be implemented constitutionally. "This includes the possibility of general elections or a referendum, in the case of drastic deviation from already accepted policies." The government, he said, subscribed to certain fundamental norms and values by which it would be guided throughout the process of negotiation in the belief that a negotiated settlement was only possible within the parameters of these norms and values. "It will also be guided by these norms and values while it continues to govern the country as a civilised state.

These norms and values, Mr Botha said, included the following which would have to be entrenched in any new dispensation — the realisation of the democratic ideal since it was the government's accepted principle that only democratic institutions could meet the demands of justice and fairness. "This means that a democratic dispensation of government which must accommodate the legitimate political aspirations of all South Africa's communities must be designed and implemented. Such a dispensation must take cognisance of and reflect the multi-cultural nature of the South African society and must provide for visible and effective protection of minority groups and the rights against domination and for self-determination for such groups and communities. South Africa is a country of minorities and a multicultural society. Its diversity is a fact that must be accepted," Mr Botha said.

The government, he said, was committed to devise such democratic solutions in cooperation with South Africans who were also committed to peaceful and democratic solutions and who rejected violence as a means of achieving political goals. "In this respect it is the government's conviction that only purposeful broadening of democracy of the South African society at large and accompanying socio-economic reform can ensure lasting peace and stability. Adherence to Christian values and civilised norms with recognition and protection of freedom of faith and worship was important. This principle is a cornerstone of our existence as a civilised state."

Maintenance of the sovereignty and the integrity of the republic was also of the utmost importance. "This requires well disciplined and suitably equipped security forces. It means that South Africa must be able to protect the integrity of its borders, as well as to defend its peoples against internationally organised terrorism and to maintain law and order. "Nobody must underestimate our determination in this regard. As a regional power in southern Africa, this our indisputable duty," Mr Botha said.

Mr Botha said the government was committed to the sanctity and indivisibility of law and its just application as well as the independence of the judiciary and the equality of all under the law. Liberty as a cornerstone of true democracy must manifest itself on different levels, Mr Botha said. "Firstly, on the personal and individual level which also implies respect for and the protection of the human dignity, life and property of all. Secondly, liberty on the group and community level which implies respect for and the promotion and protection of the right to self-determination of population groups and peoples. Thirdly, liberty on the state and national level to safeguard the integrity and freedom of the country to secure the protection of our citizens through the application of civilised standards of justice, order and security."

True democracy for the republic and all its peoples, individually and collectively, must be recognised in each of these components of freedom since the absence of such recognition would diminish, not increase, the freedom of the country's peoples, Mr Botha said. There should be a furtherance of private enterprise and effective competition as well as confidence in the economy. There should also be an elimination of discrimination implying selection of unfavourable treatment or prejudical action on the basis of race, cultural affiliation or religious conviction, he added.

EPG Meets Ministers, Boesak, Squatters

MB141743 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1740 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 14, SAPA — The Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group (EPG) spent their second working day in Cape Town today meeting groups as diverse as Hout Bay squatters and senior cabinet ministers. After the unscheduled meeting this afternoon at a Newlands hotel between a squatter delegation and EPG co-leader, Gen Olusegun Obasanjo, the mission headed for the H.F. Verwoed building for another round of talks with senior government officials. The peace-and-dialogue group are expected to see President P.W. Botha tomorrow or the next day and are also seeking a meeting this year with ANC leader Nelson Mandela in Pollsmoor Prison.

Significantly, Mr Botha is due to make what a spokesman for his office called "an important announcement" to the President's Council tomorrow afternoon.

The EPG promised to try and prevent alleged police harassment of squatters in Hout Bay after a delegation forced an impromptu meeting with representatives at their hotel headquarters. About 40 black squatters from Dawidskraal in Hout Bay are facing arrest after ignoring an order from the police and Western Cape administration board to move to Khayelitsha. The delegation of nine squatters (including two small children), a community worker, and two members of the Hout Bay Action Committee walked into the hotel lobby at lunchtime and requested a meeting with the EPG. They were invited upstairs where they held talks with the co-chairman of the EPG and former Nigerian president, Gen Glusegun Obasanjo, and the group's legal advisor, Mr Jeremy Pope.

The delegation told Mr Pope and Gen Obasanjo that the Western Cape Development Board [WCDB] and divisional council employees had demolished the shacks of 39 black squatters at Dawidskraal in Hout Bay in May 1, and police arrested the occupants for illegal squatting. The squatters were released on R40 bail after two court appearances. Today, police and WCDB officials told the squatters they had until tomorrow to move to Khayelitsha or they would be re-arrested. The delegation said most of the squatters worked in Hout Bay and many had been born there or had lived there for many years. If they moved to Khayelitsha they woud have to pay R10 a day to travel to work as there were no jobs in the new township.

They were sheltering in a church in Hout Bay to escape the police and were "desperate", they said. Community worker, Mr Dick Meter, told the EPG the actions of the authorities showed that the government's reforms "make no difference to the people."

Gen Obasanjo said the EPG would like to investigate the matter and would try to persuade the Hout Bay police not to harass the squatters. "It is difficult for us to become involved in particular cases, but we will look into this and let the government know we are aware of your situation," he said. Mr Pope promised the delegation that the EPG would "not close its eyes to the suffering of the people." Although the EPG could not do anything that would "undermine the law" of the country, it would try to use its influence to help the squatters. He took down the name of the Hout Bay police station and promised to contact the station commander. During the meeting, the delegation told Mr Pope that they wanted "complete political change" in South Africa and did not beleive in the government's reforms. When they asked him how he saw the future of the country, he said: "It's going to take a long time to sort this out because its such a mess."

The EPG have already met the minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, and his deputy, Mr Ron Miller, and the minsiter of home affairs, Mr Stoffel Botha.

The group has also met with UDF [United Democratic Front] patron Dr Allan Boesak, who told reporters today that he ahd attempted to convey to the EPG the point of view of groups opposed to the government. Dr Boesak said he had told the EPG that "there is now a much more blatant form of open repression and state terrorism towards the people than when they (the EPG) were here last in March."

In is understood that the EPG may be leaving for Lusaka earlier than originally planned, probably by the weekend, in a bid to allay the growing ANC suspicions over the latest mission. Indications from Lusaka are that the ANC leadership is "thoroughly sceptical" about the objectives of the current EPG exercise which is increasingly being seen as a device being used by Pretoria to stall Commonwealth recommendations for sanctions.

In an apparent bid to distance the ANC from the latest initiative, an ANC spokesman in Lusaka said today that the organisation had yet to be formally presented with the EPG proposals. These include the release of political prisoners, the unbanning of the ANC and an government undertaking to scrap apartheid in return for an ANC truce in the armed struggle.

Heunis Comments on 'KwaNatal' Authority Option

MB141612 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1611 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] House of Representitives, May 14, SAPA — A bill enabling the creation of joint executive authority between the Natal provincial administration and the KwaZulu government was being prepared and would soon be tabled in parliament, the minister of constitutional development and planning, Mr Chris Heunis said today. Speaking in his vote of the budget he said the KwaNatal proposal was a positive move and an example of what could be achieved by negotiation as opposed to confrontation and political rhetoric. The government had approved the plan for a joint executive authority but had not yet received the proposals about a joint legislative authority which was presently being discussed at the Natal indaba.

He said the government could not accede to a request for a moratorium on changes to the Natal provincial system until October 1, 1986, to allow the indaba to put forward its proposals for a joint legislature. The life of the provincial councils had already been extended once from April 29 to June 30 and a further extension could not be considered. This would not affect the negotiations at the indaba because parliamentary legislation to implement any proposals could only be passed in the 1987 parliamentary session.

The chief minsiter of KwaZulu, Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi and his cabinet and the administrator of Natal, Mr Radclyffe Cadman and his executive should be complimented for illustrating the type of cooperation which could exist between executive authorities in this country. He said the KwaNatal plan was a pioneering project which if successful, would be a useful prototype for similar institutions in other parts of the country. It had to be emphasised that no fundamental political rights and powers were associated with the concept which was not a new form of second tier government but an instrument for cooperation between existing administrations. The joint executive administration would be headed by a board giving equal representation to both parties. The chairman of the board would have to be acceptable to both and if necessary could hold the post on a rotation basis. Mr Heunis said that communities other than white would in future participate in the Natal provincial administration and would therefore also share in the running of the joint executive administration.

Malan Discusses 'Threat' From Frontline States

MB141813 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1802 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 14, SAPA — The Frontline States had a quantitative "major armaments" advantage over South Africa because of the Soviet strategy of disrupting the arms balance in southern Africa, the minister of defence, General Magnus Malan, said today. Commenting on the "external threat" to South Africa during debate on his budget allocation, he said the Frontline States, however, had a "substantial backlog" when it came to the quality of military personnel, infrastructure and the use of equipment. "They are actually making progress through replacing old equipment with the modern and this is being maintained by surrogate personnel because the locals are not yet in a position to do so themselves." These circumstances ought to make it clear to Mr Philip Myburgh, the official opposition spokesman on defence, why it was not possible to accede to his appeal to replace conscription with a larger standing army.

During the 1985/86 financial year, the Frontline States ground forces had increased by 9,200 troops, and surrogate troops — particularly in Angola — by 2,600. These 2,600 men were Cubans seconded to Angola, Gen Malan said. The Soviet Union had supplied 19 attack aircraft — MiG 21's and MiG 23's — to Zambia, Angola, Mozambique, and Tanzania during the year. A total of 25 helicopters had also been delivered to the Frontline States, with 21 going to Angola. These craft had been "highly sophisticated and ultra-modern" MiG 25's and "a few" Mig 17's, he said. Angola had also been supplied with six transport aircraft, while the air-defence system in southern Angola had been expanded, largely in an attempt to limit the activities of South African air force planes operating against SWAPO bases in the area.

"All this illustrates once again the Russian strategy to provide terrorist organizations with safer base areas," Gen Malan said. There was a continuing tendency in the Frontline States to change to more advanced equipment. Angola, for example, already possessed "very modern" T62 tanks and had replaced a considerable, number of MiG 17's with "outstanding fighter aircraft" like MiG 23's and SU 22's.

As far as the Frontline States' strategy was concerned, there had been no major change in the year under review. Certain adjustments had in fact been made to restrict the activities of terorist organizations. Botswana had, for example, given priority to measures preventing cross border operations against South Africa. In Angola, President Jose Eduardo dos Santos' "shaky" government had acquired a stronger military component, with 10 serving members of the army being appointed to the Central Committee. President dos Santos had informed his party congress he would spend at least one third of his budget on defence. Angola remained the most important base area for the African National Congress and SWAPO in southern Africa and there was no indication at this stage that President dos Santos would change his attitude to these organizations. "The Cubans have dug in there and Dos Santos is apparently powerless to get rid of them," Gen Malan said.

Says ANC 'Manipulated' by Communists

MB141940 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1927 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 14, SAPA — The new awakening among Western democracies to the dangers of terrorism would hopefully also lead to a greater appreciation and understanding of South Africa's cross-border operations, the minister of defence, General Magnus Malan, said tonight. Speaking in the debate on his budget vote, he said "it would be most encouraging if the West realises the Republic's actions in this regard are not only to protect our own interests but also those of southern Africa and the Western community." He welcomed the joint declaration at the summit meeting in Tokyo last week on combined action against terrorism. Gen Malan said the government could "only trust that the exchange of intelligence and concerted action directed against individual terrorists as well as diplomatic action against those who harbour them will be effective." Libyan activities and other horrific deeds appeared to have created a new awakening of the dangers of terrorism and in this way Libya could prove a blessing to the West.

The same forces that used terrorism as a tool were also the instigators of internal revolutionary violence in South Africa. This violence was part of a two-pronged approach to prepare the way for "a revolutionary political power bid." In the revolutionary process, the population was intimidated, grievances were exploited, innocent people were killed and law and order was undermined. "The circumstances in which we find ourselves are enough justification for operations against terrorist bases across our borders should the threat originate there," Gen Malan said.

"On the revolutionary front, the African National Congress has intensified its violent onslaught ... our security forces are singled out as a target with the belief being that if you can make them waver, other hurdles and foundations of our society will be easier to overrun." Despite the "black nationalist" group within the ANC, the organization was "clearly manipulated by communists." Commenting on renewed pressure on the government to talk to the ANC, Gen Malan said leading people in South Africa were subtly projecting the "communist dominated terror movement as reasonable and pragmatic," trying to create a climate in which the government was forced to soften its approach to the ANC. These people regarded the government's reform initiatives as "pure cosmetics" but their press, religious and economic freedom would disappear under the ANC.

In Angola, Moscow had achieved a similar goal through its "tool," the MPLA. "South Africa cannot allow herself to become a victim of this kind of manipulation and power expansion," Gen Malan said. The government's policy was not to negotiate with organizations that offered violence as a solution. The ANC remained welcome at the negotiating table provided it denounced violence. "This is a truth the black nationalists in the ANC should also take serious note of," he said.

Minister: People Support SADF-Police Presence

MB150705 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2153 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 14, SAPA — Most black township residents believed the SADF and the police could end the unrest and guarantee their safety, the deputy minister of defence, Mr Adriaan Vlok, said today. Speaking in the defence budget vote debate, he said an objective and scientific survey, conducted in black townships affected by unrest, had shown that 82 percent of the residents thought the police and the SADF could handle the situation. Sixty two per cent believed the police and the SADF would stop the unrest and 75 per cent said the security forces guaranteed their safety.

"We would like to withdraw the troops from the townships. They are not there of their own will or by choice — they have been sent there by the government to protect the interests of peaceful citizens." Mr Vlok said he objected to statemetns by members of the PFP [Progressive Federal Party] that the SADF was being deployed against blacks inside South Africa. The SADF was not against people of any particular colour but was opposed to anyone who threatened the safety of the state. Mr Vlok said the coutnry's safety should be placed above party politics and the joint management centres set up to deal with grievances and "bottlenecks" in black townships should be kept out of the political arena. These grievances were often exploited by revolutionaries to incite the locals against the government and the state.

He said he had no difficulty with the viewpoints of Mr Harry Schwarz (PFP Yeoville) and the PFP spokesman on defence, Mr Philip Myburgh (PFP Wynberg) who appreciated the communist threat against the country. But Mr Peter Gastrow (PFP Durban Central) and certain other members appeared to "speak with a different voice." "What voice did they use to talk to the ANC in Lusaka? Did they tell them of the threat to South Africa?" The government would only talk to the ANC if it renounced violence because one could not negotiate with violent revolutionaries. He appealed to memebrs of the CP [Conservative Party] not to bring party politics into the defence vote as it was not in the interests of the country, which was facing a revolutionary onslaught.

Boesak Appears Briefly in Cape Town Court

[Text] Cape Town, May 12, SAPA — The president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, Dr Allan Boesak, appeared briefly in the Malmesbury Magistrates Court this morning, SABC News reported. No charges were put and the case was adjourned to September 19. Bail of R20,000 was extended. The minister of the interior, Mr Stoffel Botha, returned Mr Boesak's passport to him on Friday. Safety measures were taken by the police at Malmesbury this morning and all roads leading to the magistrates court were closed to traffic. Police searched all vehicles at roadblocks about 10 km from the town.

Comments on 'Struggle'

MB121212 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0741 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 12, SAPA — Dr Allan Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, told an audience of about 500 in the Athlone Civic Centre yesterday that ways should be found to make the authorities understand that "we find their treatment of our people unacceptable." Dr Boesak condemned police for whipping children at Arcadia High School in Bonteheuwel last week and noted that people there had decided to embark on a rent boycott. He was addressing a meeting in support of detainees held under Section 29 of the Internal Security Act, particularly Mr Hudson Gila, 74, whose detention police have confirmed.

"There is not a single community that has not been touched by this scourge of detentions, teargassings and invasions by the security forces," he said. Yet giving up the struggle was the thought "furthest from our minds," he said. "We will continue to ensure that the South African Government has a thorn in its flesh as long as we breathe. We will not give up our determination to govern this land that is ours."

Dr Boesak suggested the time may have come to light candles again for those who had been detained. He said he hoped communities would meet over the next few weeks "to decide how to show where we stand" and to show "anger and disgust at the way we are being treated."

The commissioner of police has denied a report in a Cape Town morning newspaper that pupils were ordered out of classrooms and whipped by police.

Condemns AWB Movement

MB150702 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0630 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 15, SAPA — Dr Allan Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, has launched an attack on the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging (AWB) [Afrikaner Resistance Movement] and said he wondered what the difference was between the minister of law and order, Mr Louis le Grange, and AWB leader, Mr Eugene Terre'blanche. Dr Boesak and Mr

Trevor Manuel, general secretary of the UDF, were speaking at a meeting at the University of Cape Town [UCT] at the culmination of a NUSAS [National Union of South African Students] campaign for the release of political prisoners. The meeting, attended by about 1,000 students, supported a call for UCT to confer an honorary doctorate on jailed ANC leader, Nelson Mandela.

Dr Boesak said he was of the opinion that the AWB was a problem which the "government and their people created and they must deal with that problem." If the AWB was violent it was because "there is a tradition, a culture of violence in this country that has been born out of hypocrisy." "If the AWB speaks the language of threats and intimidation and of death then its because the South African Government knows no other language than the language of intimidation and threats and violence. I really wonder sometimes what the difference really is between Louis le Grange and Eugene Terre'blanche."

Tutu Press Conference on Apartheid Reported

AU131257 Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 13 May 86 p 2

[Special DIE PRESSE report by "M.S."]

[Text] Vienna — According to South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu, sanctions against South Africa that go beyond those imposed to date are the only possibility of preventing the country from finally drowning in blood and violence. With this statement on Monday [12 May] the black church leader and 1984 Nobel Peace Prize laureate, who is staying in Vienna for a short visit, wanted to counter the view that further sanctions contradict the interests of the majority of South Africa's citizens. "Our last chance is the intervention of the international community of states," Tutu stressed when talking to journalists.

"I have seen much violence in my life. I have seen what it does, in Nigeria, in Ethiopia. I have seen our people die like flies. If the international community does not help us our population will not have much choice. Then it might come to my saying: 'We have no choice,' " the bishop said when asked what he himself thinks about using violence. He said that there is less and less time left. He himself is therefore in danger, in the same way as all those who still advocate nonviolence in South Africa.

Furthermore, the head of the Anglican Church in southern Africa emphatically rejected the opinion that there is a leadership vacuum in South Africa with respect to a change in power: "Certainly not on our side." The West should recognize that a permanently stable country at the Cape is in its interest. Sanctions are often rejected with the argument, he said, that South Africa is strategically important for the West. After an assumption of power by the blacks this importance could be reduced when South Africa remembers that the West did not help in its "liberation."

Asked what he, Tutu ("I am no politician, although it seems that I am one"), recommends to the Austrians, the archbishop said: "I do hope that your country decides finally to stand on the side of justice. Do what you consider to be the right things. I ask for an ethical decision, not for a strategic or economic one."

Commentary Criticizes Tutu Call for Sanctions

MB141016 Johannesburg International Service in English 0630 GMT 14 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] Against the full weight of opinion of astute economic thinkers at home and abroad, the bishop of Johannesburg, Bishop Desmond Tutu, continues his appeal across the Western world for economic sanctions against South Africa. He told the annual conference of the International Press Institute in Vienna this week that South Africa was on the brink of catastrophe, and that the situation could be salvaged if economic sanctions were imposed.

He does not back up this argument with any facts and offers nothing else in support of it except his belief that economic sanctions will bring the South African Government to its knees. He dismisses the argument that blacks will suffer most with the remark that they have suffered so much that a little more will not matter. His attitude demonstrates not only a lamentable lack of understanding of economic realities, but also a callousness one would hardly associate with a man of the cloth.

German industralist Mr (Hans Metter) said during a recent return visit to South Africa that disinvestment was based on the idea of a revolutionary climate, and if this backfired it could lead to a conventional revolution. Well-known British commentator and author Paul Johnson says, and we quote: The current attempt to destroy the South African economy seems to me one of the most wicked things that has occurred in the world since the day of Hitler and Stalin. I can understand why the ANC wishes to bring about this catastrophe, because they want power and this is the only way they can get it. But why so many churchmen should desire it, professing as they do to care for the welfare of ordinary Africans, is a mystery to me. Paul Johnson makes the point that South Africa's factories and mines are the means whereby the smaller southern African countries survive. If its economy collapses, the one engine of growth in the continent will be put out of action, and its fall will drag down all the countries of southern Africa, indeed, perhaps all sub-Saharan Africa.

Bishop Tutu either has no understanding of these cogent arguments or, more ominously, he chooses to ignore them.

Violence Continues in KwaNdebele Protests

MB141316 Umtata Capital Radio in English 1300 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] At least two people are reported to have been killed as violence continues to flare in KwaNdebele, northeast of Pretoria. Thousands of students have gathered for a meeting to protest Pretoria's plans to grant the homeland independence later this year. They are also said to be seeking government explanations about the alleged presence of vigilantes supported by the authorities. Police have tried to seal off the area as looting and stoning continues for the second day. Witnesses say hundreds of rounds of teargas have been fired. Police in Pretoria have refused to comment, saying any information must come from authorities in KwaNdebele. However, police in the homeland have refused to supply any information.

Further on 'Sustained Unrest'

[Text] Pretoria, May 14, SAPA — Reports of sustained unrest today continued to emerge from KwaNdebele — scheduled to become independent on December 11 — while police in the area clamped an official news blackout on the situation. Reports said two people had been shot dead and scores injured by police attempting to quell unrest today. A police source said five people had been shot and that "sustained fighting" was in progress today. The unrest apparently started after a funeral, when police and soldiers used rubber bullets, birdshot and teargas throughout the territory to disperse hundreds of marauding youths.

The UDF [United Democratic Front]-affiliated Moutse Youth Congress today lauded the "revolt" as "an historic event." "It is the first large-scale protest against independence," said a spokesman. The funeral had been held for Mr Jacob Skosana, whose mutilated body was found after he had been kidnapped by the Imbokotho vigilante group.

A Col Gysbers, speaking on behalf of the police commissioner for KwaNdebele, Brig C. van Niekerk, said today police were not prepared to comment on the reports or to confirm any deaths or injuries. "It is no use phoning because we are not prepared to comment," he said.

He referred the reporter to a telex headed "Revolt: KwaNdebele" from the area's commissioner-general, Mr G.J. van der Merwe, which said: "The police of KwaNdebele were forced to ask a number of people who wanted to attend an illegal gathering at the village of Captain Mapoch to disperse." No mention of police action or unrest was made in the telex. He said however that the KwaNdebele government had been told at a meeting — "similar" to the one held at Captain Mapoch's village — on Monday of "concern" about the Imbokhotho "cultural" organisation and the future of the Ndebele people after independence.

As a result, Mr Van der Merwe said, KwaNdebele's chief minister, Mr Simon Skosana, had released a statement saying that if legislative assembly members requested it, the independence issue could "again be discussed in full." The cabinet had also requested the assembly of captains to advise it on the future of Imbokhotho. One of the conditions under which KwaNdebele would accept independence would be the granting of double citizenship, Mr Skosana said in the statement.

Mr van der Merwe ended his telexed statement from Groblersdal with the observation: "The situation in KwaNdebele is currently under control." Efforts to reach him and Mr Skosana about the unrest situation were unsuccessful.

A spokesman for the minister of constitutional development and planning said Mr Chris Heunis had no comment about the issue.

The Moutse Youth Congress spokesman, however, called on KwaNdebele people to "prepare for the kind of siege we arouse by every protest." People could do this "by forming various popular organisations and to strengthen the UDF in the area, particularly the Dennilton Youth Congress and the Moutse Youth Congress," he said. People had united to fight the "independence deathtrap" of homeland leaders Mr Cedric Phatudi of Lebowa and KwaNdebele's Mr Skosana. "Phatudi and Skosana are on the same mission, of enslaving our people on behalf of the apartheid system," the spokesman said.

Situation 'Quiet but Tense'

MB150839 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0819 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Siyabuswa, May 15, SAPA — The situation in riot-torn KwaNdebele was "quiet but tense" this morning, a government spokesman said in the capital, Siyabuswa. Figures regarding the number of people killed, injured and arrested during unrest so far this week were not available, but would be supplied to homeland leader Mr Simon Skosana and his government by the commissioner of police, Brig C. Van Niekerk, today. Unofficial estimates put the death toll as high as six, following the alleged use of "live" ammunition, rubber bullets, birdshot and tearsmoke by police assisted by the SADF.

White government officials residing outside Siyabuswa were escorted to work today by police and SADF Casspir armoured vehicles today, a government spokesman said. No trouble was experienced on the way.

The unrest spanning the whole region was sparked off by opposition to KwaNdebele's imminent "independence" and the alleged attacks on opponents by the Imbokotho vigilantes, which is headed by Mr Skosana.

'Chaos' Reported in Tembisa as Funerals Delayed

MB150836 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0828 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 15, SAPA — There was chaos in Tembisa, near Kempton Park, yesterday when the funerals of three people who died three weeks ago could not take place because of police action, the SOWETAN newspaper reports.

Many police and army officers manned roads and all venues in the township where the funeral services were to be held were under police guard. They included two cinemas and the local sports stadium. Those who were to be buried were Mr Vincent Xaba, 20, Mr Samuel Tlhatlha, 32, and Mr Mpithizele Mahlangu. Hundreds of people who tired to get to the venues were turned back and the police told the press to leave immediately.

SOWETAN reporter Mojalefi Moseki, who was arrested and later released after being told to leave the township, said he saw five injured people — two of them in a serious condition — at Tembisa hospital. Police told undertakers to go to the police station and buses driven by members of the South African Defence Force fetched family members for the burials. The families refused and the SOWETAN says it has established that the coffins were returned to the parlours.

A member of the Tembisa Civic Assocaiton told the newspaper that four youths were killed at a night vigil on Tuesday night. However, the police said only two of the deaths were related to unrest. There was a massive stayaway in the township and buses and taxis did not operate throughout the day. The Tembisa branch of the Congress of South African Trade Unions had called on township residents to stay away from work for the funerals.

[Text] His Excellency President Kaunda today described India as a power for forces of goodness in the world and commended her for maintaining her policy of nonalignment. Speaking at State House at the opening of official talks with visiting Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, Dr Kaunda said he is happy to note that the country had resisted superpowers' attempts to influence it. The president said India, by being the biggest democracy in the world and by its openness, could be an easy target for superpowers in their efforts to acquire spheres of influence. Dr Kaunda also paid personal tribute to the visiting prime minister for following the footsteps of his predecessor in nurturing nonalignment and (?greatness) through the power of thought and goodwill to other people. The president expressed appreciation for Mr Gandhi's outstanding statemanship which has ended the world's anxiety on the future of India following his mother's assassination in 1984.

In reply, Mr Gandhi called on developing countries to narrow the gap between themselves and developed nations. Mr Gandhi said countries like India and Zambia, whose advancement is held back by colonialism, should work together and catch up with the rest of the world, He noted that the world still faces the basic human rights problems and referred to South Africa where the racist regime is crushing every voice that speaks sense.

U.S. Ship Fired On

The Beirut paper AL-SAFIR cited by KUNA reported that a U.S. ship was fired on while passing through the Suez Canal 13 May, and revealed that the Egyptian security forces arrested a "young man" in connection with the shooting while he was driving on a road along the canal in a prohibited military zone.

Libya

The Foreign Liaison Bureau People's Committee informed the Arab ambassadors accredited to the Jamahiriyah of Libya's dismay at the Arab League's failure to convene an emergency Arab summit or to adopt practical measures to confront the recent U.S. and EEC actions, Tripoli radio reported. The People's Committee defended Libya's "principled and firm" stance regarding the "fateful" issues facing the Arab nation, including the Gulf war, and asserted that using its stance on the Gulf War as a pretext is either due to ignorance or is an "exposed attempt" to "cover up the silence, defeatism, and intrigues" characterizing the stands of some Arab countries toward the U.S.-NATO policy against Libya. The People's Committee warned that Libya will "reconsider" its "link" with the Arab League and seek "alliance" with a "power" opposed to the United States unless that organization adopts "practical" measures to respond to the U.S.-NATO "aggression," including severing ties with the United States and the United Kingdom as a minimum. The Committee also threatened a change in Libya's position vis-a-vis the Gulf war if measures are not adopted, which "in practice" would find the Jamahiriyah aligned with Iran.

"Informed sources" in Tripoli rebutted allegations by the Rome paper LA REPUBBLICA that Libya "had relations" with the Red Brigades, JANA reported. The agency's political affairs editor, in the same report, affirmed Libya's strong rejection of establishing ties with "terrorist" organizations, which the editor claimed are used by certain European governments to further their own aims, and asserted that the Jamahiriyah has fought and continues to fight "organized" terrorism.

Iran-Iraq War

Many Iraqi vehicles were destroyed and 200 Iraqis aboard them were killed during an Iranian artillery bombardment of the Al Basra-Abu al-Khasib military road, according to IRNA. The report claimed that the attack was in retaliation for Iraq's air attack on a passenger train 14 May. Meanwhile, another IRNA report updated the casualty figure in the train attack to 61 dead and 270 injured.

In continuing fighting in the Haj 'Umran area, a military report cited by Tehran radio claimed that over 1,000 Iraqis were killed or wounded during a "heavy" battle the night of 15 May, bringing the number of Iraqi casualties in 3 days of fighting there to more than 3,500. On the other hand, a communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio 15 May asserted that two Iranian infantry companies were wiped out during an Iranian counterattack against positions recently captured by Iraq in that area.

In air action, a communique cited by IRNA 16 May reported that Iranian fighters bombed an Iraqi helicopter center west of Rawanduz, in Iraq's Irbil Province, and inflicted heavy materiel and personnel damage. Another IRNA report asserted that Iranian planes prevented an Iraqi fighter from violating Tehran's airspace 15 May. For Iraq's part, an Iraqi military spokesman cited by Baghdad radio 16 May divulged that the Iraqi Air Force delivered an accurate and effective hit on a "large maritime target" off the Iranian coast.

Iran-Syria

The Dubayy paper AL-BAYAN disclosed 15 May that Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad has "urged" his Iranian counterpart to end "military provocations" against Gulf installations and shipping, especially those belonging to Saudi Arabia. Citing "informed Arab sources," the paper reported that the recent visit of Syrian Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar' to Iran primarily focussed upon Iran's military actions against Saudi oil tankers and the issue of the foreign hostages in Lebanon. "Arab diplomatic sources" in Tehran also contended that Syria "demanded" that Iran cease its actions against Saudi interests, according to AL-BAYAN.

Meanwhile, the Kuwaiti paper ARAB TIMES 14 May described current Syrian-Iranian relations as passing through a "difficult phase," and asserted that there have been "several indications" from Damascus pointing to a "real" change in Syria's position vis-a-vis the Gulf war. "Informed sources" cited by the paper expressed fears that the Iranian-Syrian "conflict" could mushroom into a "huge" confrontation between the Hizballah and Amal militias.

In other developments, the Beirut magazine LA REVUE DU LIBAN, citing "informed sources," alleged that Syria has detained approximately 20 Hizballah members in Ba'labakk City on charges of killing a Syrian soldier "last week," clandestine Radio Free Lebanon reported.

Syria-Israel

"Diplomatic sources" in Damascus cited by QNA revealed that Syria "will begin a diplomatic move" toward several Arab and Gulf countries to inform their leaders of the U.S.-Israeli "threats" and of the "possibility" of an Israeli-launched U.S.-backed "aggression" against it in the Golan Heights or in Lebanon's Al-Biqa' Valley.

For Israel's part, Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin termed Syria's "potential" to directly threaten Israel as "real," in a speech to the Labor Party convention, but added that Syria "is far" from attaining "strategic parity" with Israel, IDF radio reported. In the same speech, Rabin claimed that Syria "was involved" in the Rome and Vienna airport attacks as well as in the attempt to place a bomb on an El Al airliner in London. Jeruslaem radio cited Israeli Land Forces Commander General Amir Drori's assertion that the new Syria fortifications in southern Lebanon must be viewed as another Syrian step in its preparations for war, but added that this is a "long process" not being marked by any developments.

Jordan

"Informed sources" cited by the Israeli paper THE JERUSALEM POST asserted that Palestinian pro-Fatah elements "dissatisfied" with the growing Jordanian-Syrian "cooperation" against the PLO "apparently" were behind the recent disturbances at Yarmuk University. The sources described the riots as an "alarm bell" for King Husayn, whose security forces had been successful until now in suppressing all "latent" unrest.

Meanwhile, final examinations at the university were suspended "until further notice," the school's Public and Cultural Relations Department announced, according to Amman television.

In an editorial on the "agonizing" incidents at the university, the Amman paper AL-DUSTUR urged everyone to exercise self-control and to calm the situation, and called on students to "remove" all those in their ranks that support riot and unrest. In another editorial, the Amman paper AL-RA'Y, while expressing profound sorrow for the victims of the fighting, nevertheless insisted that such incidents should not be repeated and declared that it should be a lesson to all those intent on tampering with the country's security or stability.

PLO

An "informed Palestinian source" claimed that Fatah, PFLP, and DFLP representatives currently meeting in Algiers have "overcome huge obstacles" in the way of a proposed "National Unity Conference" scheduled to be held in the Algerian capital during the latter half of Ramadan, KUNA reported. In another development, PLO Political Department head Faruq Qaddumi, in an interview carried by Radio Monte Carlo, reported "progress" in Palestinian-Syrian relations, and predicted that "this misunderstanding" will be overcome soon. Qaddumi, who gave the interview following his talks with the French external relations minister in Paris, asserted that the PLO has "no difference" with Jordan, but only with the United States.

Fatah Central Committee member Salah Khalaf reaffirmed earlier pronouncements of a plan for a "very intensified" increase in "fedayeen" operations inside the "occupied territories," in a statement to the Kuwaiti paper AL-QABAS, cited by KUNA. The Fatah official "categorically" denied that he and Lebanese President Amin al-Jumayyil had discussed the return of Palestinian forces to Lebanon via Juniyah or any other route, during their recent meeting.

Qatar-Bahrain

"Diplomatic sources" in London cited by the Kuwaiti paper AL-WATAN and reported by Tehran radio's Arabic service, disclosed that Bahrain has reinforced its positions on the Harwar islands and along its coast in recent days, and cancelled all military leave. The report also noted Qatari measures against Bahrain including the deportation of Bahraini students to their country. AL-WATAN further claimed that the Fasht al-Dibal Island installations attacked by Qatari aircraft last month belonged to the GCC and monitored ship movements in the Persian Gulf in order to notify them of possible air strikes.

Pakistan-DRA

Pakistan lodged a "strong" protest with Afghanistan over a 10 May Afghan air attack on Domandi area, Baluchistan, in which 1 Afghan refugee was killed and two others were wounded, and for artillery attacks on 13 and 14 May near Parachinar, Khurram Agency and near Tiwar Kotal, respectively, according to Karachi radio.

PLO's Qaddumi Meets With France's Raimond

LD152313 Kuwait KUNA in English 2008 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Paris, May 15 (KUNA) — The Palestine Liberation Organization's chief diplomat, Faruq Qaddumi, emerged from a meeting with French Foreign Minister Jean Bernard Raimond here Thursday to say he sensed no change in France's support for the Palestinian question.

Talking to reporters after the meeting, Qaddumi said, however, the new French Government should be given enough time to study and review (the Middle East) situation. "We have nothing to comment on now," he added.

Qaddumi, head of the PLO Political Department, said his talks with the French minister touched on terrorism "in general terms" and on the efforts the PLO is making to thaw the chill with Syria.

He said the organization was nearing a solution of the misunderstanding with Syria, adding that the PLO was doing all in its power to secure the holding of an Arab summit conference to resolve inter-Arab rifts.

Responding to a KUNA question, the PLO official denied the existence of any dispute with Jordan, stressing that the organization's dispute was with the United States. Which, he said, is the party that should recognize the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination. [sentences as received]

Jordan last February suspended political coordination with the PLO one year after King Husayn and PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat agreed to jointly seek a peaceful settlement of the Palestinian question. He also denied reports that the PLO had a clandestine accord with Lebanese President Amin al-Jumayyil under which the PLO would return to Lebanon. But he said the organization was ready to coordinate with the Lebanese if asked and "we are ready to lend the Lebanese people all the support we can offer because we are with Lebanon's unity and territorial integrity."

The Palestinian official hailed the Algerian call for Palestinian reconciliation which produced current talks in Algiers between the PLO mainstream Fatah and two opposition groups, the Popular and Democratic Fronts for the Liberation of Palestine. He hoped that the Algerian initiative would soon yield tangible results.

Meanwhile, the French External Relations Ministry issued a statement saying Qaddumi was received by Minister Raimond at the former's request "as was the practice with former foreign ministers." Qaddumi's visit here, said the statement, came within the framework of France's relations with the Middle East states under France's indiscriminate policy with all sides.

Qaddumi's repeated requests to meet former external relations minister Roland Dumas during his stay here was rebuffed, however.

Interviewed on Syria, Jordan Ties

JN151854 Paris Radio Monte Carlo in Arabic 1730 GMT 15 May 86

[Interview with Faruq Qaddumi, head of PLO Political Department, by Monte Carlo radio correspondent Nabil Darwish in Paris on 15 May — recorded]

[Text][Nabil Darwish] Faruq Qaddumi, can you brief us on your talks with the French external relations minister?

[Faruq Qaddumi] This is my first meeting with the French external relations minister. It was essential for us to brief him on Middle East developments and our opinion about them as well as the future prospects of a solution to the Middle East crisis. We emphasized the role which France can play as well as the role it has previously played when there were problems and tension in the region.

[Darwish] Did you note any change in French policy after the new majority assumed power?

[Qaddumi] No, we did not note any change in French foreign policy. It is a friendly policy that supports the Palestine question and the Palestinian people's right to self-determination. This is obvious in this policy. However, the new cabinet should be given a chance to study and acquaint itself with the situation. We may pin many hopes on this policy as Palestinians because the French position is important for us in view of the role France played and is playing in international policy.

[Darwish] Your visit comes as there is much talk in Europe and the United States about terrorism. There is also talk about Syria. Have you discussed these subjects?

[Qaddumi] We touched on these subjects, undoubtedly, in a general manner and not in detail. We also talked about Syrian-Palestinian relations and about the progress we have made in our relations with Syria. We are about to remove this misunderstanding. There is no doubt that the PLO is doing its best to boost Arab soldiarity and hold an Arab summit to liquidate all these differences.

[Darwish] Is a Palestinian-Syrian reconciliation imminent?

[Qaddumi] In fact, this matter is under consideration. It is one of the tasks being undertaken by the Palestinian revolution and the PLO.

[Darwish] What about the PLO's differences with Jordan?

[Qaddumi] In my opinion, there is no difference with Jordan, only with the United States. However, may God forgive the brothers in Jordan. They depicted the difference as if it were with them. The party who should recognize the right to self-determination is the United States. Jordan is part of the Arab nation and this nation, which adopted many resolutions and recognized the PLO as the sole legitimate representative, cannot deviate in its stance.

[Darwish] What about the Algerian initiative on the Palestinian national unity?

[Qaddumi] It is a positive initiative that is on its way to realization. We highly appreciate this Algerian initiative and hope that the measures to implement it will be completed by the middle of this month.

Palestinian Faction Talks Overcome 'Huge Obstacles'
LD151909 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 1644 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Tunis, 15 May (KUNA) — An informed Palestinian source today here predicted that meetings, which commenced last evening in the Algerian capital among three prominent Palestinian detachments, would lead to positive results regarding the achievement of Palestinian national unity.

The source told KUNA that the current talks among representatives of Fatah, PFLP, and DFLP were able to overcome huge obstacles in the way of the national unity conference for the Palestinian resistance detachments, which is decided to be held in the Algerian capital in the second half of this month of Ramadan.

In these talks, Fatah is represented by the official in charge of security and information, Hayil 'Abd al-Hamid; PFLP is represented by 'Abd al-Rahim Miluhi [name as heard], member of its Political Bureau; and the DFLP is represented by 'Abu al-Qasim, the member of its Political Bureau.

Salah Khalaf — Abu Iyad — member of Fatah's Central Committee, earlier announced that Fatah, DFLP, Palestinian Communist Party, Arab Liberation Front, and PFLP declared their agreement to the call addressed by President Chadli Bendjedid to the Palestinian resistance detachments to meet in Algeria and to talk together in order to restore their national unity.

He said that the Popular Struggle Front imposed conditions for attending, while the PFLP — the general command and Al-Sa'iqah — did not announce their opinion of President Bendjedid's invitation.

'Allush: No Link To Marks, Spencer Bombings
JN151318 Paris Radio Monte Carlo in Arabic 1200 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Naji 'Allush, secretary general of the Arab Popular Liberation Movement [Harakat al-Tahrir al-Sha'biyah al-'Arabiyah], in Damascus today categorically denied accusations leveled against him on his involvement in the bombings of Marks and Spencer stores in London and Paris. The perpetrator of these bombings — a Tunisian arrested recently in the city of Nancy by the French police — had confessed that a man called Abu Ibrahim had asked him in Baghdad in 1983 and 1984 to plant explosives in the abovementioned stores. Western press circles said Abu Ibrahim is the nom de guerre of Naji 'Allush, who said he did not know the Tunisian suspect and that he had not visited Iraq since late 1982, adding that he has lived continuously in Damascus. He said several members of the Palestinian revolution are called Abu Ibrahim.

Naji 'Allush, who indicated that the accusations against him seriously harm his name and person, categorically denied any connection between him and the so-called Abu Ibrahim, whose name was mentioned in the confessions by Tunisian suspect Habib Mu'ammar, who is currently detained in France.

Norway Indicates Willingness To Cooperate With OPEC

LD121020 Vienna OPECNA in English 0914 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Vienna, 12 May 86 (OPECNA) — The new Norwegian Government today indicated its willingness to cooperate with OPEC in efforts to stabilize the international oil market.

Egil Hille, spokesman for the Norwegian Oil Ministry, told OPECNA today that if OPEC reached an agreement on production and pricing policies which could stabilize the oil market, Norway would consider what it could contribute towards this objective.

Stating that OPEC should come up with 'realistic' proposals, he said a stable oil market was in the interest of the oil development programmes in the Norwegian sector of the North Sea.

He said the government would present its programme to parliament Tuesday, when it would explain its plans for the oil sector.

Analysts have said they expect the new Socialist goverment of Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland to look more favourably on cooperation with OPEC to end the oil price slide, which has damaged the Norwegian economy and triggered the collapse of the previous coalition.

The ministry spokesman who would not commit himself to saying that a new policy involving Norway's attitude to OPEC was being formulated, said he was not aware whether contacts had already been made with OPEC oil ministers.

According to agency reports, new Norwegian oil minister Arne Oien announced Friday that Norway was willing to meet OPEC officials to discuss ways of boosting oil prices.

The new government Sunday announced the devaluation of the Norwegian krone by 12 percent against a trade-weighted basket of foreign currencies as part of a fiscal and monetary policy to offset the impact of declining oil prices.

Prime Minister Brundtland said the devaluation would be followed by 'considerable tightening of both fiscal and credit policies'.

The sharp fall in oil prices is expected to reduce norway's state revenues from the oil sector to 2.17 billion dollars this year from 7.39 billion in 1985.

Norway produces nearly 900,000 b/d from its North Sea wells.

BAHRAIN

Situation With Qatar 'Potentially Explosive'

NC151708 Paris AFP in English 1643 GMT 15 May 86

[By Nabil Jumbert]

[Text] Bahrain, May 15 (AFP) A "potentially explosive" situation has developed between Bahrain and Qatar over the past three weeks, after Qatar seized a group of workers on a disputed Bahraini island and installed artillery and anti-aircraft weapons there, authoritative sources here said on Thursday. No signs of a slackening of tension between the two oil producers are in sight, even though the kidnapped workers — 30 employees of a Dutch company — were freed on Monday after being seized by Qatari helicopters on April 26, the sources said.

The sources said that Qatar had positioned artillery and anti-air defence guns on the square-kilometer (half a square mile) Fasht al-Dibal islet northeast of Qatar which had been elevated above high-tide level in order to install a Bahraini guard post.

Armed forces in Bahrain are under restraint orders, but there is still a possibility of armed clashes between the two countries, which are allies in the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC), they said. The sources said Qatari military airplanes and ships were engaging in "provocations," and that Qatari troops were concentrating along the western coast facing the large Bahraini-held Hawar island, which Qatar also claims. Civilian flight paths to the Qatari capital of Doha also have been changed, the sources said, insisting that this was sign of escalation.

Observers here believe that the statements of concern repeated in the past few days by Bahraini sources reflect both the failure of mediating efforts by other Gulf states, and Bahraini fears that Qatar's seizure of Fasht al-Dubayil becomes a "fait accompli".

With 670 square kilometers (400 square miles) and 380,000 people, Bahrain is said to have a three to one handicap against Qatar in terms of firepower. Qatar, with 250,000 inhabitants and 11,000 square kilometers (6,600 square miles), reportedly has a decisive force of 14 French-made Mirage jet fighters.

GCC mediation efforts, led by Saudi Arabia, have thus far only managed to stop open warfare between its two smallest members, in the most serious internal conflict the council has met since its creation in May 1981. Three Saudi communiques released since the start of the crisis refer only to efforts directing at solving "urgent" matters. The issues have not been specified, and there is no mention of the basic dispute which is who has sovereignty over the islet.

Installations Belonged to GCC

GF160755 Tehran International Service in Arabic 0700 GMT 16 May 86

[Text] The Kuwaiti paper AL-WATAN has reported that the installations attacked by Qatari aircraft last month during the clashes that took place between Qatar and Bahrain on Fasht al-Dibal island belonged to the GCC. AL-WATAN added that the installations — which were built by a Netherlands company — were a center for surveilling ships in the Persian Gulf so as to notify them of possible air attacks.

Citing diplomatic sources in London, AL-WATAN stated that in past days Bahrain has reinforced its positions on the Hawar islands and on the Bahrain coast, and cancelled all leave by military personnel. AL-WATAN stated that Qatar has also adopted a series of measures against Bahrain, including the deportation of Bahraini students to Bahrain and preventing Bahraini boats to fish in the disputed areas.

PDRY

Arab Capitals Participate in Reconciliation

GF151430 Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD in Arabic 14 May 86 pp 1, 8

[Text] Addis Ababa — AL-ITTIHAD has learned that secret contacts are underway among a number of Arab capitals — Tripoli, Damascus, Sanaa, and Algiers — with a view toward finding an acceptable formula to achieve a national reconciliation between the PDRY Government and Chairman 'Ali Nasir Muhammad and his supporters, who are presently residing in these capitals.

Participating in these contacts are some Palestinian organizations, Arab figures acceptable by the two parties — including Nayif Hawatimah, secretary general of the DFLP; 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam, Syrian vice president; and Nadim 'Abd al-Samad, member of the Lebanese Communist Party Political Bureau — and national figures known in Sanaa and Algiers.

The contacts are designed to find solutions acceptable to the two parties for the release of detainees and the return of more than 12,000 Yemenis who fled to Sanaa and other Arab capitals in the wake of the 13 January events.

AL-ITTIHAD has learned that the talks intensified recently, especially after the failure of the Ethiopian Government's efforts to achieve a national reconciliation between the PDRY Government and supporters of Chairman 'Ali Nasir Muhammad during a visit to Ethiopia in late April, by Salih Munassar al-Siyayli, [PDRY] deputy prime minister and minister of interior.

Informed sources in Sanaa told AL-ITTIHAD that, as part of these efforts, YAR President 'Ali 'Abdallah Salih was due to visit the USSR in early May. However, after contacts between the two countries, the visit was postponed until next fall.

[Report on interview with Saudi Second Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Defense and Aviation Amir Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz by Chief Editor 'Uthman al-'Amir; date and place not given]

[Text] Amir Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz, Saudi second deputy prime minister and minister of defense and aviation, said that the Saudi people under the leadership of King Fahd and Crown Prince Amir 'Abdallah are free to act and to buy arms from any country and at any place and time they wish.

Amir Sultan was speaking to Chief Editor 'Uthman al-'Amir. When asked to further clarify his talk about the alternative sources that are available at present, the Saudi defense minister said that these alternatives are the friendly countries in Europe, but he did not mention these countries by name Asked whether he expected the current opposition in the U.S. Congress, Amir Sultan said: Of course we were, unfortunately, expecting such opposition because we are accustomed to strong opposition by the Zionist lobby to any Arab step of this kind. We have been through many similar experiences, but we have strong hopes that President Reagan's administration, which we greatly appreciate, will be able to overcome this opposition.

AL-MAJALLAH asked the Saudi defense minister if he expects President Reagan to succeed in getting the deal through, Amir Sultan said: "This is what the White House spokesman has declared. We are confident that the U.S. Administration is anxious to strengthen ties between the Saudi Arab people and the American people.

When asked about the reasons behind the strong opposition to the deal, Amir Sultan said: "The reasons are well known. There have been persistent Zionist efforts to hinder Saudi-U.S. cooperation. The Congressmen have their own internal reasons, but they must understand that the kingdom's stand always stems from its national interest and Islamic fate. The kingdom's defense needs are necessary for defending its security and safety and maintaining its Arab and Islamic role in defending its people and its Arab and Islamic brethren. [no closing quotes as published] Concluding his statement to AL-MAJALLAH, Amir Sultan, who is regarded as being behind the achievements of the Saudi defense force, which has become an important addition to Arab defense, said that the kingdom will not stop its persistent efforts to strengthen its defense capabilities from all friendly markets.

UAE

Efforts Made To Avoid Radiation Contamination

GF151330 Al-Shariqah AL-KHALIJ in Arabic 15 May 86 pp 1, 21

[Zayid al-Sabuni dispatch]

[Excerpts] Dr 'Abd al-Wahab al-Mihaydib, assistant deputy minister of health for preventive medicine affairs, stated yesterday that the UAE is greatly concerned about radiation contamination following the Chernobyl nuclear reactor incident. He added that the UAE is coordinating with a number of concerned GCC parties to take the appropriate measures to protect its citizens and expatriates.

Al-Mihaydib explained that during previous meetings the Ministry of Health, in coordination with the UAE university and the municipalities' general secretariat, adopted two plans to counter radiation contamination.

First, there is a short-term plan to immediately check foodstuffs imported from both the East and the West. There will be coordination among the GCC states in this regard. Al-Mihaydib said that the required instruments have been defined. They will be available shortly. The instruments include radiation level indicators to monitor the air, populated areas, and imported foodstuffs.

Al-Mihaydib stated that the second plan agreed upon is for the long-term, to face any possible incidents in future. The plan is to purchase a number of radioactivity level indicators to monitor radiation in the air from time to time. Appropriate measures would be taken in the event of any transient radiation contamination.

Kuwaiti Decision To Invest in Third World Praised

NC151404 Paris AFP in English 1342 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, May 15 (AFP) — Kuwait's decision to diversify its foreign investments away from Western banks should generate "great interest" in other Gulf states that have invested most of their surplus funds in the West, a United Arab Emirates daily said Thursday.

"It makes good political and economic sense for an Arab country to invest more in the growth economies of other Third World nations and less in the West," the Dubai-based English language GULF NEWS said in an editorial.

It said Kuwait's move to spread its funds more evenly, recently outlined by Kuwaiti Finance Minister Jasim Muhammad al-Kharafi, "will be watched with great interest, especially by (member-states) of the Arab Gulf Cooperation Council, AGCC."

The council's members, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the UAE, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman, together have foreign investments estimated at 250 billion dollars, mainly in the United States and European banks and financial institutions.

Describing Kuwait as a "pace-setter" in the field of Arab foreign investment, the paper said its announcement indicating the inclusion of Communist countries in its investments shows "an admirably non-aligned posture."

"The freeze imposed by Washington on Libyan assets recently has alerted Arab countries to the need to avoid placing all the eggs in one basket," the GULF NEWS said.

Mr. al-Kharafi disclosed this week that Kuwait, reacting to a U.S. decision to freeze Libyan assets, is now channelling investments toward Communist and Third World countries where its money is "more secure".

Al-Kharafi, in a written response to a member of the National Assembly, said projects were underway to develop investment programs in China, Turkey, India, the Soviet Union and South Korea.

Cairo Paper Hits Reagan Antiterror Policies

PM160823 Cairo AL-AKHBAR in Arabic
12 May 86 pp 3,7

[Jalal al-Din al-Hamamsi article: "U.S. Terrorism Has Become His Favorite Game"]

[Text] I sometimes think that U.S. President Ronald Reagan is no longer able to control his nerves or give the Presidency the respect warranted by the fact that the United States is a superpower.

President Reagan has emerged triumphant from the industrial states' summit conference — or so he imagined — because he managed to get the leaders to accuse a small North African state overlooking the Mediterranean of being the source of all international terrorism. Perhaps this victory has encouraged him to consider committing a new aggression against Libya in an attempt to bring down its leader, having failed to achieve that in the previous aggression. He has even gone further and threatened another Arab state — Syria.

I do not believe that these threats are aimed only at Libya or Syria. They are the beginning of a new policy of raining missiles on every state which exercises its independence and has a will of its own. He has begun by fighting what he calls "international terrorism" but in the future he might use a pretext other than terorism to strike at anyone who disagrees with him or who takes actions contrary to U.S. interests, which Reagan sees as a kind of terrorism.

We have always said that we are against terrorism, which is a cowardly way of murdering civilians without any open confrontation, but we see graver dimensions in Reagan's new policy. His first strike against Libya is, in his view, a precedent which the U.S. Administration could use to punish whoever it thinks should be punished and impose U.S. policies on everyone. It will not be impossible for him to find an excuse or a reason whenever he decides to move his missile-carrying fleets.

It is a return to old policies. Recent history tells us of Britain's movement of its fleets to Egyptian waters and other areas whenever the British Government wanted to terrorize or punish any state.

The first U.S. strike against Libya was supported by the American public but only after the U.S. media prepared the public well to accept it; but now, after sobering up, how do the people feel? I have recently read more public comment — in readers' letters — on Reagan's first action against Libya. The outlook has changed and there is a new trend and some significant views. One such view, for example, is that the aggression against Libya is rejected by educated people, that the aggression makes the American people sick, that we have forgotten that by killing one terrorist we open the way for scores of fighters to take his place, that the aggression against Libya has given the Arabs a strong cause for unity against the United States.

Another such view: I tremble with fear whenever I remember that Reagan has his finger on a button which if pressed would expose the world to a nulcear catastrophe. Who knows, what he might do.

Another such view: My dear America, your policy is disgusting. The strike against Libya has provided the Libyan people with evidence of the truth of Al-Qadhdhafi's charge over the years that the United States is the source of terrorism.

And last but not least, this view: If the U.S. Administration has evidence of a link between Al-Qadhdhafi and terrorism, why not submit it to an international court of justice? The only thing we have proved by attacking Libya is that the United States is better equipped militarily to carry out terrorism.

That is enough. Is that testimony not true and more effective because it comes from the people who are now ruled by President Reagan?

Opposition Leader Demands Parliamentary Elections

[Text] In an interview published today, Fu'ad Siraj al-Din, leader of the Egyptian Neo-Wafd party, the main opposition party in parliament, demanded the dissolution of the People's Assembly and early parliamentary elections in Egypt. He said: the present Egyptian People's Assembly has become the strangest assembly ever in Egypt. Its duty has been confined to applauding the ministers.

Siraj al-Din particularly blames the ministers for making incorrect and even false statements, under the dome of the parliament, about the situation in Egypt. He points out that the utterance of incorrect statements has become one of the basic characteristics of this regime.

Ghali Discusses Gulf War, Palestinian Question

GF151623 Manama WAKH in Arabic 1155 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, 15 May (WAKH) — Dr Butrus Ghali, Egyptian minister of state for foreign affairs today stressed the need to end the Iraq-Iran war and to look for "radical solutions for the Middle East issue, which is actually the Palestinian issue."

In a statement published today in the Kuwaiti newspaper AL-SIYASAH he referred to Iraq's readiness "to hold unconditional direct dialogue and negotiations with Iran and stop the fighting." He reiterated Egypt's support and backing for Iraq in its war proceeding from its stands.

On the Middle East issue, Dr Ghali stated that Egypt does its utmost to ensure success of an international conference on the Middle East held with Palestinian participation. He said: "We believe that without the actual participation of the PLO, under Yasir 'Arafat, there is no hope for a just and comprehensive solution to the Middle East issue." He added that Egypt "recognizes Yasir 'Arafat as chairman of the PLO, the sole and the legitimate representative of the Palestinian people." He indicated that "we do not recognize anything else."

As for Egypt's position on Israel's practices in Southern Lebanon, Dr Ghali stated that "the policy of Egypt toward Lebanon has always been based on supporting everything that ensures the independence and sovereignty of the Lebanese territories." He then mentioned Egypt's withdrawal of its ambassador from Israel in retaliation for its invasion of Lebanon. He indicated that this position is still in force. The Egyptian official then expressed his country's readiness to deal with the Soviet Union in all fields. He said: "We have firm determination to promote cooperation with it to entrench just and comprehensive peace in the region." He pointed out that Egyptian dealings with the Soviet Union are based on the principles of friendship and mutual understanding in such a way that attains the interest of the two peoples and brings good results to our region.

Wali on Steps To Protect Cotton Crop

NC151609 Cairo Domestic Service in Arabic 1400 GMT 15 May 86

[Excerpt] Dr Yusuf Wali, deputy prime minister and minister of agriculture, has stressed that it is necessary for all farmers to be present in their fields while the teams assigned to fight cotton parasites are collecting the parasites' eggs. He called on farmers to step up their efforts, be always alert, and cooperate effectively with the agriculture ministry departments in all the governorates so as to protect the cotton crop. The reason for this is that there are indications of an increase in affected plantations as compared with last year's. Dr Wali's remarks came during his tour of the cotton plantations in the Al-Qalubiyah Governorate today to observe the work for the anti-parasite teams, which went into action today.

[Communique No 2,227 issued by Armed Forces General Command on 15 May 1986]

[Text] In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. Our triumphant forces continue to entrench their victories and fortify their liberated positions, inflicting further losses on the aggressors, thanks to God's help and the men's determination.

The following is a roundup of activities for yesterday evening and today:

1. All day long today the bold helicopter gunships continued to lend splendid and accurate support to our triumphant ground forces while entrenching their new positions. The brave helicopter cavaliers continued their combat missions, which amounted to 165 sorties, during which they directed their deadly rockets at enemy remnants, equipment, and hardware, scoring accurate and destructive hits and inflicting massive losses. Having carried out their duties very precisely and efficiently, the brave cavaliers returned safely and triumphantly to base in God's care and protection. God bless the brave cavaliers for their remarkable effort.

2. The defeated enemy tried to attack our units in their new positions in areas liberated from its filth the day before yesterday in the heroic V Army Corps northern sector. The enemy dispatched two infantry companies for this purpose. Our hero fighters confronted them with their well-known courage and succeeded in destroying the two companies. None of the scoundrels escaped death except the few who fled. Elsewhere in the same sector our patrols seized one 3.5-inch mortar and two radios. God bless the tough men of the heroic V Army Corps.

3. Our valiant forces on the VII Army Corps front continued to pound the scoundrels' positions opposite them with artillery, tanks, and other weapons and managed to acheive the following: five shovels, four vehicles of various types, four infantry positions, one mortar emplacement, three machinegun emplacements, and one heavy-caliber machinegun were destroyed and some enemy soldiers were killed.

4. Our units in the VI Army Corps sector east of the Tigris killed five enemy soldiers, destroyed three infantry positions, one raft, and one bulldozer, and started a fire on the enemy side in the III Army Corps sector east of Al-Basrah.

5. One ammunition dump, one boat, and two infantry positions were destroyed in the IV Army Corps sector east of Maysan. One heavy-caliber machinegun, one ammunition dump, and one infantry position were destroyed in the II Army Corps central sector.

6. The vicious clique's forces shelled the villages of Biyarah and Tawilah with long-range artillery.

Prince Hasan Views Peace Prospects, Palestinians

NC161154 (Clandestine) Radio Free Lebanon in Arabic 1045 GMT 16 May 86

[Text] Jordan's Crown Prince Hasan has denied that there is any peace process in the region at present. In a statement to be published tomorrow in the Lebanese weekly AL-USBU' AL-'ARABI, Crown Prince Hasan said that there is only room to clear the Arab air and prepare for a comprehensive summit to crystallize a strategy that is halfway between the Fes summit and an international conference. Jordan is currently betting on this strategy and is eager for its success. He pointed out that openness to Damascus is the first step on the path. Other steps must be taken toward the international conference, which is the ideal forum to ensure Arab rights and deter Israel's expansionism.

Crown Prince Hasan added: The Palestinians, and their representatives in the PLO, have rejected the idea of autonomy on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, and so has the Arab League. They are calling for their right to self-determination, which necessarily requires Israel's withdrawal from the occupied territory. Israel rejects this under the pretext of security. He further said that it appears that, sooner or later, a compromise must be found between Israel's security and the Palestinian people's right to determine their own future. Our wager, the Crown Prince said, is on a Palestinian state on the West Bank and Gaza, with old Jerusalem as its capital. We demand that Jewish settlements be removed, that facilities be made for the return of refugees to their land, and that they be paid compensation. The international conference should discuss these issues.

AL-DUSTUR Urges Calm

JN160915 Amman AL-DUSTUR in Arabic 16 May 86 p 1

[Editorial: "On the Yarmuk Incidents"]

[Text] We can only express sadness and sorrow as we take pen in hand to write about the agonizing incidents which took place at Yarmuk University yesterday. The victims among our sons and daughters who fell yesterday during the riots which swept over the university, as well as the wounded students and security men, are victims of fanaticism, extremism, intransigence, misbehavior, and the absence of the logic of democratic dialogue. They are also victims of the insistence of a small group of students on applying laws of their own and on attempting to impose their demands on the university through demonstrations, violence, and violation of behavior generally accepted at universities.

The Interior Ministry statement explained the circumstances and concomitants leading to the agonizing incidents on the university campus the day before yesterday. The statement, however, did not of course touch on the roots of these incidents or on the atmosphere allowing the spirit of rebellion to grow and spread among students over the past 2 years.

The situation now requires that everyone set emotions at rest and avoid resorting to upheaval in tackling the results of the incidents. Moreover, students and the university administration need to sincerely review their stands on the basis of frankness, courage, and the ability to admit mistakes.

While the basic question is: Was it inevitable for things to have gotten to such a point, questions on this issue revolve around the limits at which students should stop in expressing their demands and whether students have the right to think they are always right and that the university administration should necessarily respond to these demands without any discussion.

Moreover, the university administration should ask itself a number of questions about the nature of its existing relationship with students and about the method with which it tackled the manifestations of rebellion from the beginning and whether that was the only available method it had.

Joining the relatives of the victims in their sadness and sorrow over the tragic outcome of the Yarmuk University incidents, we can only urge everyone to observe self-control and to calm down the situation at the university so students may resume their studies in a secure and confortable atmosphere free of tension and fear.

We also appeal to our students to listen to their consciences about all that has happened and to learn a lesson and remove from their ranks elements calling for riot and unrest. They are also urged to spread the spirit of forgiveness and reconciliation within the university and to devote themselves to the pursuit of knowledge qualifying them in the future for leading roles in building their dear homeland.

AL-RA'Y: 'Unforgettable Lesson'

[Editorial: "Yarmuk University"]

[Text] What happened at Yarmuk University yesterday is only the bitter fruit of the behavior of those harboring ill will toward this country. The victims who fell are a loss not only to their families but to the Jordanian family as a whole. The final lesson learned from the incident is that playing with fire leads to dire consequences. Thus, what happened must be an unforgettable lesson.

Moreover, it is our duty now to calm emotions and turn over a new leaf so Yarmuk University will return to its stability, which it enjoyed for many years, and so the situation there will return to normal. Undoubtedly, this sacred month of Ramadan is very suitable for calming down because it is the month of resolution, forgiveness, and repentance. Those who have living consciences must take themselves to task, purge themselves, and repent if they discover they have been involved in matters in which they should not have been involved.

It must be said that scraping scabs off old wounds will not be of any use, that what occurred at Yarmuk University was not a triumph for one or a defeat for another but was a tratedy from all aspects, and that we would be wise to benefit from this lesson and bypass the tragedy. Lessons should be remembered but tragedies should not be recalled with the aim of instigating anger and hurting people. While we express our profound sorrow for the loss of our sons and daughters, we urge Yarmuk University students to understand the seriousness of what occurred in terms of the sabotage and anarchy which disturbed their classes and their pursuit of knowledge and which led to painful events which should not have taken place in a thriving educational institution and a secure, stable country.

Jordan, which always takes pride in the love among its sons and the good spirit which permeates relations among its people, both in educational institutions and among various sectors of society, must not allow these irresponsible acts to tarnish its bright image, regardless of causes and pretexts.

What happened at Yarmuk University must not be repeated and should be a lesson to all those trying to tamper with the country's security and stability or to sabotage the country's achievements in various fields.

The month of Ramadan, with its morals and happiness must be a time for ending the sins and errors of repentant ones. It is an occasion for amity and reconciliation among brothers and for the strong hope of restoring calm to Yarmuk University so it will continue educating the new generation with love, trust, and amity.

AL LIWA' on Falashas' Move to West Bank, Gaza

JN141335 Amman AL-LIWA' in Arabic 14 May 86 p 1

[Text] Israeli settlement sources have said that a group of Ethiopian Falasha Jews comprising those who have spent a period of 1-2 years in Israel is currently being organized to move into Jewish settlements in the Gaza and Nabulus areas.

These sources said that the first group of this kind comprising young couples having one child or more actually moved 3 months ago to the settlement of (Newe Daklim) in the Gaza Strip. Nine families, including 25 persons, arrived at this settlement, but three families left because of their dissatisfaction with the circumstances there.

A responsible source at the Israeli Ministry of Immigrant Absorption claimed that the ministry has no intentional policy of transferring the Falasha Jews to Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and that those who are going there are doing so for personal reasons, he said.

Group Claims Responsibility for Jakarta Attacks

NC152027 Paris AFP in English 2008 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Beirut, May 15 (AFP) — An unknown group calling itself the Anti-Imperialist International Brigade Thursday reiterated that it carried out Wednesday's rocket attacks against the U.S. and Japanese embassies in Jakarta to "challenge Reagan's terrorism."

In two typewritten communiques in English sent to a Western news agency here, the group said the purpose of the Jakarta attacks was threefold.

"This operation is the answer to 'anti-terrorist' declaration of the Tokyo summit...," it said referring to the summit which brought together leaders of seven leading western democracies early this month.

"We launch counter-attacks on imperialist state terrorism. We challenge (U.S. President Ronald) Reagan's terrorism," it added.

The group said the operation, which caused no casualties, was a "retaliation against barbaric U.S. raids" against "progressive Arab governments and people".

A third motive, it added, was to "destroy (Japanese Emperor) Hirohito and to boost the popular solidarity of Asian peoples resisting U.S.-Japan imperialist diktat."

'Minutes' of Birri-Junblatt Damascus Meeting Cited

NC151822 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic
1615 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] The CENTRAL NEWS AGENCY cites a prominent political source in West Beirut on the minutes of the recent meeting held in Damascus, which included Syrian Vice President 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam, Ministers Walid Junblatt and Nabih Birri, and officials from the Syrian Social Nationalist Party [SSNP]. The meeting was also attended by Major General Hikmat al-Shihabi and Major General 'Ali al-Duba.

The source reports that Khaddam asked Ministers Birri and Junblatt and the SSNP to take matters firmly in hand and prepare for military battle with the other party. Minister Junblatt asked about the aim and timing of the battle and its main target. Khaddam replied that this was a military measure and that its timing was up to Syria. He said: You have to be ready for any battle. Junblatt replied: We are allies and, as such, there must be coordination on any military step. Khaddam then made a number of observations on Junblatt's policies. Junblatt left the meeting clearly disappointed and decided to go to Paris after a few days so as to stay away from any development in which he might not want to be involved.

At a party meeting held in Beirut, [SSNP official] In'am Ra'd said that the Syrians have yet to make a decision. No green light will be given before knowing which way regional and international developments will go, particularly if Syria is going to strike at a particular Lebanese area without justification or cover, as this will create negative repercussions.

The source adds that another leftist official who attended the Damascus talks has shed light at a meeting with politicians in West Beirut on the reasons behind the presence of security officials at the talks. He said that the collapse of Khaddam's credibility after he failed in his many duties in Lebanon and the internal struggle in Syria are behind the participation of Maj Gen al-Shihabi and Maj Gen al-Duba in the meeting. This same party official added that Syria is convinced that it would be useless to start a battle against the eastern areas and that any attempt at a military resolution will be unsuccessful even if a breakthrough were to be achieved on one of the fronts. This would not bring any political or military gain to Syria and its allies in Lebanon. Thus, the recent meeting in Damascus was an attempt to unite the ranks of Syria's Lebanese allies by telling them to be ready for battle. But, the real reason behind this could be that the Syrian leaders have received a very clear message from Yasir 'Arafat threatening to retaliate for the Ramadan war — this was the camps war that erupted in the month of Ramadan last year — at any day, any hour. It is feared that 'Arafat will pick this year's Ramadan as the date for his expected retaliation.

The political source also tells the CENTRAL NEWS AGENCY that the Damascus meeting dealt with Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad's speech to the Arab lawyers delegations that met in Damascus. The source stresses that this speech reveals Al-Asad's desire to (?send) a certain message to the Chrtistians and some regional and international parties to explain that Damascus is not involved in the Lebanese conflict. Furthermore, his saying that he accepts the amendment of the tripartite agreement is to put the ball in the Lebanese court and to wash his hands of the matter.

Ja'ja' Comments on Christian-Sponsored Plan

NC151748 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic
1415 GMT 15 May 86

[Excerpts] Dr Samir Ja'ja', head of the Lebanese Forces Executive Committee, has said that the final draft of the Christian-sponsored agreement will not be made public until all Christian leaders examine it in accordance with their individual views and propose any modifications they deem appropriate to the items of the working paper prepared by the drafting committee.

In a news conference this afternoon, Dr Ja'ja' said: The cooperation over the past 2 months among Christian leaders is very encouraging. We hope it will develop into concerted Christian action in order to form a common Christian Front.

Dr Ja'ja' added that the draft agreement is for all Christians to express their views. Hence, there will be no need for any other agreement. It is expected that outside parties will attempt to influence some of those involved to take positions contradicting this draft agreement. Dr Ja'ja' said the articles of this agreement are totally unrelated to the tripartite agreement. This one stresses Christian principles and reflects the sociopolitical reality of the Lebanese community, in contrast to the tripartite agreement, which ignores all aspects of this reality, including the aspect of pluralism. I can say that it is an independent agreement, he said.

On the fate of the series of unilateral initiatives taken by the Lebanese Forces, Dr Ja'ja' said: Initiatives have a positive return, even though results may not be immediately apparent. However, they have not yet led to full understanding. We should continue this course.

Asked whether this is the right time to announce a Christian draft agreement, Dr Ja'ja' replied: Internal political dynamics exist and will continue to exist, in spite of the local situation. Indeed, the chaos around us is pressuring us into speeding up an agreement to give Lebanon a better structure.

Asked if this is the final draft, he said: It is a mistake to think that the Christians do not yet have a clear position. He indicated that the Christians have clear views and proposals, and are surer of what they want than ever before. He emphasized that the draft agreement is a result of their perception of the current situation,of how to deal with it while still observing cultural and political pluralism, and of how to translate it into sociopolitical reality.

On the relationship between Lebanon and Syria, Dr Ja'ja' explained that this relationship has been shaped by the governments of the two countries. He said he hoped that Syria would have time for dialogue with the Lebanese parties. However, he declared that he was not optimistic in this regard. He stressed that the date when the draft agreement is announced is not contingent upon the stand taken by anyone else, particularly Hafiz al-Asad.

Reportage on Al-Shar‘ Visits to Iran, Saudi Arabia

Iran Asked To Stop Gulf Ship Hits

GF151548 Dubayy AL-BAYAN in Arabic 15 May 86 pp 1, 7

[Text] Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad has urged his Iranian counterpart ‘Ali Khamene’i to stop military provocations against Gulf installations and ships, particularly those of Saudi Arabia. This came after the Iranian Air Force hit two Saudi oil tankers in 8 days.

Informed Arab sources stated that the surprising visit by Syrian Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar‘ to Tehran focused primarily on Iranian military provocations against Saudi oil tankers and on the foreign hostages in Lebanon.

Arab diplomatic sources in the Iranian capital noted that, in addition to the issue mentioned, the message al-Shar‘ conveyed to the Iranian president dealt with regional and international circumstances affecting Syria as a result of U.S. and Israeli threats.

The sources indicated that Damascus demanded a halt to Iranian operations against Saudi interests. However, the sources did not disclose anything concerning the reply Al-Shar‘ carried back to Damascus. They affirmed that the Iranian president informed the Syrian minister of his country's insistence on continuing the war with Iraq. He expressed readiness to place all [of Iran's] potential at Syria's disposal if it is subjected to any U.S. aggression.

Diplomatic sources in the Iranian capital emphasized that it is difficult to say that these operations would completely stop. They stated that it is premature to say that the Iranian leadership would agree to this step which would affect the strategy of exerting pressure on the region's countries. However, these sources did not rule out that the Iranian leadership would try not to hit Saudi and Gulf tankers during the next period to avoid the serious repercussions which the provocations against Saudi tankers have resulted in.

AL-BAYAN has learned that Al-Shar‘ discussed with the Iranian officials the issue of the foreign hostages, particularly Americans, who are believed to be held by the Hizballah in Lebanon. Neutral diplomatic sources believe that Damascus hopes it will be able to put this "file" under control and release the kidnapped foreigners to stop mounting U.S.-European sentiment on the issue of terrorism, for which Syria is currently being held responsible as was Libya in the past.

Al-Shar‘ arrived in Al-Ta‘if from Tehran yesterday on a surprisingly short visit to Saudi Arabia. Although he did not disclose what went on during his visit to Saudi Arabia, Arab diplomatic sources linked it to the Jordanian monarch's current visit to Baghdad. The sources stated that there are joint Syrian-Jordanian moves to stop the Gulf war, represented in Damascus' efforts with Tehran and Amman's mediation with Baghdad to bring the views of Iraq and Iran closer together.

The Jordanian monarch visited Baghdad and returned to Amman 2 days ago. He held talks with Iraqi President Saddam Husayn on current issues, Arab developments, and the situation along the Iraq-Iran front.

AL-BAYAN has learned that King Husayn briefed the Iraqi president on the outcome of his talks with Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad, who visited Amman last week, and with Husni Mubarak, who made a swift visit to Aqaba 3 days ago. The newspaper has also learned that while King Husayn's efforts to change the Syrian president's stand on the Gulf war did not yield any positive results, Jordanian circles indicated that neither did the Egyptian president's mediation efforts between Jordan and the PLO achieve any tangible success.

A responsible Jordanian source stated that King Husayn's visit to Baghdad, his meeting with President Mubarak, and his talks with President Al-Asad earlier, once again reflect the factors in Jordan's policy of maintaining parallel relations with Damascus, Baghdad, and Cairo.

Ties With Iran in 'Difficult Phase'

GF151554 Kuwait ARAB TIMES in English 14 May 86 p 4

[By Musrafa Abu Libbah]

[Text] Syrian-Iranian relations are currently passing through a difficult phase with question marks hanging over the ties. Syria's Foreign Minister, Faruq al-Shar‘, who began an official visit to Iran yesterday, will find it very difficult to give completely satisfactory answers to the Iranians.

Until now, there have been several indications from Damascus that a real change has taken place in the Syrian position towards the Iraq-Iran war. This change was revealed before the Syrian President's visit to Jordan and seems to have been strengthened after the visit.

Syria was reported to have been preparing for an Arab summit to discuss all affairs, including the Iraq-Iran war.

Political sources said that the Iraqi and Syrian Communist Parties issued statements denouncing the Iranian stand towards the war, and the Syrian communique was published on the front pages of Syrian newspapers.

This was followed on the first day of Ramadan by a condemnation of the Iranian position by the Syrian religious leader. The recent clashes between the pro-Iranian militia of Hizballah and the Syrian Arab forces in Lebanon showed that the disputes between the Iranians and Syrians had reached an advanced stage.

Informed sources expressed fears that this Iranian-Syrian conflict could develop into a huge military confrontation between the Hizballah militia (pro-Iranian) and the Amal militia (pro-Syrian). They stressed that such a confrontation was likely unless Al-Shar's visit to Tehran was successful. Political circles said that Tehran received for the first time a delegation from the Muslim Brotherhood in Syria which was opposed to the Syrian regime. It was reported that the delegation was led by Shaykh Muhammad Sa'id al-Halabi.

Al-Shar' was quoted by Iran radio as saying on his arrival in Tehran that his visit was to discuss the latest developments in the region and particularly the Gulf war.

Arab political sources told Al-SIYASAH newspaper that Al-Shar's visit to Tehran came shortly after Hafiz al-Asad's visit to Jordan and this was a new Syrian move to face the Israeli-US threats. They said these new moves were meant to create a broad Arab base to support Syria in case of aggression against it. Political sources also linked Al-Shar's visit with Iran's reduction in the oil given to Syria as a gift and a request to Syria to pay in advance for oil it purchased.

Sources said the Syrian official would inform the Iranians of the results of talks by the Syrian President with King Husayn of Jordan.

Al-SIYASAH newspaper was told by informed sources that the Syrian President had shown great flexibility towards the Gulf war, and this made Jordanian officials say that the talks were successful although details of the Gulf war were not discussed. Jordan's information minister told newsmen after the talks that they discussed everything and views were identical.

Diplomacy on Lebanon, U.S., Israel To Begin

GF160423 Doha QNA in Arabic 2000 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Damascus, 15 May (QNA) — Diplomatic sources here said today that Syria will begin a diplomatic move toward a number of Arab and Gulf countries to explain its view on the Lebanese issue, the tripartite agreement, and the efforts being made to end the Lebanese impasse.

The sources told the QNA correspondent in Damascus that the move also will inform leaders and kings of Arab countries of the U.S.-Israeli threats and the possibility of Israel launching a U.S.-backed aggression against Syria in the Golan Heights or the Lebanese al-Biqa'.

The sources said the move will include a number of visits by Syrian Vice President 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam to a number of Arab countries. Syrian Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar' will make similar visits. The sources noted that Syria's diplomatic move comes in the framework of its efforts to strengthen Arab solidarity, make positive preparations for an Arab summit conference, and prepare the climate to ensure the success of this summit conference. The sources said that the Syrian foreign minister's current visit to Saudi Arabia and his meeting with the Saudi monarch was in this context.

Klibi Praises Syria, USSR; TASS Comment Cited

JN151337 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic
1115 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Moscow — Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi has affirmed that Syria is the main bastion of steadfastness and confrontation and warned against any aggression against Syria. At his press conference in Moscow after talks with Soviet officials, Klibi said the campaign launched in the West on so-called combating international terrorism is aimed at diverting attention from the Palestine cause.

Klibi praised the positive role played by the USSR on the issue of maintaining the Palestinian people's security and rights, as well as the Soviet stand supporting the Palestinian people's just struggle. Klibi expressed support for the Soviet proposal calling for the withdrawal of U.S. and Soviet military fleets from the Mediterranean in order to make it a sea of peace.

Chedli Klibi and Andrey Gromyko, chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium, during their talks condemned the U.S. aggression against Libya and the campaign of threats launched by the U.S. Administration and Israel against Syria. During the talks, Soviet support for the Arab nation in its struggle against imperialist schemes in the Middle East was reiterated.

TASS warned against preparations carried out by the Zionist enemy to launch aggression against Syria in cooperation with the United States. TASS affirmed that these hostile preparations came after the claims launched by President Ronald Reagan against Syria. In its comment, TASS said it has become certain that the United States supports aggression against Syria because it opposes Syria's independent course in the Arab and international arenas, as well as Syria's firm stand of rejecting separatist capitulatory formulas of settlement in the Middle East in accordance with a U.S.-Israeli scenario.

Al-Asad Addresses Message to Moscow AAPSO Meeting

JN151619 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic
1515 GMT 15 May 86

["Text" of message from President Hafiz al-Asad to 14th session of AAPSO Presidium meeting in Moscow — date not given]

[Text] It pleases me to extend greetings in my name and on behalf of the Syrian Arab people to the 14th session of AAPSO Presidium, which is meeting in Moscow, the capital of the USSR, the supporter of the causes of the peoples of Africa and Asia and the peoples of the world in general and the defender of the causes of freedom, peace, and progress in the world. I would like to take this opportunity to assure you that Syria is determined to exert every effort to strengthen our organization, which has entered its 29th year, out of its belief that the solidarity of our peoples is an urgent necessity because it gives them the ability to overcome the many and diverse challenges they are facing covering the political, economic, and military fields. This is in addition to challenges stemming from the factors of time and nature.

If the solidarity of our peoples takes its full [illegible]se, it will produce the desired results in the form of solution [illegible] the many problems faced by our countries. Imperialist forces are trying to sow discord among our ranks while working diligently to close their own ranks. If these forces, which have plundered our wealth for many years, are uniting on the basis of falsehood in order to continue to plunder and impose their hegemony on us, then it is only right for us, who have a just cause, to close our ranks in order to confront the aggressive, evil forces that are ceaselessly trying to weaken us.

These hostile forces are trying to maintain the current explosive international situation by pursuing the policy of provocations and armed force in their dealings with the other world nations. They are not deterred in this policy by the fact that they are exposing the world to the gravest dangers. We see these forces trying to start fires in different parts of the world and to heighten world tension by their successive provocations and repeated aggressions.

The Middle East has suffered most from imperialist and colonial policies. It is because of these policies that the Arab homeland has been afflicted by the Zionist invasion, which has set up on Arab territory Israel, the ugly embodiment of Zionism and the extension of colonialism, with which the African nations were afflicted before. Some of the African countries have gained independence, others such as the people of Azania and Namibia are still fighting racist regimes, and still others like the African Frontline States are still suffering from the hostility of the racist regime in South Africa.

All nations of the world seek a better life. Such a life is possible only under freedom, justice, equality, and peace, and in the absence of aggression, coercion, exploitation, and occupation. It is for the sake of this better life that we are fighting the forces of imperialism, colonialism, and Zionism, as well as racist regimes, and calling for a nuclear ban, disarmament, and a new world economic order that achieves justice and equality among world nations so that peace will prevail, prosperity will spread, and the dawn of a happy future for all nations will break.

By our effective solidarity, we can play an active role in creating the new world and the cherished happy future. I wish you success in your efforts to strengthen the solidarity of the African and Asian peoples and to serve the causes of our peoples.

AL-BA'TH on 'Precautions' Against 'Treachery'

JN160605 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 0430 GMT 16 May 86

[From the press review]

[Text] Under the headline "Shultz Wants Us Unarmed," AL BA'TH says: U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz has deplored Syria's precautionary defensive measures for facing the U.S.-Israeli coordination. Shultz does not want to leave the Arabs with any weapons. He regards Israel as the only party in the Middle East having the right to possess weapons and all means of strength. While denying Syria its firm, independent position and national will, Shultz opens the U.S. arsenal to the Zionist leaders, who employ U.S. support as a means of escalating aggression on Arabs.

AL-BA'TH adds: If the United States is really concerned about peace in the Middle East, it should know by now who is the threat to peace. We must remind the U.S. secretary of state that we in Syria have always supported sincere international efforts for peace because we do not seek war. However, we do not accept faits accompli or yield our right if the United States rejects ways of promoting just and permanent peace.

AL-BA'TH adds: Lest they forget, we would like to remind Shultz and others of the U.S. and Israeli leaderships of what the leader of our march and the pioneer of Arab struggle, President Hafiz al-Asad, once said, namely, that only Arab decisions will prevail in the Middle East and that Syria will fight 100 more years but will not concede one inch of Arab territory. AL-BA'TH says: It is within Syria's rights to be armed because its fate is to defend Arab destiny and existence. It is Syria's duty to take precuationary measures agaisnt the Zionist-U.S. treachery in order to serve the Syrian people and Arab nation.

Concluding, AL-BA'TH says: We in Arab Syria back all those who care for just, permanent peace. However, we know what we have to do: We must not trust the United States because it is treacherous and grudge-bearing. At the same time, we possess the right and the will to defend our sacred cause and nation. We can only tell George Shultz: If Middle East peace is of concern to the United States, you must accept the fact that Israel is the source of danger and that U.S. support for Israel heightens this danger.

Papers Warn Against 'Imminent' Attack on Syria

LD151011 Kuwait KUNA in English 0840 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, May 15 (KUNA) — Two Kuwaiti dailies Thursday warned against an imminent Israeli attack on Syria, affirming that Israel would not launch such an attack without the United States' blessing.

Daily AL-RA'Y AL-'AMM said Israel got the green light from the United States to launch its military operation against Syria, noting that Tel Aviv "is used to being the major partner in all deals concerning the Middle East".

The paper noted that since the convening of the industrial summit in Tokyo, the Middle East has been living the "atmosphere of war", adding that "this means Israel has taken over the responsibility of implementing some of what has been agreed upon in Tokyo."

The daily expressed concern that the common denominator between Israel and the other seven industrial countries is to launch military operations "without giving any consideration to the legitimacy and principles of international law."

AL-RA'Y charged that current Arab contacts among Cairo and Amman, Amman and Damascus, Baghdad and Amman, "worry the Israelis and make them unhappy about the possibility of an Arab change that might turn the balance of power in the region."

"What concerns Israel at this stage is to keep the region and the relations between the Arab countries in a state of disarray, confusion and imbalance," the daily asserted.

The paper warned that Israel does not only target Lebanon and the Syrian Golan Heights but also include the entire Arab region; therefore the Israeli aggression "is possible at any time and under any pretext."

Meanwhile, the English language daily KUWAIT TIMES said, "For all we know no Israeli aggression on an Arab country can take place without U.S. blessings and no American action against the Arabs comes without Israeli support."

The paper pointed out that "having been left with no peace initiative on the Middle East, it seems, the United States has chosen to hurl threats at Arab countries that are in direct confrontation with Israel," adding that soon after the air raid on Libya, "the U.S. clearly hinted that Syria could be the next target of its wrath."

KUWAIT TIMES also strongly critisized Britain's support to the United States and Israel, saying "British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher took no time in faithfully apprehending President Ronald Reagan's real intentions by expelling three Syrian diplomats". The daily said "Thatcher's intimacy with Reagan and her love for Israel have flourished at the cost of Britain's relations with Arab countries".

The paper recalled that "most Arabs have declared their solidarity with Syria in the event of being attacked by a foreign force". It called on the Arabs to "learn to act as one nation against all aggressors".

Rabin on Syrian Threat, Support for Terrorism

TA151646 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew 1500 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] In his remarks at the Labor Party convention, Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin addressed the matter of the Syrian threat. Syria, he said, is the only country with the potential to directly threaten Israel. It is far from reaching strategic parity with Israel, but we must be on constant alert. Yaron Deqel heard the defense minister's remarks:

[Begin recording] [Deqel] Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin was asked about the Syrian emplacements in Lebanon, and said that Syria is far from reaching a strategic parity with Israel, although we must constantly be on the alert.

[Rabin] Concerning our relations with Syria, we must first and foremost ensure a state of alert and preparedness, to ensure that no escalation occurs and to avoid a mistake.

[Deqel] Continuing, Yitzhaq Rabin noted that the Syrians began establishing these positions in Lebanon in January this year, but that Syrian forces are not deployed in them. The defense minister said: Syria is the only Arab country with the potential to pose a direct threat to Israel.

[Rabin] As far as Israel is concerned, Syria serves as a potential — I stress potential, and no more than that — as the only country that could make a mistake. I believe and hope that this will not occur, that some sort of military confrontation will not develop. Syria is a country that encourages terrorism.

[Deqel] Later Yitzhaq Rabin turned to the subject of Syria and terrorism, revealing that Syria assisted in the attacks in Vienna and Rome, and perhaps even in the attack in Berlin. In addition, and this is known, it assisted in the attempt to attack the El Al plane.

[Rabin] The attempt to attack the El Al plane was the outcome of planning and decisions made by a Syrian security-intelligence body. The decision was not made at the low-echelon level. What worries me is that a highly placed Syrian, though not at the highest level, made the decision. The Syrians do not shoot from the hip, and the plan was not made in a week or 2. This Syrian should have asked himself what would have happened if 100, 200, 300, or 400 El Al passengers had been killed.

[Deqel] There is no evidence, Rabin said, of such an extensive Syrian involvement in an attempt to attack an Israeli target since 1973. In continuation, Minister Rabin emphasized that Israel today has no reason to launch a war against an Arab country.

[Rabin] Israel has no territorial reason to initiate a war. We have nothing to achieve that would justify the painful price of a war.

[Deqel] Yitzhaq Rabin also referred to the arrest of Israelis in the United States and Bermuda connected to the sale of arms to Iran and Iraq. Rabin reiterated that Israel has no connection to these affairs.

[Rabin] The State of Israel has no connection whatsoever to these matters. The authority and ability of any of the Bermuda people or anyone else to sell arms to Iran from Israel is approximately the same as my ability to sell the Empire State Building tomorrow. [end recording]

Gen Drori: Syria Taking Steps To 'Prepare for War'

TA160622 Jerusalem Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 16 May 86

[Text] The commander of the land forces, General Amir Drori, says that the new Syrian fortifications in south Lebanon must be seen as another step by Damascus to prepare for war. Gen Or on Katyusha Firings, Syrian Entrenchment

TA151658 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew 1500 GMT 15 May 86

[Interview with Major General Ori Or, commander of the Northern Command, by correspondent in the north Menahem Horowitz in the Galilee Panhandle "where the katyushas fell" on 15 May — recorded]

[Text] [Horowitz] Gen Or, over the past 12 months sporadic shelling has been directed at the Galilee Panhandle and some shells have inflicted slight injuries. Do you see any way to prevent even one firing incident, or to limit the number of katyusha firings at this part of the country?

[Or] If there were a good solution, such incidents would not occur. But it seems there is as yet no good solution to prevent individual firing incidents. We are doing everything in our power, but evidently in this case someone tried to disrupt the holiday. There have been a few firing incidents, and had there been a solution, this incident could have been prevented.

[Horowitz] Some people have claimed that some of the katyushas have been fired from the Al-Nabatiyah plateau, an area that lies a bit north of the security zone. Can we find a solution to the problem of this enclave, from which the terrorists seem to be able to fire at this area?

[Or] First, I do not know if these katyushas were fired from the Al-Nabatiyah plateau because they could have been fired from other places as well, although this time the evidence points to the Al-Nabatiyah plateau. However, calling it an enclave is not very accurate, as the Al-Nabatiyah plateau is not encircled by Israel. This is not the case. The Al-Nabatiyah area is very densely populated and the firing could have come from there. We returned fire in the direction it came from, but in this case there were complications because these katyushas were apparently fired from launchers that had been stationed there in advance, ready to fire.

[Horowitz] Is anything happening outside the security zone? Has there been any change in the number of hostile elements active there who could have been responsible for the renewed wave of firings?

[Or] There has been no substantial change. The same hostile elements that were active there remain; they include some Shi'ite extremists and the various PLO factions, both Abu Musa [Sa'd Musa Muragha] and 'Arafat supporters. These people can be found north of the security zone, and there are others as well who could have been paid to launch these katyushas for one of these organizations.

[Horowitz] It has been claimed recently that the Syrians are building more and more positions in the Lebanese Al-Biqa'. Does this have any direct or indirect bearing on the firing of katyushas at Israel?

[Or] I cannot say that there is a direct connection between the Syrian entrenchment in Al-Biqa' and the launching of katyushas, because the latter occurred even before the Syrians started establishing positions in Al-Biqa'. Syria's support for terrorism from Lebanon is a long-standing phenomenon. Anywhere the Syrians can use mercenaries, or messengers, to kill people for them, they do so, and this region is very well suited for that purpose, for the reasons I outlined before. As for the Syrian entrenchment, this has to do with our future relations with that country. Right now the katyusha firing is not directly related to the entrenchment activity in the eastern sector.

[Horowitz] But what kind of possible threat, immediate or more long-range, can this activity present for war with Israel?

[Or] I do not think it poses an immediate threat. This activity is part of a Syrian plan to defend the Damascus area in the Lebanese sector. One might legitimately ask why they decided to initiate this activity now and not a year ago, but, regardless, this process prepares the Syrians better for war. The potential of an immediate threat exists, but this has not been preceded by a warning.

[Horowitz] And what is happening on the Golan Heights front?

[Or] It is quiet and there is no indication that the Syrian readiness or alertness is any different from what it was a few weeks ago.

UN Report: No Change in Force Deployment on Golan

TA150738 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew 0722 GMT 16 May 86

[Text] In a report to the UN secretary general, the UN Command on the Golan Heights states that there is no change in the deployment of forces there. The two countries, Israel and Syria, are adhering to all the agreements between them. The UN personnel reached this conclusion from a survey they conducted recently on the Golan. The findings were also relayed to Israel and Syria. Our correspondent in the north, Menahem Horowitz, reports that another review of the situation will be conducted within the next few weeks. As said, there is no change in the deployment of forces, and the two countries are upholding all agreements.

Peres Says Peace With Egypt Top Priority

TA152029 Jerusalem Television Service in Hebrew
1900 GMT 15 May 86

["Excerpt" of Prime Minister Shim'on Peres' address at the second session of the Labor Party Convention at the Tel Aviv Fairgrounds on 15 May — videotaped]

[Text] Our first priority is to strengthen peace with Egypt. Right now the Tabah problem is on the agenda. This problem must be resolved through a joint effort by the two countries in the next few weeks. Once the Tabah problem is resolved, we must open a new chapter in Israeli-Egyptian relations and turn the peace we have achieved into a model and a magnet.

(?We will) strengthen our policy in the territories in a bid to draw a distinction between security-related control and self-rule. We again offer the inhabitants of the territories the option of conducting their own affairs. Although we will not force them to do so, we will tell them that the opportunity is open to them if and when they choose to accept the offer.

We will continue to seek understandings with Jordan, such as those that have been reached thanks to the good services of the United States, until direct negotiations begin to establish a permanent peace between Israel and Jordan and to resolve every aspect of the Palestinian problem.

As for the Syrians, we have no intention of attacking them, and they stand no chance of winning. [applause] This is a lesson drawn from previous wars, which cost a lot of blood but whose results were not flattering to the aggressor. We have suggested that the Syrians accept temporary, partial arrangements with us, and we are prepared to discuss permanent peace with Syria without preconditions.

Defense Ministry Official on Weapons Deals With Iran

TA151017 Tel Aviv MA'ARIV in Hebrew
15 May 86 pp 1, 9

[Report by military correspondent Yosef Walter]

[Text] Israel sold military equipment to the Khomeyni regime in 1982 with the knowledge of the Americans. This was revealed by Reserve Major General Menahem Meron, the outgoing director general of the Defense Ministry, in a special interview to MA'ARIV upon ending his term of duty. He will be replaced as of today by Reserve Major General David 'Ivri.

Referring to the affair of Reserve Brigadier General Bar'am, Mr Meron emphasized that Israel has nothing to do "with such shady transactions."

[Walter] Did we ever sell weapons to Iran?

[Meron] We did so once, approximately 4 years ago, out of national considerations. There were debates in Israel on this issue, but it was decided that Israel would achieve certain objectives through the deal. We informed the Americans about it, but we did not ask for their permission.

[Walter] What type of weapons did we sell them?

[Meron] We sold them spare parts rather than weapons as such. Israel does not sell weapons to Iran. However, were I asked whether this or that kind of Israeli equipment finds its way to Iran via various channels, I would not swear that this is not the case. In principle, however, we do not sell weapons to Iran.

Menahem Meron said that Israel's security exports have increased over the last 3 years and continue to grow. He also said that contrary to the prevailing image, Israel does not sell weapons only to dictators and disreputable countries. Most of the exports are to developed and advanced countries, and we have nothing to be ashamed of in our relations with these countries. Regarding the Pollard affair, Menahem Meron said that the Science Liaison Unit in the Defense Ministry, which employed Jonathan Pollard, was a "historic mistake which has been corrected." He emphasized that this unit was closed down and no longer exists.

Our political correspondent 'Oded Ben-'Ami reports that Kimche conferred in Vienna with Austrian Foreign Affairs Ministry leaders, including Foreign Affairs Minister Fred Sinowatz [as heard], and expressed to them Israel's attitude toward Dr Kurt Waldheim's World War II activities. Lavi Maiden Flight To Take Place on Schedule

TA150826 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English
15 May 86 p 2

[Report by defense correspondent Avi Hoffmann]

[Excerpt] The first flight of the Lavi will take place in September as scheduled — even though we may have to stretch this particular September into 35 days," Moshe Qeret, President of Israel Aircraft Industries [IAI], told THE JERUSALEM POST yesterday. [no opening quotation marks as published] He was responding to reports that there were serious delays in the building of the flight prototype of IAI's billion-dollar baby.

Tension was rising inside the Defence Ministry-controlled company and outside as the date of the Lavi's first flight neared, said Qeret, stressing that it was only a "symbolic" date and that not too much should be made of a possible delay before the complex machine took to the air.

April Consumer Price Index Increases by 3.3 Percent

1500 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] The consumer price index increased by 3.3 percent last month. The Central Bureau of Statistics reports that the increase is mainly due to price increases in clothing and footwear of approximately 13.5 percent; in maintaining an apartment of approximately 10.5 percent, due to an increase in municipal taxes; and in fruit and vegetables of 8.5 percent. Our economics affairs correspondent Me'ir Einstein notes that the economic ministries estimate that the index for May will be 2 percent lower.

Energy and Infrastructure Minister Moshe Shahal told our correspondent Elihu Ben-On that the decrease in fuel and electricity prices will cause a drop of approximately 0.5 percent in the next index. These prices will decrease between 3 and 30 percent tonight at midnight.

In reaction, the Histadrut secretary general said that the index increased at an unusual rate in comparison to previous months, and that this signals a warning to the government not to increase prices under its control in order not to endanger the economic plan. He called on the government not to increase the price of subsidized goods and public transportation fares when the price of fuel is lowered by dozens of percents.

Manufacturers Association Director Arnon Tiberg expressed satisfaction over the fact that the industrial price index had increased only a little. Nevertheless, he noted that manufacturers are less concerned about prices than about the decrease in export profitability, a decrease which has already caused negative trends in the balance of payments.

The Treasury spokesman said in reaction that although it has been years since the April index was so low, in his opinion this index is still high. It shows that the curbing of inflation to levels found in Western countries has yet to be achieved. The Finance Ministry says we should be cautious in two spheres: preventing any deviations from the budget, and preventing wage increases.

Lifting of Subsidies Curbed

TA151715 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew
1600 GMT 15 May 86

[Excerpt] The relatively high consumer price index for April has led the Treasury to decide to moderate the lifting of subsidies. Interviewed by the Voice of Israel, Agriculture Minister Arye Nehamkin said that prices of dairy products will go up by an average of 20 percent, rather than 30 percent; the price of frozen poultry will go up by 7 percent; eggs by 5 percent; and bread by approximately 30 percent. Public transportation fares will not be raised at this stage.

Energy Minister Moshe Shahal announced that the prices of fuel and electricity will go down between 6 and 30 percent, as planned at midnight. The spokesman for the Central Bureau of Statistics has said that if the May consumer price index shows an increase of 1.3 percent or more, salaried workers will receive a cost-of-living raise on 1 July. Our economic affairs correspondent Me'ir Einstein reports that the economic ministries in Jerusalem believe that the May index will increase by 2 percent or even less.

Pro-Fatah Elements Said To Spur Yarmuk Riots

TA160745 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English
16 May 86 pp 1, 20

[Report by Yehuda Litani and Joel Greenberg]

[Excerpt] Yesterday's bloody student riots in Jordan were apparently incited by Palestinian pro-Fatah elements dissatisfied with the growing Jordanian-Syrian cooperation against the PLO. The disturbances may be followed by intensified Jordanian action against Fatah headquarters in Amman, informed sources said.

The sources told THE JERUSALEM POST that yesterday's violence at Yarmuk University in which three students were killed and 18 policemen were injured, was "undoubtedly a surprise and an alarm bell" for King Husayn, whose security forces have until now successfully tamped down all latent unrests. The riots were indicators of deep undercurrents of dissatisfaction in Jordan, the sources said.

EL MOUDJAHID Carries Ibrahimi GDR Dinner Speech

PM141515 Algiers EL MOUDJAHID in French
7 May 86 p 4

[Unattributed report: "Oskar Fischer Praises Algeria's Socioeconomic Achievements" — all quotemarks as published]

[Text] During the dinner given yesterday evening in honor of Dr Ahmed Taleb Ibrahimi, member of the Politburo and minister of foreign affairs, who is paying an official visit to the GDR, GDR Foreign Minister Oskar Fischer delivered a speech in which he expressed satisfaction with the friendship and the quality of relations the two countries have in all spheres. In this connection, Oskar Fischer stressed the new impetus given to these relations by the December 1984 meeting between President Chadli Bendjedid, president of the Republic and secretary general of the FLN Party, and Erich Honecker, general secretary of the SED Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State. The minister said that Dr Ahmed Taleb Ibrahimi's visit was being made in the spirit of that meeting, and he praised Algeria's socioeconomic achievements and the role it is playing in the international community. Turning to the international situation, the GDR foreign minister expressed his country's great anxiety at the tension persisting in the Mediterranean and again stressed the GDR's solidarity with the Libyan people who were the object of aggression perpetrated by the United States. He reaffirmed the GDR's support for all liberation movements struggling for the satisfaction of their legitimate rights to independence.

Oskar Fischer finally expressed his country's concern at the threat posed by the buildup of nuclear means of destruction in the world.

Dr Ahmed Taleb Ibrahimi's Speech

Dr Ahmed Taleb Ibrahimi, member of the Politburo and minister of foreign affairs, delivered a major speech in reply to GDR Foreign Minister Oskar Fischer.

"In the dangerous political and economic context of international relations," Dr Ibrahimi said in his speech, "we find a source of satisfaction in the similarity of our two countries' principled positions on the requirements for world peace and development, and we have reason to be satisfied with the achievements of our bilateral cooperation and the prospects opened up by the complementarity of our national economies and our common desire to derive advantages from our two countries' capabilities and experiences in the development sphere.

"In fact exchanges between our two countries are experiencing an upsurge in the light of clear political guidelines laid down at the highest level, and they are being intensified as a result of frequent meetings within the framework of parties, mass organizations, and governments and through the activities of the joint committee, which has fully demonstrated its effectiveness," he continued.

Turning to relations between Algeria and the GDR, Taleb Ibrahimi said that they "are based on sound foundations and are aimed at performances and achievements which live up to our two peoples' expectations and the determination of our two political leaderships," adding: "I must add a specific reference to the human and cultural dimension of our cooperation. By establishing contact between citizens of our two countries, both here and in Algeria, this multifaceted cooperation has been given an additional vitality which has enriched it with a joint effort producing appreciation and respect.

"In the context of the serious economic crisis, which is having extremely negative effects on the developing countries, thanks to the similarities of their planned development approaches Algeria and the GDR are able to find new areas and new forms of cooperation which guarantee the stability and continued promotion of their exchanges to the two countries' benefit. Indeed, it is important to protect our bilateral cooperation against the erosive effects of this crisis and to find ways and means of enabling it to take on its mission and role fully as the instrument of our peoples' mutual well-being."

With regard to the atmosphere of crisis and tension which characterizes international relations, the minister stressed that "although this crisis and this tension are not sparing any region in the world or any sphere of international relations, it is in the Third World that they are most seriously threatening the most basic human rights and the most elementary principles of coexistence among peoples."

Continuing his speech, Dr Taleb Ibrahimi said that "Algeria, whose nonaligned ethic and policy guide its conduct in the international sphere, is very worried about current trends and is working tirelessly to improve the international atmosphere and to combine efforts to find real solutions to the problems of our time. With regard to the establishment of universal collective security, the reversal of the arms race and the promotion of disarmament, the completion of decolonization, and the establishment of a just and equitable economic order, my country takes full responsibility for its conviction and its pledges.

"It is these same convictions and pledges which form the basis of our condemnation of the aggression perpetrated against the fraternal Libyan people, in whom the Algerian people found comfort and support during the difficult days of the national liberation struggle and with whom they share faith in a peaceful, stable, harmonious, and just Greater Maghreb.

"In this Maghreb, torn by the West Sahara conflict which has been going on for more than 10 years, Algeria is working resolutely for the implementation of the peace plan which Africa, the Nonaligned Movement, and the United Nations have ratified as the method and framework for finding the necessary political solution to this conflict.

"In the Middle East, on the basis of what it learned from its own liberation experience, Algeria is working for the reunification of the Palestinian resistance and the unification of Arab ranks behind it, so that the just and lasting peace advocated by the international community in the form of recognition of the Palestinian people's national rights, including the creation of their own independent state on their land and the evacuation of all occupied Arab territories can be imposed in the framework of an international conference in which the PLO would participate in its capacity as the Palestinian people's sole legitimate representative.

"The same determination motivates my country's action in Africa, which is pursuing its fight to give Namibia real independence, to eradicate apartheid, and to ensure the security and stability of its southern region while mobilizing in the struggle against the critical economic situation caused by the combination of underdevelopment, desertification, drought, and unequal international relations.

"The extremely damaging conflict between Iraq and Iran, both brothers and friends of Algeria, is another source of concern for my country, which from the outset has constantly taken action to try to stop the bloodshed and find a peaceful settlement to the dispute and to establish good-neighborly relations with respect for the two countries' internationally recognized borders.

"I know how much our two countries, in their attachment to the values of peace, freedom, and progress, are united in the defense of sacrosanct principles and the promotion of friendly relations among peoples and cooperation among states.

"I am aware of the importance of the political talks between our two countries' leaderships, and we in Algeria greatly value their positive effect on our bilateral relations and our respective contributions to fulfilling mankind's deep aspirations.

"I am convinced that, like all high-level meetings between Algeria and the GDR, my present visit will give new impetus to the excellent relations we have and will strengthen the friendship, cooperation, and respect between our peoples."

Al-Qadhdhafi Cables Gorbachev on Chernobyl

LD160850 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 0710 GMT 16 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 16 May (JANA) — The brother commander of the Great September Revolution has sent the following cable to the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee:

Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee:

Dear friend, we have lived with you through the catastrophe of the nuclear reactor at Chernobyl in the Ukraine. We appreciate the efforts exerted by the Soviet leadership and the friendly Soviet people to control this dangerous nuclear discharge and to minimize its harm. We cannot but praise highly the Soviet technology which succeeded in controlling this grave incident both scientifically and technologically.

The courage and determination with which the USSR has faced up to this incident and the extraordinary efforts it has made to control this dangerous nuclear discharge have affirmed beyond all doubt the Soviet Union's efficiency and technical capability thereby frustrating the hopes of the gloating imperialists who tried by their lies and deception of world public opinion and of public opinion in their own countries to exaggerate the incident in a manner incompatible with its true scale and the scale of the losses.

I am anxious that our appreciation be conveyed to the comrades and to the friendly Soviet people.

Paris Paper Interviews INF Leader Al-Turabi

PM141041 Paris LE MONDE in French 13 May 86 p 3

[Jean Gueyras dispatch: "Islamic Law is Now an Irreversible Phenomenon"]

[Text] Khartoum — Hasan al-Turabi, leader of the Sudanese Muslim Brotherhood and leader of the Islamic National Front [INF], likes to receive foreign journalists, whom he often wins over by his frankness, which is at times rather abrupt, and his incisive remarks.

Moreover, at present he is one of the few Khartoum politicians who can devote time to the representatives of the international press. Indeed, after being expelled from Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi's government, he is not playing any direct part in the interminable political marathon which has been going on for almost 2 weeks between the leaders of the Al-Ummah Party and the Democratic Unionist Party [DUP] with a view to forming the new government.

The leader of the Muslim Brotherhood, who has accomplished the feat of having 51 members of his group elected to parliament, himself suffered a crushing defeat in the working class district of Al-Sahafah, south of Khartoum — the other candidates standing down in favor of the DUP representative with the aim of crushing the man regarded by everybody, or almost everybody, as one of the symbols of the Numayri era. "That is not entirely true: I am not the only one to have collaborated with the Numayri regime," the Muslim Brotherhood leader said with a wicked smile, stroking his graying beard. "The new head of state so brilliantly elected by the assembly, in other words Ahmad 'Ali al-Mirghani, was a member until the end of the single party founded by the former head of state, and Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi himself was a member of that party's Politburo, albeit for a very short time."

However, Mr al-Turabi did not continue to follow this rather dubious line of defense for too long. He knew that he was one of the former president's right-hand men, first as public prosecutor, then as minister, and finally as personal adviser.

The Truth of the Koran

He also admitted, as he told us 3 years ago, that the Muslim Brotherhood was prepared to defend the regime every time it was threatened. He now added: "And yet we had a completely independent attitude to it. President Numayri finally got rid of us 3 weeks before his fall because, on the basis of information supplied to him by his security services, he thought that we were on the point of overthrowing him."

[Gueyras] Did you intend to do so?

[Al-Turabi] We were mobilizing our forces, but we did not intend to betray him while we were participating in the government at his side. We are not accustomed to doing that. Indeed, we were preparing to part from him to be able to fight him openly from outside. Nonetheless, we wanted to wait for a time until Islamic law had been firmly established in the country. [Al-Turabi ends]

Hasan al-Turabi is, or claims to be, convinced that Islamic law is now "firmly established" in Sudan and that nobody will dare to openly demand its revocation. "People must get used to living with it," he said, stating that during his meeting last Monday with Al-Ummah Party leader Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi and DUP leader Al-Mirghani a general consensus had emerged on the need not to revoke Islamic law until new Islamic legislation is drafted by a group of lawyers and doctors of law. "I repeat that we all agreed to emphasize that there can be no interim period without Islamic law," he said, contradicting those members of the Al-Ummah Party leadership who are talking insistently about an immediate revocation of Islamic law without waiting for a new version of the Shar'iah to be drafted.

In any event, Mr Al-Turabi thinks that this new version ought definitely to include a list of Islamic penalties (amputation, flagellation, stoning and so forth). "It is written in black and white in the Koran and nobody can dispute the fact. There can be no discussion on this subject. Moreover, Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi, who is a religious man, does not dispute this point but simply wants the law to define clearly the point beyond which a theft constitutes a crime punishable by amputation."

In order to convince his interlocutors more effectively that Islamic penalties "are now an irreversible phenomenon in Sudan," Mr al-Turabi recalled that, even after last April's revolution which put an end to the Numayri regime, judges continued and are still continuing to pass sentences of amputation which, however, are not applied for reasons of state. He said that the sentences of flagellation stipulated as punishments for those caught drinking alcohol are carried out, "but with much greater flexibility than in the past."

The Muslim Brotherhood leader said that he did not understand when it was suggested to him that some aspects of Islamic punishments are not appropriate to the modern age and create an unfortunate impression in the West and elsewhere which it would be in the Sudanese interest to remove. He readily admitted that amputations are not pleasant to watch and admitted candidly that he fainted the first time he saw somebody's hand amputated at Kubar prison. "I cannot stand the sight of blood," he said, as if to excuse his weakness, "but there will still be amputations."

Remaining in the Opposition

So, Mr al-Turabi does not think that it was the Shar'iah, on which there is apparently broad consensus in Sudan, which prevented the Muslim Brotherhood from entering the government, but rather the "greed" of the Al-Ummah and DUP members, "who want to have as many positions as possible to distribute among their friends." "In any case," he added without much conviction and by way of consolation, "we are not interested in participating in the government. We think that the best solution is to remain in opposition. Our members are all young, politically aware, and very critical of the existing government. Moreover, who wants to participate in a government in a country whose economic situation borders on disaster?" In other words circumstances are not right. In conclusion, Mr al-Turabi added: "I am not at all optimistic about the future of the coalition which has just been formed. Recent history has taught us that this type of combination has no chance of success."

Does he believe in the possibility of a new military coup if the political and economic situation continues to deteriorate? He replied without hesitation: "You must not rely on us to take part in such a movement, but if the existing coalition does not succeed in improving things and solving the country's economic problems, people will be increasingly frustrated. If the government becomes unstable, there will be a dangerous political vacuum in the country. In that case I would not be surprised if some adventurous officer took advantage of the situation to try to save the country. That has already happened twice in the past. We will do our best to avert such an eventuality, but we cannot guarantee that we will succeed."

U.S., Israel Warned Against Aggression Against Syria

LD161408 Tripoli Domestic Service in Arabic
1327 GMT 16 May 86

[Text] The People's Committee of the People's Foreign Liaison Bureau today issued a statement on the open threats addressed to sister Syria by America and the Zionist enemy. Here is the text:

Within the context of the attack against steadfast Arab forces, and the attempt to hit at revolutionary Arab forces with the objective of subjugating the Arab nation, eliminating the Palestinian cause, imposing capitulationist solutions on it, and consequently achieving the domination of the Arab nation by America and the Zionist enemy, sister Syria, the Syria of steadfastness is subjected to open threats of aggression from America and the Zionist enemy, as all the indications are that preparations for this aggression are taking place. The statements, the acts of propaganda, and the false and slanderous accusation of Syria, let alone the scorn and military preparations carried out by terrorist America, the first enemy of the Arabs, the Zionist enemy and the Atlantic-Western propaganda, clarify the premeditated intention and the aggressive nature of the terrorist American administration, which is strategically allied with the Zionist enemy — which is preparing the means of aggression against Syria and the favorable international conditions for it.

The People's Bureau of the People's Foreign Liaison Bureau, while following the dimensions of the campaign hostile to Syria and the actual preparations for aggression against it, confirms the following:

First, the Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah strongly announces that any aggression against Syria is an aggression against it, and that the battle will not be on the Syrian Arab soil alone, but along the extent of the Arab homeland from the ocean to the Gulf.

Second, the military, economic and struggle capabilities of the Libyan Arab people will be at the disposal of sister Syria, for the confrontation and repulsion of the American-Zionist aggression.

Third, the Great SPLAJ, which yesterdau defeated the Atlantic military aggression means what it says and has a pioneering, pan-Arab struggle experience, calls on the masses, strugglers and revolutionary forces of the Arab nation to be ready and alert in order to confront the aggression, and to shoulder their struggle responsibilities with the Syria of steadfastness and resistance and put an end to the encroachment and the madness of power that moves the terrorist American administration which is strategically allied with the racist Zionist entity in occupied Palestine.

Four, the Great SPLAJ warns the terrorist American administration and the Zionist enemy against any aggression against Syria, and considers aggression against Syria an aggression against the Libyan Arab people, rather, against the Arab nation, and that the battle in confrontation of this aggression will be comprehensive, waged by the Arab masses from the ocean to the Gulf.

Steps Told to Arab Envoys in Response to U.S. Attack

LD151354 Tripoli Domestic Service in Arabic
1230 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] The People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison at noon today summoned the heads of the Arab diplomatic missions accredited to the Great Jamahiriyah and informed them of the following:

Despite the comprehensive international condemnation of the U.S. aggression on the Great Jamahiriyah, the Arabs, within the framework of their league, failed to even convene an emergency summit, and did not adopt any practical measure to answer the aggression and confront the measures taken by the United States and the member-states of the EEC — measures which, as we know, represent a prelude for a new crusading-racist campaign against the Arab nation. The attitude of the Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah on the fateful issues of the Arab nation is principled and firm, and therefore it is inevitable that all should know that Libya, from the beginning, stood against the Gulf war, being among the first [countries in trying to] prevent the war from taking place. Its leader personally made unequalled efforts to prevent the war from taking place or becoming worse.

These efforts were manifested in visits he made to the region and through the letters and envoys he sent, and in his speeches dealing with this tribulation suffered by both the Arab and Islamic nations. Therefore, to use our stance regarding this issue as a pretext is due either to ignorance of this stance, or is an exposed attempt to cover up the silence, defeatism and intrigue which characterize the stance of some countries regarding the U.S.-NATO policy against the Great Jamahiriyah.

Regrettably, the actions taken by the EEC member-states were not confronted by any reaction by the Arabs, who ignored the actual participation of some of these states in the U.S. military aggression and turned a blind eye to the European political support for the aggression, the economic boycott measures and the racist psychological campaigns against the Libyan Arab people and the Arab nation.

Duty dictates that Arab League member-states should take at least the following steps in solidarity with the Great Jamahiriyah:

1. to sever relations with the United States and Britain; 2. to withdraw Arab credits from U.S. banks and from Britain; 3. to reduce the diplomatic missions in the states that reduced the Libyan missions; 4. to counter any boycott measures with similar measures; and 5. to show preparedness by the Arab nation to join in the war in the case of a new aggression against Libya or Syria.

Because of the Arabs' failure until now to take any practical measures to check the U.S.-NATO crusading aggression, we have been daily witnessing cohesion by the West European countries and their subservience to the United States, so much so that some of these countries, particularly Italy, have begun threatening to attack Libya.

We wish to affirm that there is no stronger need or nobler reason for Arab solidarity than the military aggression waged by the world's biggest power with the most sophisticated weapons of devastation it possessed, supported by the Western camp countries collectively against a small country that is a member of the Arab League.

Either the Arabs are able to reply to this aggression with practical steps, some of which we have mentioned above as a minimum, or we will have no alternative but to reconsider our link with the Arab League and seek alliance with a power opposed to the United States.

We will also be forced to change our position toward the Gulf war and ally ourselves in practice with Iran. For logic would then demand that we should ally ourselves with those who stand by you in deed.

JANA Editorial Denies Ties With Red Brigades

LD151611 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1540 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 15 May (JANA) — Informed sources here today refuted the allegation by the Italian newspaper LA REPUBBLICA that the Jamahiriyah had relations with the Red Brigades.

The JANA political affairs editor says in this respect that the Libyan Arab people, which has fought against organized terrorism and still does, strongly rejects the establishment of any relations with or providing of aid to terrorist organizations used by a number of European governments for the furtherance of their political and intelligence purposes while claiming to fight them.

The Western information media, the JANA political affairs editor adds, have been using fabrications and allegations in their campaign against Libya. They have also resorted to false claims which Italian officials and others have categorically denied.

The JANA editor points out that the best reply to the allegations of LA REPUBBLICA can be found in the statement issued by the Italian Minister of the Interior Oscar Luigi Scalfaro denying the existence of any relations between Libya and the Red Brigades organization, which the Italian newspaper has described as revolutionary.

Palestine Usurpation Anniversary Marked 15 May

LD151756 Tripoli JANA in English 1645 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, Ramadan 7, May 15, JAMAHRIIYAH NEWS AGENCY — The Permanent Secretariat of the Arab People's Congress issued a statement marking the usrupation of Palestine on May 15, 1948. The statement said May 15 is upon us again marking the usurpation of Palestine and confirming the extent of the tragedy which befell the Arab nation when the Zionist movement managed with complicity of Britain and the Western states to establish the Zionist entity in the position of the heart of the Arab body and continued to support it.

The Zionist entity today threatens the whole of the Arab homeland and is allied strategically to American imperialism in order to annihilate the Arab nation and destroy its future. The destruction of the Iraqi atomic reactor and the bombing of the cities of Tunis, Tripoli and Banghazi are but land marks in the route of the Zionist death wagon which is aimed at Arab existance.

The liberation of Palestine has thus become linked to the mere existance of Arab nationalism and none are attainable without a true Arab unity, these responsibilities can no longer be intrusted to Arab regimes who can not be exected to achieve them. This has become the responsibility of the masses' and a trust they have to carry out and a responsibility to be borne by the progressive forces who should make the sacrifices.

The American imperialist aggression against the Libyan Arab people have reversed all equations in the region and showed clearly what the struggle for the liberation of Palestine and the establishment of Arab unity it means terrorism in American-Zionist logic thus the historic blunder of the American aggression against Jamahiriyah to put back its nationalist principled role, the result was failure for the aggression and the steadfastness of Jamahiriyah in its leading nationalist stance. [sentence as received]

Today the anniversary of the usurpation of Palestine comes at a time while the Arab nation suffers from incapability at the level of the regimes and that is why the Arab masses and their vital forces are urged to move and escalate the struggle in order to bring the Palestinian cause to the forefront and the priorities to the highest position in terms of the Arab liberation movement and stress that no sacrifice is big enough on the way to its liberation.

[Text] Rabat, May 15. (MAP) — "We are not indifferent to the Sahara conflict (...) and we will do our utmost to contribute to a definite settlement of the problem", said commander Jean Traore, Guinean foreign minister in an interview with L'OPINION daily, organ of the Istiqlal Party (Nationalist).

Commander Traore who was accompanying the Guinean head of state on a three day state visit to Morocco expressed satisfaction at Moroccan-Guinean relations outlining that this visit will undoubtedly give them a new impulse.

Bilateral relations, he said, acquired a new dimension after the setting up of the Guinean-Moroccan Cooperation agency (Aguimo) in 1984 which proved to be a very efficient instrument to boost cooperation.

Evoking the situation in the Mediterranean, Commander Traore said his country was (?solidly) with Libya which is, like Guinea, an African non-aligned developing country.

To settle conflicts and misunderstanding in that fashion (alluding to the U.S. air raid on Tripoli and Banghazi) constitutes a danger for all developing countries, Commander Traore said adding that his country favours dialogue to arms in conflicts settlement.

SPLA Commentary on 'Promises' of Transitional Rulers

EA151316 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in Arabic 1330 GMT 14 May 86

['Political' commentary: "The Transitional Rulers Were Right to Celebrate but..." by Captain (Nikayr Gatjok])

[Excerpts] The transitional rulers were right to celebrate but...it was reported last week that the Military Council had handed over power to a new government 1 year after the uprising. The whole operation was accompanied by an intensified media campaign to the effect that the Military Council had fulfilled its promises, had handed over [power] to its owners and that the Military Council had provided an example that has rarely been seen in the Third World, namely that it had surrendered power to the people within a reasonable time and that the transitional rulers had fulfilled what they had promised, and so on.

Not wishing to be sensitive or emotional, and without wanting to spoil the occasion for the transitional rulers, it is our right and the right of the Sudanese people to ask them one clear and unequivocal question: Have the transitional rulers truly fulfilled their promises? Before answering this question, we must be clear about what they promised to achieve during their period of rule, which has lasted for more than 1 year.

Everyone knows that the transitional government was commissioned to achieve certain duties stipulated in the charter of the national forces for the salvation of the homeland. It was this charter that the Military Council accepted when it took over power in April last year. Those duties were precisely defined. It was thought that their implementation would bring about a real manifestation of true democracy in our homeland. Let us examine the points in the charter to see what has been implemented so that we can pass judgement on whether the transitional rulers have succeeded or failed.

With regard to the transitional constitution, we all know that the country continued to be ruled without a constitution for a period of 6 months when the Military Council refused to rule in accordance with the 1956 Constitution amended in 1964. It formed a committee without the knowledge of the national alliance to formulate the new constitution. The committee continued to work secretly until it came up with the present Constitution which bears no relations to the 1956 Constitution amended in 1964.

In addition to that, it was not well formulated and was about to leave the country in a constitutional vacuum on 26 April 1986 during the first session of the deputies assembly. The deputies got around this problem in a most ridiculous way. To get around it, the lawyers at the first session came up with a laughable definition, namely that it was a session that had been extended from 26th April to 6th May 1986. What kind of tomfoolery is this? The truth of the matter is that the postponement of the assembly session from 26th April to 6 May was the first violation of the Constitution. But that is another topic that we do not want to get tangled up in.

What concerns us here is that the transitional rulers did not commit themselves to the charter. They came up with a Constitution which was completely different from the one they promised, and they promised to rule in accordance with the 1956 Constitution, amended in 1964.

With regard to the September laws, we need not remind anybody that those laws still exist to this day. This is because the transitional rulers were determined not to abolish them. They flagrantly violated the charter and defied it by not abolishing the laws. So much for their promises.

As for the talk of finding a peaceful and democratic solution to end the war, that never occurred to the transitional rulers at any time. Rather, right from the outset, they set about creating internal and eternal movements in a vain attempt to contain and defeat the SPLM/SPLA. They formed an alliance with the warmongers, while at the same time telling the people that they favored a peaceful solution. They expanded the war zone while claiming that they had put into effect a unilateral cease-fire. In addition to this, they blocked the efforts of the national alliance to hold a constitutional conference. So much for the transitional rulers' promise to find a peaceful and democratic solution to the war in the country.

In the economic field, the IMF continued to play about with our national economy. Prices have increased many times over since Numayri's day. This led the trade unions to demand pay raises. A series of strikes followed. So, what happened to the promise the transitional rulers made?

The elections law was one of the worst that the country has witnessed since independence. It dropped the principle, stipulated in the charter, that the modern forces should be represented. It failed to commit itself to the fundamental principle of representation that the number of constituencies should be proportionate to the size of the electorate. The distribution of the graduate constituencies, for example, will remain a source of amusement to any wise or logical person.

At first glance the holding of the election may seem like a big achievement for which the transitional rulers should be praised, but on closer examination this erroneous impression is erased. First, as we have mentioned, the main objective of the transitional period was to bring about a democratic regime by eradicating the vestiges of the May regime and eliminating its criminal legacy of laws, symbols, and other things. Thus, as was made clear in the charter, it was assumed that the elections would be the final stage after accomplishing the other aims of the charter. Second, the charter stipulated the election of a Constituent Assembly. But the Constituent Assembly that emerged did not represent important parts of the country because the elections were only partial ones. Third, the transitional rulers made use of their power to ensure that certain political forces which represent their interests would come to power. This exposes the impartiality they make claim to. In fact, some members of the Military Council accepted nomination in party lists without relinquishing their positions of power.

Therefore, the elections did not achieve the aim intended. Since they did not achieve their aim, we need not have waited a whole year for them to be held. In view of this, it is astonishing to hear all this fuss about the responsibility which has been handed over and the fulfilment of promises. Maybe the whole aim of all this fuss was to throw dust in the eyes so that the transitional rulers cannot be held legally accountable.

Is it not the legitimate right of the hero of this tragic play, the Sudanese citizen, to ask what happened to the slogans of the uprising, who abandoned them and rendered them meaningless?

Eritrean Rebels Claim Gasoline Depot Destroyed

EA141124 (Clandestine) Voice of the Broad Masses of Eritrea in Tigrinya 0400 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Mitsewa [Eritrean port city]: The day before yesterday [12 May] the heroic fighters of the EPLF carried out a successful heavy arms attack on the Agip gasoline depot in Mitsewa town. During the 35-minute shelling, which lasted from 1810 to 1845, direct hits were scored on the target. Twelve tanks full of gasoline were ignited. Underground supplies of gasoline went up in flames. Many of the fully-laden tankers and military vehicles parked in the depot were destroyed. The fire engines that Dergue officials sent to the scene failed to bring the fire under control. The fighters of our heavy arms unit returned to their base without suffering any casualties.

This was the second successful attack in 3 days carried out by the heroic EPLF in Semhar, the area around Mitsewa. During the first attack patriots of the EPLF and people's militia destroyed 15 enemy vehicles in an ambush near Mai Atal, putting 55 WPE soldiers out of action.

Rebels View Motives of Ethiopian Peace Initiative

EA142056 (Clandestine) Radio Halgan in Somali to Somalia 1700 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] A joint statement on the peace initiative in the Horn of Africa has been issued by the Somali opposition forces, Somali National Movement [SNM] and Democratic Front for the Salvation of Somalia [DFSS] following the visit of the Siad Barre delegation to Addis Ababa.

The visit to Addis Ababa by a delegation from the Siad Barre regime on 7 May was widely publicized in the international media. It also caused speculation as to how it would affect the patriotic war being waged by the opposition forces against the anti-people regime of Siad Barre. So, the opposition forces of SNM and DFSS have decided to outline the following points clearly:

1. The Somali opposition forces, SNM and DFSS, point out that the long-standing war in the Horn of Africa is not now between Ethiopia and Somalia but between the Somali opposition forces and the people on the one side and the Siad Barre regime on the other. No one should be confused about the truth. As long as the Siad Barre regime is in power, the people's struggle for justice will always continue.

2. The SNM and DFSS welcome with open arms the establishment of a lasting peace between Somalia and Ethiopia. However, the SNM and DFSS believe that Siad's motives are not in the interest of the peoples of the two countries but are aimed at prolonging his rule.

3. The question one needs to ask at this present moment is: Why is Siad Barre seeking peace with Ethiopia when he has had long-standing feuds with Ethiopia?

4. Siad Barre has not changed his tactics and ploys and does not have the interests of the Somali people at heart when seeking rapprochement with Ethiopia.

If he is genuine in his peace crusade let him first release the thousands of prisoners languishing in his jails. He should also allow the people the right to choose their own leaders. Siad Barre does not have the interests of the Ethiopian masses at heart. The truth is that he is terrified at the strength of the Somali opposition forces, the DFSS and the SNM.

5. The SNM and DFSS would like to point out that the results of fighting between the Somali opposition forces and troops loyal to Siad Barre clearly demonstrate the disorganization that reigns within the Somali Armed Forces.

6. The objective of the Somali opposition forces is to topple the Barre regime and they are pleased at this new chapter in Ethiopian-Somali relations for which they take the credit.

7. When it became evident to Siad Barre that his days were numbered, that all his tricks had been exposed, and that it was impossible to incite the Somali people into a war with Ethiopia, he thought it wise to seek help to crush the opposition forces.

8. Siad Barre's biggest strategy is peace. The arrival of his delegation in Addis Ababa was aimed at driving the Ethiopian Government directly or indirectly into stifling the struggle of the Somali opposition forces. However, we are positive that this will never happen.

9. It is obvious that as long as Siad Barre is in control the internal conflict will continue and his regime will always be shaky. the Somali opposition forces believe that a lasting peace can only be established by two sides or two states whose policies are stable and are capable of bringing prosperity to their peoples.

10. In conclusion, the SNM and DFSS call for final victory against the anti-people regime of Siad Barre for victory and prosperity in the Horn of Africa spearheaded by the opposition forces.

[Text] Brussels — Chama Cha Mapinduzi Chairman Mwalimu Nyerere has once again accused South Africa and the United States of deliberately delaying the independence of Namibia by linking the issue with the presence of Cuban troops in Angola. In a message to the second international conference on Namibia being held in Brussels, Belgium, Mwalimu reiterated that the stand adopted by South Africa and the United States must be openly rejected by all those who cherish the right to self-determination for all peoples and nations.

In the message, which was read on his behalf by Tanzanian Ambassador to Belgium Ndugu Simon Mbilinyi, Mwalimu said that Angola cannot apologize for receiving foreign military support as long as it suffers frequent acts of aggression by the Boers. He said that, like other UN members, Angola has an obligation to ensure that Namibia become independent. Mwalimu expressed optimism that the independence of Namibia will be achieved without further bloodshed, provided all nations of the world exercise their power in defense of Namibia. He called on European peoples and governments to support Africa and all other developing nations in ensuring the implementation of UN Resolution 435.

Government Abandons Nuclear Power Station Project

AB151618 Paris AFP in French 1416 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Libreville, 15 May (AFP) — Gabon has abondoned the plan to establish a nuclear power station on its territory, it was learned from a reliable Gabonese source on Thursday. The accident in Chernobyl "has affected people and it would be psychologically difficult to make people accept such a station in Gabon," this source stated, specifying that the head of state, Mr Omar Bongo, has accepted this idea.

It was recalled that Mr Bongo had asked France for the establishment of a nuclear station during President Francois Mitterrand's visit to Gabon in January 1983. The French Atomic Energy Department (CEA) — through the Societe Sofratone — had studied the possibility of establishing on an experimental basis in Gabon one or several reactors of the type that supply energy to nuclear submarines. In fact, the French nuclear stations of the PWR type (pressurized water) of 900 megawatts (Fessenheim in Alsace) or of 1,300 megawatts (Panuel in Normandie) are out of proportion with Gabon's needs.

In 1985, the highest energy requirement noted for the entire Gabonese territory was about 200 megawatts, the Gabonese Ministry of Energy indicated. The project was then left in suspension and "has not been mentioned again for more than 1 year," a French diplomatic source has affirmed. French Cooperation Minister Michel Aurillac also affirmed during his recent visit to Gabon that this matter was not mentioned during the audience granted him by President Bongo.

But France was not the only country connected with the project because a West German project which provided for the addition of a nuclear research center to the station had also been presented, a Gabonese source indicated.

Whatever the system adopted, the necessary investment would have been such that the cost of electricity of nuclear origin would have been considerably higher than that of hydroelectric energy, Gabonese and Western sources have observed. Electric power production in Gabon is ensured 75 percent by the hydroelectric network and 25 percent by fuel oil- or gas-powered station. According to the Gabonese Ministry of Energy, Gabon consumed 861 million kilowatt-hours of energy in 1985, that is about 50 times less than the network's present capacity. In its development plan, Gabon has provided for the construction of two additional hydroelectric power stations, one of (?100) megawatts at Ngoulmendjm in the Monts de Cristal (in the north Libreville) and the other at Poubara near Franceville (in the west of the country) where two stations are already in operation, a Gabonese source has specified.

Foreign Minister Discusses Economic Program

AB151102 Paris AFP in French 0850 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Kigali, 15 May (AFP) — Rwanda needs 29 billion Rwandan francs (about Fr 2.1 billion) in the next 5 years in order to complete its economic recovery program, Rwandan Foreign Minister Francois Ngarukiyintwali has just disclosed.

During a press conference held in Kigali on Monday, the foreign minister estimated at 125 billion Rwandan francs the cost of the country's priority economic recovery program covering the 1986-90 period, adding that the internal resources and the promised or expected foreign aid was estimated at only 96 billion Rwandan francs. We must find the remaining 29 billion francs, that is a little more than 5 billion francs a year, the foreign minister added. The chances of finding this money are the same as for all the other African countries in our situation: this depends mainly on the response of our partners to whom we will request an additional effort during the entire period of the economic recovery program.

Rwanda, a major coffee exporter whose economy is largely subject to fluctuations in the prices of this product, receives an average of Fr 700 million in foreign aid annually.

They also discussed the place of their two revolutions in the world revolutionary process and the need for an effective establishment of an anti-imperialist solidarity and cooperation between the two governing organs and their mass organizations.

After detailed analysis of the international situation, notably marked by an increase in acts of aggression and state terrorism of international imperialism, the two sides emphasized during their deliberations that the revolutionary struggle undertaken in their respective countries demands an objective alliance with anti-imperialist African countries to resolutely block imperialism, colonialism, neocolonialism, and all forms of hegemonism. [Speech by President Jose Eduardo dos Santos at a dinner in honor of Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, in Luanda on 14 May — recorded]

[Text] Comrade Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, esteemed comrades and friends:

It is with great satisfaction that we welcome Comrade Chairman Yasir 'Arafat and his delegation to our country for the first time today. In him we hail a distinguished freedom fighter, an outstanding revolutionary leader of our era who embodies the unshakable determination and resolve of the oppressed people of Palestine. Our people have long awaited this opportunity directly express all our esteem and admiration for Comrade Yasir 'Arafat, and through him, to his heroic people for the courageous and unselfish manner in which they have been fighting for the liberation of Palestine.

Your heroism and capacity to resist the enemy go down in the annals of modern history as brilliant examples which encourage peoples still suffering under oppression or subject to permanent aggression by imperialism to struggle for their inalienable rights, freedom, and social justice. The Palestinian people have been proving that a people determined to stubbornly and bravely defend their fundamental rights cannot be defeated whatever the power of their enemies and the hardships demanded from them.

Comrades, you have borne the hideous massacres Sabra, Shatila, and others. You have resisted all imperialist ploys and maneuvers designed to divide the Palestinian people and destroy the PLO in order to neutralize their struggle for liberation. We are, therefore, fully convinced that despite the difficult moments you are facing today, time will eventually do justice to the Palestinian people who will be free and masters of their own destiny and thus see the compensation for the enormous efforts and hardships that they have had to endure.

The best children, heroic combatants, and martyrs of the cause of independence and freedom of Palestine have not died in vain. Whether imperialism accepts it or not, your people will create their independent and sovereign state, thus fulfilling their right and most profound aspiration. In this struggle you can always count on the solidarity and sympathy of the Angolan people.

The Angolan people, subjected to colonial oppression for centuries, know too well the price of freedom and cannot but feel solidarity with people still fighting foreign domination. We are in the same trench with all those peoples fighting for a better and more human world, where all may aspire to happiness and fulfill their dreams. The common struggle of our peoples and their respective revolutionary vanguards have forged links of friendship and militant solidarity, and it is our hope that your current visit will serve to further develop and strengthen such links.

Comrade Yasir 'Arafat, despite the distance that separates us, our two peoples are faced with similar situations because they live in areas of great tension where aggressive and expansionist regimes, employing fascist methods, seek to subject or even annihilate, by force of arms, independent states and liberation movements. The Zionist Israeli regime and the racist South African regime cooperate with each other. They are supported by the U.S. administration of Ronald Reagan and seek to impose their policies upon our two peoples through prolonged and unjust wars. The more aggressive the Reagan administration's policy becomes the more aggressive the behavior of these reactionary regimes and the counterrevolutionary forces supported by them will be. For this reason, Israel and South Africa have lately shown themselves to be more arrogant toward our peoples by violating all norms of international law and the UN resolutions.

We could say that, in southern Africa, racist South Africa plays a role similar to that of Israel in the Middle East. The independent countries of southern Africa will continue to demand that the racist South Africans respect their territorial integrity, sovereignty, and the right to choose their own path of economic and social development, and that the Pretoria regime fulfills the UN decisions on Namibian independence and the urgent need to abolish apartheid.

On the prevailing situation in the Middle East, the Government of the People's Republic of Angola once again reaffirms that, in its opinion, the conflict will reach a satisfactory and final solution once the rights of the Palestinian people to the formation of their own independent and sovereign state have been recognised and fulfilled. The Angolan Government reiterates its support for and solidarity with the struggle that the people of Palestine have been waging under the leadership of their combat vanguard, the PLO, either in political, military, or diplomatic fields for the fulfillment of that noble goal. Accordingly, the Angolan Government regards it as of utmost urgency to hold an international conference on the Middle East with the participation, on an equal footing, of the permanent members of the UN Security Council and interested parties, including the PLO, in the search for a negotiated and peaceful solution.

Dear comrades, in conclusion I wish our distinguished guest a pleasant stay in our country. We believe that your stay will undoubtedly contribute to strengthening the friendship between our two peoples. Allow me to express my wishes of happiness and enormous successes to Comrade Yasir 'Arafat and the people of Palestine in the arduous struggle they are waging for their liberation.

The struggle continues! Victory is certain! [applause]

UNITA Rebels To Face Offensive With Modern Weapons

AU151043 Paris AFP in English 1038 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Paris, May 15 (AFP) — Angola's UNITA rebels are equipped with modern weapons and ready to face an expected new offensive by Luanda government forces, the movement's foreign relations secretary Jeremias Chitunda said here Thursday. He refused to confirm reports that Stinger antiaircraft missiles supplied by Washington had reached UNITA, but he said the rebels were "very pleased with the response of the United States to our appeal."

Mr. Chitunda claimed that operations by UNITA (National Union for the Total Independence of Angola) in the north of the country had obliged Luanda to redeploy its forces instead of launching its offensive when expected at the end of the rainy season in May. He also said UNITA did not believe the Soviet Union would be able to give the Angolan authorities more support than it did in the previous offensives of August and September last year. Mr. Chitunda said Luanda's prime concern was to protect its oilfields, diamond mines and coffee plantations which were its chief source of revenue and had enabled it to pay for the estimated 30,000 Cuban soldiers helping in Angola's defence against UNITA and its South African backers.

Mr. Chitunda reiterated UNITA's willingness to talk with Luanda's Marxist government to bring about a national unity government and the departure of foreign troops, and called for international pressure on Luanda to this end. He repeated UNITA warnings that Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda risked reprisals for his hostility towards the rebel movement, and expressed fears that Zambia could be used as a base for attacks on UNITA by Cuban and Soviet forces.

Masire Disappointed Over Lack of Investment

MB141702 Gaborone Domestic Service in English 1610 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] The president, Dr Quett Masire, has expressed disappointment over the level of investment Botswana has attracted since the introduction of the financial assistance policy and the start of the disinvestment campaign in South AFrica. In an interview with the editor of the AFRICA ECONOMIC DIGEST, Mr (Rio Lechelieu), this morning, Dr Masire said that he expected people to come and invest in Botswana, especially when the government is desperate to create jobs for Botswana. He said he had thought people who did not invest in South Africa would come and invest in Botswana, but this has not been happening.

Dr Masire said political stability and rapid economic development in Botswana was the result of the unity of the people of Botswana in forming one indivisible nation. He said another factor was the commitment of Botswana to honest hard work and said, in this regard, the public service and political organizations in Botswana deserve special commendation for providing a good example to all.

The president further said that revenue from mining deposits contributed to the increase in per capita income. However, he said that the statistical increase of the per capita income could be deceiving if at the same time it did not truly reflect the standard of living and quality of life. In recognition of the need to take the revenue from the mines back to the people, said the president, the government was establishing physical and social infrastructure to service the productive sectors.

On measures being taken to increase food self-sufficiency, Dr Masier said the national food strategy had identified areas of concentration for the development of agriculture. Botswana, he said, was looking at irrigated and rain-fed arable agriculture and already a moderate start had been made with the (Panda Matenga) farms.

AB141545 Paris AFP in French 1352 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Moroni, 14 May (AFP) — Fifteen persons sentenced to various prison terms following the coup attempt in March 1985 in the Comoros have been released on parole, official sources have announced in Moroni. Former Minister Warned To Stop 'Meddling'

MB150929 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0859 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Maseru, May 15, SAPA — The Military Council of Lesotho has warned a former minister in the deposed government of Chief Leabua Jonathan to stop meddling in politics or face tough action. A statement issued today by Colonel Sekhobe Letsie, a member of the military council, said Mr Tlake Mokone, a former minister of state, had been touring the constituency of Mpharane in the Mohales Hoek district "trying to sow confusion among the people of that constituency." He called him to his office yesterday and warned him against his political activities. Colonnel Letsie said Mr Mokone had been trying to confuse villagers over elections to village and district committees. He had reminded him that the military council had recently warned Chief Jonathan and a former cabinet minister, Chief Peete Peete, also to stop meddling in politics.

Army Destroys Renamo 'Hideout,' Six Reported Dead

[Text] Units of the Mozambican army stationed in the north central province of Zambezia have destroyed a hideout of the South African-backed MNR bandits, killing six terrorists. The hideout was attacked during recent operations. One terrorist was captured and the army also seized a variety of war materiel.

Renamo Official Rejects Government Contacts

AU151225 Paris AFP in English 1156 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Paris, May 15 (AFP) — Rebels of the Mozambique National Resistance (MNR) fighting the leftist government in Maputo have rejected suggestions of talks with President Samora Machel, who has "lost his power," a senior MNR official said here Thursday. Evo Fernandes, MNR secretary general, said the only meeting his movement would consider to end the fighting which has raged since Mozambican independence from Portugal in 1975 would be with senior Mozambique military leaders who had "clean hands." He told AFP the rebels had not met with representatives of Mr. Machel's Frelimo party. But the guerrilla leader said he had held talks last February in Lisbon with a senior Mozambique military leader, General Bonifacio Gruveta, on the conditions required for opening such discussions.

Mr. Fernandes said his organization received no assistance from foreign sources, denying Mozambican charges that the guerrillas continued to be funded by South Africa despite a 1984 "non-aggression" pact signed by Pretoria and Maputo. He also said that the United States, at South Africa's urging, had asked the Portuguese Government to act as an intermediary between Maputo and the rebels. South Africa has in recent weeks intensified its diplomatic activities in the region, with its Foreign Minister Roelof "Pik" Botha meeting with U.S. African specialist Chester Crocker and with a number of his West European counterparts, including Portugal's Pedro Pires Miranda.

Commentary Says West 'Complacent' Toward Terrorism

MB151417 Maputo in English to Southern Africa 1100 GMT 15 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] The terrorist nature of activity by the South African-sponsored MNR bandits in Mozambique is clear to the Mozambican public. It is also clear to any outsider who cares to examine the evidence. Surprisingly, however, the problem of terrorism in Mozambique is receiving scant attention in the current international outcry against terrorist activities. In this respect, a new film made by a Swedish team may help to increase international public awareness of the problem. The film, which has already been shown on Swedish television, is due to be released in English under the title "Killing a Dream." The film contain stark images of mutilated villagers, wrecked schools and clinics, and places the blame squarely on South Africa. This is an admirable attempt to acquaint people of the West with the ugly face of terrorism in Mozambique.

Unfortunately, however, this film is an exception in Western media coverage of this country. The tendency is to justify terrorism in Mozambique by giving it another name. Western radio stations, for example, rarely use the word terrorism in reference ot MNR activity in Mozambique. When a bomb explodes in a West Berlin discotheque, it is immediately identified as a terrorist bomb, but when a bomb explodes outside a Maputo apartment building it is presumed to have been planted by people described as guerrillas or rebels or dissidents or, blandest of all, the government's political opponents.

It is not only the Western media which is absorbed in this attempt to camouflage terrorism. The terrorists also obtain a veneer of respectability from those governments which allow MNR representatives to operate openly. In the Portuguese capital last month, for example, the MNR announced publicly that it was responsible for a car bomb explosion in Maputo which injured 50 people. That was an act of terrorism by any rational person's definition, but the man who claimed responsibility on behalf of the South African-sponsored MNR is still walking around Lisbon in complete freedom. This complacent attitude toward terrorism in Mozambique is not exclusive to Portugal. Some other Western countires share this reluctance to call terrorism in Mozambique by its real name. For this reason, the new Swedish television documentary is a welcome development. If it is given the wide distribution it deserves in the West, it will make an important contribution toward the enlightenment of public opinion on a matter of real international importance.

SOUTH AFRICA

Text of Speech by P.W. Botha to President's Council

MB151442 Johannesburg Television Service in Afrikaans
1234 GMT 15 May 86

[Text of speech by State President P.W. Botha to the President's Council in the President's Council Chamber in Cape Town — live]

[Text] Mr Chairman and members of the President's Council: the President's Council is a symbol of mutual understanding among peaceloving South Africans. Constitutionally, the President's Council plays a very important role, especially when parliament's three houses do not agree on the contents of proposed legislation. Therefore, I regard it as fitting to take this opportunity to speak on a few matters important to South Africa as a whole.

It has become clear to me, Mr Chairman, that disinformation in the announcement of blatant untruths by enemies of South Africa have created uncertainty and confusion about the government's constitutional intentions. The fact that the government is bound to negotiated reform is being exploited. Confusion is also being promoted by the continued visits by official and unofficial groups from outside, meddling in South Africa's internal affairs. Some of these groups have good intentions but others promote the confusion. The more the meddling continues, the more South Africans will have to resist confusion and misunderstanding. We do not want to divorce ourselves from our foreign relations, but meddling sometimes shows that certain countries seek to conceal their internal problems by meddling in ours. Consequently, there are questions among South Africans who want to live peacefully with one another in this country. Frequently, false impressions are created: that the government remains reluctant to protect and maintain that which is advantageous to the country built up by many generations and that we are on a path toward abdication. I reject these false impressions. We will not allow the spiritual and material inheritance of 300 years to fall into the hands of a revolutionary power clique without a fight. The powers of stability and responsibility are greater than the powers of anarchy. I regard it as necessary to once again clearly spell out the government's position in regard to reform and negotiation.

[Changes to English] I have often stated, Mr Chairman, that the South African Government is committed to peaceful, negotiated political and socioeconomic reform to achieve and maintain stability and progress for the Republic of South Africa. We do what we believe to be just, and not because we are pressurized to do so. It has become something of a cliche to say that whenever a country experiences a period of reform there is bound to be uncertainty. This is often accompanied by doubts concerning the government's ability to effectively administer the process of reform and to guarantee an acceptable solution. This uncertainty and doubt are compounded when a government embarks upon a program of major reform in the most important fields of human activity. Such uncertainty is in our case increased by forces of intimidation, destruction, and revolution. This uncertainty and doubt have, understandably so, induced many people to insist that the government should be specific, not only as regards the direction of the process of reform, but also as regards the contents of the end result. On the other hand, there are people including many who have consistently demanded moving from negotiated change, who demand of the government to issue a declaration if intent.

The argument is used that this should be done so as to provide impetus to the negotiating process, which must result in such meaningful change. However, many of the people in this category, Mr Chairman, as well as others who do not belong to this category, have stated that the government should not be prescriptive in any sense. In addition, they require that the agenda for negotiation should be open-ended. Clearly, there is a real risk that if the government should comply with the request for a declaration of intent, it would stand accused of being prescriptive. To complicate matters even further, some people and institutions have laid down certain preconditions which they require to be met, even before they enter into a process of negotiation. Others subscribe to political models and concepts that cannot be applied to the South African situation in their classical meaning. Some individuals are attempting to gain support for contemptuous disloyalty to our country in other countries.

As far as the government is concerned, Mr Chairman, it remains adamant that it is prepared to negotiate with citizens of South Africa, provided that they do not resort to violence as a means of attaining their political and other goals or call in foreign agencies to support them. The government is not a minor party in the so-called faction fighting. According to the law, the government represents the state. Any reform proposals must be made bearing this in mind. Negotiation of necessity implies that participants should accept that not all their requirements are likely to be met. It implies a willingness to listen, to discuss, and to seek solutions. But these solutions will result from deliberations by South Africans, in the interests of South Africans.

Essentially, it is a process of give and take, during which people are required on the one hand to scale down their demands, and on the other, to be lenient when required to make concessions to satisfy reasonable demands. It is in this spirit that the government approaches the process of negotiation, and I want to appeal to all who have made this choice for peaceful and constitutional change to display a similar disposition.

Having said this, I am constrained to decline requests to be specific about the end product, precisely because it must be a product of negotiation. We are at present dealing in parliament with a number of measures which are the result of such negotiation. I referred to these measures during my opening address in parliament, as well as during the discussions on the budget vote of the state president. I personally, Mr Chairman, and my government, have gone very far to meet the legitimate demands of various South African communities. But excessive demand can very easily lead to excessive reaction. I am not at the disposal of people who make such excessive demands. Consequently, in the interests of South Africa and our various population groups, I want to spell out emphatically certain important principles which are not negotiable.

First, whatever negotiated solutions we can produce will have to be implemented by parliament, since negotiated reform must be implemented constitutionally. This includes the possibility of general elections, or a referendum, or more referendums, in the case of drastic deviations from already accepted policies. Second, the government subscribes to certain fundamental norms and values by which it will be guided throughout the process of negotiation, in the belief that a negotiated settlement is only possible within the parameters of these norms and values. It will also be guided by these norms and values while it continues to govern the country as a civilized state.

These norms and values include the following, which will have to be entrenched in any new dispensation. First, the realization of the democratic ideal, since it is the government's accepted principle that only democratic institutions can meet the demands of justice and fairness. This means that a democratic dispensation of government which must accommodate the legitimate political aspirations of all South African communities must be designed and implemented. Such a dispensation must take cognizance of and reflect the multicultural nature of the South African society, and must provide for visible and effective protection of minority groups, and the rights against domination and for self-determination for such groups and communities. South Africa is a country of minorities and a multicultural society. Its diversity is a fact that must be accepted.

The government is committed to devise such democratic solutions in cooperation with South Africans who are also committed to peaceful and democratic solutions and who reject violence as a means of achieving political goals. In this respect, it is the government's conviction that only purposeful broadening of democracy of the South African society at large and accompanying socioeconomic reform can ensure lasting peace and stability.

In the second instance, adherence ... [changes thought] the second principle, adherence to Christian values and civilized norms, with recognition and protection of freedom of faith and worship. This principle is a cornerstone of our existence as a civilized state. The third principle: maintenance of the sovereignty and the integrity the Republic of South Africa. This requires well-disciplined and suitably equipped security forces. It means that South Africa must be able to protect the integrity of its borders, as well as to defend its people against internationally organized terrorism and to maintain law and order. Nobody in these days must underestimate our determination in this regard. As a regional power in southern Africa, this is our indisputable duty.

The fourth principle is the sanctity and indivisibility of law and the just application thereof, the independence of the judiciary, and the equality of all under the law. The fifth principle: liberty as a cornerstone of true democracy, which must manifest itself on different levels, first, on the personal and individual level, which also implies respect for and the protection of the human dignity, life, and property of all. Second, liberty on the group and community level, which implies respect for and the promotion and protection of the right to self-determination of population groups and peoples. And third, liberty on the state and national level, to safeguard the integrity and freedom of the country and to secure the protection of our citizens in the application of civilized standards of justice, order, and security. True democracy, Mr Chairman, for the Republic of South Africa and all its peoples individually and collectively, must recognise each of these components of freedom, since the absence of such recognition will diminish, not increase, the freedom of our peoples. And the sixth principle: furtherance of private enterprise and effective competition as well as confidence in our economy. And the seventh principle: elimination of discrimination implying selection or unfavorable treatment or judicial action on the basis of race, cultural affiliation, or religious conviction.

[Changes to Afrikaans] Mr Chairman, with an eye toward these requirements, which are not negotiable in peaceful negotiation and coexistence, I announce that I want to form a national council. I said in my proposal that the aim of this council would be to give an opportunity for participation in the planning and preparation of a new constitutional dispensation, to give interim participation to black South Africans in the process of government, and to promote healthy relations between, and the right to human dignity and freedom, of all. The bill which will make this council possible has been drawn up and ready, and in a few days it will be published for comment by the responsible minis-ter before it is presented to parliament for discussion.

I want to call on all responsible South Africans now to assist the government with balance and great responsibility, to place and keep South Africa on the road of progress, stability, and security. This can only occur on the road of constitutional action. Racialism from whichever side cannot contribute anything. But I would be neglecting my responsibility if I did not make it clear that the government is determined to maintain order. People of violence should take note that if they do not stop their violence, they will find themselves facing the full power at the state's command, which has not in any way been exerted to the fullest yet. Let there be no misunderstanding about that.

It is my deepest wish that senseless violence should now end. I call on the media to be helpful in this regard. There is no reason for panic, but there is reason for responsible action. South Africa is much more than those who are so recklessly playing with its most important interests. Let us all consider our next step. Let us ensure orderly coexistence. And let us build a new South Africa. I thank you.

ASSOCOM Welcomes Remarks

MB151700 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1656 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 15, SAPA — ASSOCOM [Association of Chambers of Commerce] has welcomed the "many encouraging aspects" contained in the speech of the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, in regard to the imminent introduction of draft legislation concerning the introduction of a national statutory council. ASSCOM said it welcomed the re-affirmation to political, social and economic reform, the entrenchment of certain fundamental norms, removal of racial discrimination, furtherance of competition and the private enterprise system, the sanctity and indivisibility of the law and its equal application to all peoples and the independence of the judiciary.

"The association awaits with interest details of the draft bill to be tabled and reiterates its willingness to render whatever assistance it can in negotiations towards a new constitutional dispensation to include all race groups. We also welcome the fact that the draft bill will be available for public comment before being tabled in parliament, as this will facilitate inputs from a broad cross section of South African society as part of the consultative process," ASSOCOM said.

Eglin Disappointed

MB151929 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1926 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 15, SAPA — The state president's statement to the President's Council today that a bill would be introduced to give blacks an interim say in governmental processes was "diappointing to say the least," the leader of the Progressive Federal Party, Mr Colin Eglin, said tonight. Commenting in Cape Town on Mr P.W. Botha's address earlier today, he said this was because there was "an urgent need to get negotiations going on a new constitution. The state president failed to take the one step that would unlock the door to real negotiation, namely to release Nelson Mandela." What South Africa needed was not words but bold imaginative action to get out of the impasse it was in, Mr Eglin said.

FCI on Commitment to Democracy

[Text] The Federated Chamber of Industries [FCI] has reacted to the state president's speech in the President's Council this afternoon. In a statement released in Johannesburg, the FCI says it welcomes the state president's renewed commitment to the basic tenets of democracy and human rights as the touchstone of a new constitutional dispensation for the country. It also supports the announcement that comment will be invited on the draft bill introducing the national council before the bill is submitted to parliament. This procedure should ensure the widest possible participation in the new negotiation forum, it said.

Radio Commentary

MB160630 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 0545 GMT 16 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] It is stating the obvious to say that the national political debate has grown increasingly confused in recent months. This has been due partly to the normal uncertainties and apprehensions that emerge during a period of fundamental reform. But to a considerable degree it has been due also to purposeful disinformation from extremist factions at both ends of the political spectrum. The country has been witnessing among some of these groups a reckless disregard of constitutional processes and even of truth itself, and an apparent belief that the time is ripe for them to impose their programmes on South Africa.

In this situation the state president has acted timeously — with a warning specifically for the disinformation campaigners — in setting out his government's basic principles and goals during his address to the President's Council yesterday. The government was not on a road to abdication, he said. And it was not going to allow the spiritual and material legacy of 300 years simply to fall into the hands of a revolutionary power clique. Further, the fundamental parameters of reform — the non-negotiables in the process of change — have been set out clearly. Reform itself — the process of broadening democracy and socio-economic advancement for all South Africans — is essential for lasting peace and stability.

But the realisation of that goal requires the participants to abide by certain principles. The first being that any change must come about by constitutional means. It is fanciful to imagine that from the disorganised welter of extra-parliamentary disputation and pressures can possibly emerge a coherent programme of democratic reform. It is more than fanciful, it is dangerous; if anything, characterises the most active of the extra-parliamentary poltical movements it is their readiness to resort to violence to promote their aims and silence their opponents. Thus the first non-negotiable is that constitutional change will be implemented by parliament, and that where such change deviates sharply from present policy it should be approved by the voters in an election or referendum.

In addition, in a multicultural society like South Africa the democratic principle must of necessity meet the legitimate aspirations of all the communities. Protection for minorities is not an ideological concept; it is a prerequisite for democracy to survive in this country. As such it is an inherent condition in any approach to constitutional reform on democratic lines — as Christian civilised values and norms, national integrity, the sanctity of the law, free enterprise and rejection of discrimination are inherent conditions. Those who reject this course — who would operate outside these reform parameters — should be in no doubt about where they stand today. Those pursuing the path of violence, says Mr Botha, will inevitably have to face the full force of the state. Up to now the potential of that force has barely been tapped.

Commentary: Blacks Must 'Stand Up and Be Counted'

MB151209 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 0545 GMT 15 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] It is clear that South Africa's constitutional development has now reach the point at which ordinary black people and their leaders are going have to stand up and be counted. Political convictions will have to be spelled out openly. In this year of historic reforms, the choice can no longer be postponed. It lies between wholehearted participation in the process of negotiating a democratic system or support for revolution on behalf of a Marxist ideology. That choice, a prominent government minister Mr F.W. De Klerk has stated, confronts every black individual as much as it does every white voter. He will have to decide between evolution and revolution and the future of the black community itself will depend on the answer, on how it reacts to the invitation to participate on the basis of fair dealing in a nondiscriminatory society.

There is no time left for fence sitting. Even in the most skeptical minds there can no longer be any doubt that the government of this country is sincere about creating a democratic dispensation negotiated by all groups in an undivided South Africa. The large number of far-reaching legislative changes being made in the present parliamentary session, scrapping decade-old discriminatory practices and providing equal opportunities in all spheres, is itself proof of that. So is the continuing progress in building structures for joint political decision-making as evidenced by the plan announced this week for second-tier provincial authorities. But providing structures for political participation up to second-tier government is about as far as the authorities are able to go in the present situation. If there is one thing all have agreed on, it is that unilateral action, even if it is preceded by negotiations behind the scenes, is not the way to achieve the final and most important breakthrough.

That breakthrough is the devising of a system of joint decision-making at the highest level of national government and if it is to be a genuinely fair and democratic system it can be achieved only through negotiation among the leaders of all groups in South Africa. It is true that many black community leaders who wish to take part in the process of building a democratic dispensation have been afraid to do so because of militant intimidation. Not only leaders but followers in the democratic camp have been cowed into silence by the murderous vendettas waged by radical movements.

The authorities, therefore, also have a responsibility. The democratic idea can grow at and thrive in the black community only in a social climate of law and order. Only where it is made possible for effective law enforcement to be applied can the democratically inclined — those who reject violence as a political instrument — speak their minds openly. But when that condition is met, it still remains for the black people to decide where they stand and to act accordingly. It is known that there is widespread hostility to the so-called comrades and their ideological masters, and support for efforts to impose law and order. That sentiment will have to find overt expression. Beyond that it will have to be transformed into an act of commitment if the negotiated democratic dispensation which all profess to want is to materialize. The black community in South Africa has reached a watershed in determining its future and a choice will have to be made.

Government 'Commitment to Reform' Praised

MB150938 Johannesburg International Service in English 0630 GMT 15 May 86

[Station commentary: "Reform in South Africa"]

[Text] This week two significant announcements were made which demonstrate the commitment to reform in South Africa: a plan for involving blacks in second-tier government and the publishing of a bill which will give blacks full property rights. Together with other reforms announced in the past few weeks, these two measures add up to very substantial progress along the road of political and constitutional change in South Africa.

In this short space of time, the pass laws have been scrapped, influx control has been abolished, all South Africans have equal citizenship, they will have the same identity documents, blacks will become involved in second-tier government, and they will be able to acquire property on exactly the same basis as whites. These far-reaching moves not only free blacks from the hated pass laws and influx control, but give them permanence in greater South Africa outside the independent and self-governing black states with the same home ownership rights as whites.

These reforms highlight the fact that South Africa does not have a homogenous population, but is a country of minorities — 13 of them, which all insist on their own self-determination. At the same time there is acknowledgment of the interdependence existing between them and the need for coresponsibility to deal with this. The reforms taking place in the country are aimed at extending democratic rights and freedoms to all communities while ensuring that there will be no domination of one group over any of the others. In its quest for seeking a more just and equitable system of government for its various peoples, South Africa is determined to avoid the mistakes made repeatedly in the rest of Africa — that is, to accommodate rather than ignore the question of minority groups and their right to self-determination.

National Party-AWB 'Showdown' Looming

MB151343 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1338 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Pietersburg, May 15, SAPA — A huge political showdown is looming here as the National Party continues to plan its May 22 rally, despite threates from the militant right wing Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging (AWB) [Afrikaner Resistance Movement] to disrupt the meeting. The AWB succeeded in completely wrecking a meeting in Brits, addressed by the Deputy Minister for Information Mr Louis Nel, recently.

The Pietersburg meeting is to be addressed by Foreign Minister Mr Pik Botha and the local MP, Mr Snyman, who will chair the meeting, has made it clear that a repeat performance will not be tolerated. He refused to comment further on the matter.

In a speech last night, the AWB leader, Mr Eugene Terreblanche, told 800 cheering supporters: "Mr Botha will not be speaking in Pietersburg — I will ...." He also unfolded a master plan to gain control of the Transvaal and the Free State at the polls, in order to restore the two Boer republics for "the Afrikaner volk." But he said the right could no longer afford to have two political parties, and urged the Conservative Party and the Herstigte Nasionale Party [Reformed National Party] to join hands. Mr Terreblanche also warned that that AWB might have to step in and claim the Afrikaners' territory by force, if political structures collapsed during a possible revolution in South Africa. May new members were signed up by the AWB after the meeting, and it is clear that the movement enjoys considerable support in the northern Transvaal.

Nel Tours East London 'Problem Areas' 15 May

MB151632 Johannesburg Television Service in Afrikaans 1545 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] The deputy minister of information, Mr Louis Nel, says Parliament will have to ensure that security forces have enough power to fight radicals. Mr Nel visited various problem areas in East London today to gather information and to talk to leaders and black people in black unrest areas. Mr Nel flew over the (Meads) squatter camp in an Air Force heLicopter where more than 10,000 squatters are housed. People are living in tents while permanent housing is being provided. Mr Nel also paid a visit to Duncan village where he learned about the living conditions of its inhabitants. Mr Nel said he was assured of the residents' wil-lingness to maintain order in the area.

[Begin Nel video] My impression is that it is clear revolutionary elements in South Africa are trying to disrupt the lives of various black communities, that they are against any development by the state, or links with government and moderate blacks. My impression is also that it is clear that the government and police should act against those rrevolutionary elements who want to destroy the communities and that it be necessary that the police and security forces get powers from parliament to act effectively. UCASA Urges Black Provincial Representation

[Text] Pretoria, May 15, SAPA — The state president should "ensure adequate" black representation on the new second tier of government, the president of the Urban Councils Association of South Africa [UCASA] said in a statement released in Pretoria today. Mr S.I.P. Kgame said the president should consult with all existing political organizations without excluding any group for genuine broad participation of blacks in the decision-making process.

Mr Kgane cautiously welcomed the new dispensation but warned that the system of government-appointed representatives would "not expand democracy but will in fact be resisted because it removes popularly elected members of the provisional councils." UCASA hoped that more blacks would be encouraged to play a meaningful role in the control and administration of their local areas by participating in the black local authorities. He also hoped that extra funds from the new system would be available to be used to "correct the neglect of the past for which the development boards were responsible when they maladministered black affairs."

EPG, ANC Expected To Confer in Lusaka

MB151324 Umtata Capital Radio in English 1300 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] The crew of the Eminent Persons Group [EPG] is expected to meet with ANC President Oliver Tambo in Lusaka next week. As Howard Barrell reports, the news comes as the EPG wraps up its current tour of South Africa.

[Barrell] According to reports reaching the Zimbabwean capital, Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda announced next Wednesday's meeting at a press conference in Lusaka today. But an ANC official spokesman said the movement had not yet been approached for a meeting on Wednesday with the Commonwealth group. The ANC would, however, agree to such a meeting, he said. It has become clear in recent weeks that the ANC is somewhat suspicious of the manner in which the Commonwealth group has been working. Last week, the ANC said that as far as it was concerned, there was no role for the Commonwealth group in arranging a process towards negotiation between the ANC and the government.

Minister To Investigate Detention of UDF Members

MB150656 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2227 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Grahamstown, May 14, SAPA — Minister of Law and Order Mr Louis le Grange has undertaken to investigate the detention in Port Alfred of several people, including Mr Gugile Nkwinti and his wife Mrs Koleka Nkwinti, according to Mr E.K. Moorcroft, PFP [Progressive Federal Party] MP Albany. "He has also assured me he will let me know as soon as he has results," added Mr Moorcroft today.

The detentions were made in a police crime-prevention operation which took place in the early hours of yesterday morning. The pre-dawn raid also followed various unrest-related incidents, including the necklace death in Port Alfred. A community spokesman today told reporters that a total of 21 people had been detained in the raid. Lieutenant Colonel Gerrie van Rooyen, SAP liaison officer for the eastern Cape, was not able to confirm the number of arrests made but said tonight that several people had been detained in terms of Section 50 of the Internal Security Act. Although he did not have all the names of those detained available tonight, he confirmed that the Nkwintis had been arrested.

White Collar Unions Told To Take 'Harder Line'

MB151200 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1043 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 15, SAPA — White collar municipal trade unions should adopt a harder line and be prepared to use all forms of industrial action insead of meek acceptance in cases where the interests of their members are affected, the director-general of the Department of Manpower, Dr P.J. van Der Merwe, said today. Addressing the Institute of Municipal Personnel Practitioners seminar in Johannesburg, he said the "responsible" unions representing white collar workers had become powerless because they had accepted increasing state control. The result was apathy among members, with the majority of Johannesburg's members indicating they would not belong to a union if they were given the choice. Only those who made use of services such as group assurance and personal loans were interested in membership.

Unions representing white collar municipal trade unionism were not allowed to strike and the state prescribed the maximum salary increase for which they could negotiate. The relevant question was whether these registered "responsible" unions in fact qualified under the real definition of trade unions, Dr van der Merwe said. This meant being independent of employers in negotiating, regarding collective bargaining and members' interests as a major function and being prepared to be militant by using industrial action.

Seven Reported Dead in KwaNdebele Violence

MB151356 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1351 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Siyabuswa, May 15, SAPA — Seven people have died in the KwaNdebele riots the past two days, a government spokesman said in Siyabuswa today. Only one of them died as a result of police action, he said, however, while two were wounded by police. Damage estimated at over R4m was caused by what some termed "the popular revolt against independence" in Weldevrede, Waterval, Klipplatdrift, Kwaggafontein, and Tweefontein. A total of 41 businesses, nine houses, and 10 vehicles were destroyed, the spokesman said.

"KwaNdebele cabinet and ibandla lamakhosi (tribal chiefs) have held discussions regarding a motion put forward recently in the KwaNdebele legislative assembly to approve the existence of the Imbokotho cultural organisation, but no decision has yet been taken," he said. The Imbokotho "vigilantes" -- headed by Chief Minister Mr Simon Skosana — have been accused of assaulting and killing Ndebeles who opposed "independence." "At present the situation is calm and under control," the spokesman said. Police were however continuing their patrols.

SADF Reportedly Ransacks Soweto School

MB151521 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1509 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 15, SAPA — The Immaculata (Holy Cross) High School in Diepkloof, Soweto, was last night "ransacked" by about 300 members of the South African Defence Force, the principal Sister Therese said today. A spokesman for the SADF said the could not comment until he received a telex containing the allegations. Sister Therese said the soliders, accompanied by four black policemen, arrived at the school in about 10 trucks at 11pm. They broke into her office, took away some signs and documents and left a sjambok on her desk, she said. She said they then forced open the locks of each classroom. "They ransacked all the cupboards and left everything in a mess. They stole six intercoms. They left some literature behind, giving a number where we could get police protection," she said.

Police Assault Students Meeting in Rocklands

MB151551 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1546 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 15, SAPA — Police charged pupils attending a meeting at Rocklands Senior Secondary School in Mitchell's Plain today and beat them with quirts. One child was reported to have collapsed and to have been taken to hospital. According to residents and pupils, seven police vans entered the school grounds while pupils from seven schools were attending a meeting addressed by community leader, Mr Johnny Issel. "We were holding the meeting inside the school when the police came," a pupil said. "The pupils were leaving the building when the police charged us without warning us or telling us to disperse. One boy who ran away from the crowd was caught and severely beaten," the pupil said.

A housewife said a boy who was sjambokked by eight policemen collapsed near her home and was taken to hospital by teachers. The woman said two vans chased the boy in the schoolgrounds. "They cut him off. Eight policemen jumped out and started hitting the boy with their sjamboks. He ran into one of the vans. They followed him and hit until he ran outside. He ran towards my home, collapsed and tried to crawl away before he fainted," she said. The pupils at the meeting were from Rocklands, Tafelsig, Spinedale, Mondale, Beacon Hill, Glendale, and Portlands Senior Secondary Schools.

Lieutenant Attie Laubscher, a police liaison officer, said quirts were used to disperse people at the school after a group failed to disperse. He said the warning was given at 10.30am after an illegal gathering, freedom songs had been sung, "black power" salutes given and a police vehicle stoned. Two people — aged 19 and 21 — were taken away for questioning. Police said one was a law student from the University of the Western Cape and the other was a pupil. By 12.30pm no injuries had been reported. Police said pupils at Manenberg Senior Secondary School dispersed after being warned to do so at 11.40am today after yellow pages directories were set alight.

Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report]

Zolani Arson Attack

"The home of one of the Zolani residents who recently sought a Supreme Court interdict restraining 16 other residents in the township 'from operating as vigilantes' was subjectd to an arson attack early yesterday morning," Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English on 13 May reports on page 2. There were also at least three similar attacks on Zolani community leaders. "According to residents, it is believed the attacks were revenge-motivated as a 'vigilante' had been 'set alight' about 10pm on Sunday."

Police 'Burst Into' Clinic

"Plainclothes police armed with shotguns burst into the Sacla clinic in Crossroads yesterday while the Crossroads Executive Committee and medical staff were meeting to discuss the closure of the clinic on Monday last week," another report on the same page says. Police are reported to have searched the clinic and then left without giving any reason for the search. Police say they entered the clinic after an armed man was seen in the area.

Hendrickse 'Furious' Over Bulldozing

"Labour Party leader the Rev Allan Hendrickse yesterday threatened to obstruct bulldozers sent by a Uitenhage City Council official to destory the shacks of service-payment defaulters in a colored emrgency camp," the CAPE TIMES reports on page 4. Hendrickse said he was " 'furious with the insensitivity of the department which would appear to be more concerned about debt collecting than the volatile situation that might erupt in the area.' "

CAPE TIMES on EPG

In an editorial on page 6, the CAPE TIMES says the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group (EPG) "is now playing a serious role as honest broker in the South African conflict. Discreet as they are, the appear to mean business." Going by "previous form," it is likely President Botha "will stall for time, displaying sufficient interest in the EPG's proposals to warrant that body's reporting back to the Commonwealth premiers in favourable terms in June. But the issue cannot be put off indefinitely." "The country is sliding into a condition of siege, internally and externally, as confidence ebbs and the sanctions lobby advances. The EPG's mission represents another last-minute opportunity for South Africa to turn away from violence and counter-violence and to seek a peaceful solution. Let it not be thrown away."

Malan on ECC

"South Africa could not allow organisations like the End Conscription Campaign (ECC) to break down the country's ability to fight communism, the Minister of Defence, General Magnus Malan, said yesterday," Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 14 May reports on page 4. Malan told members of the House of Representatives that he was "encouraged" by their determination "to fight off the communist onslaught" and said "attempts were being made to gain control of the youth and everyone had a duty to make sure this did not happen."

Conservative MPs Speak in Parliament

"The government was promoting the cause of revolutionaries in South Africa as if it were following a handbook, Dr Fredie Hartzenberg (CP [Conservative Party], Lichtenberg) said in the Constitutional Development and Planning Budget debate," another report on the same page says. Hartzenberg told the House of Assembly that "instead of financially assisting those areas where there had been no black unrest, it had put millions of rands into those districts where violence and revolution was prevalent." The paper also notes that another CP MP, Jan Hoon, told the House of Assembly that "the SABC had become a propaganda arm of the National Party" and "SATV had in various incidents made concerted efforts to put the Conservative Party in a bad light."

Further on Ministers' Comments

In other reports on ministers' comments in parliament, THE CITIZEN notes that Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange said "hand-grenades were issued to policemen patrolling townships on a selective basis and only in extraordinary circumstances," and that the police "had not received any specific complaints about non-Whites making inflammatory speeches directed against whites." Education and Development Aid Minister Gerrit Viljoen declined to comment on whether he or his deputy had been consulted on the banning of the Congress of South African Students and Constitutional Development and Planning Minister Chris Heunis said "residents of Lawaaikamp near George, who could not provide their own homes would not be allowed to remain."

CITIZEN on Reforms

Commenting on recent reforms, including the granting of freehold rights to blacks, the scrapping of the development boards, the pass laws, and influx control, and the replacement of the provincial council system, in an editorial on page 6, THE CITIZEN says "the far-reaching moves that affect Blacks are to be welcomed unreservedly, since they not only free them from the pass laws and influx control but give them permanence as citizens, with the same home ownership rights as Whites. Unfortunately, the radicals have dismissed most of the changes as insignificant, though they are the most vital yet introduced under reform." Turning to the new provincial government system, the paper says that while it is "not completely comfortable with this constitutional development," "the fact that other races can be appointed to the executive committees suggests the system will be multiracial, and to the extent that all races can have a say in provincial matters, it is a most worthwhile development." While there are many reforms still to be made and blacks "have still to be given their rightful place in the political dispensation," "what has been and is being done constitutes a radical departure from the situation as it was and South Africa will never be the same."

Advertising Campaign Ignored by Whites

"The Government's 'This Is the Reality' advertisement campaign mounted after the State President opened Parliament in January was read by 45 percent and missed or ignored by 55 percent of urban White South Africans," the paper reports on page 8. An Omnicheck poll of 1,306 whites found that of those who had read the advertisement, 46 percent reacted positively, 21 percent negatively, and 33 percent said they were neutral. More men than women said they had read the advertisement, but there was little difference on the basis of language, with 47 percent of the Afrikaans speakers and 43 percent of the English speakers saying they had read it.

PFP Provincial Leader on Backlash

"The leader of the Progressive Federal Party [PFP] opposition in the Transvaal Provincial Council, Mr Douglas Gibson, yesterday called on the State to 'shoot those who must be shot' to put and end to violence. By this he meant 'all people' who resorted to violence, Mr Gibson said during a no-confidence debate in which he expressed shock about the government's apparent fear of White backlash," the paper reports on the same page. Gibson also "called on the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr Pik Botha, to opt out of the Government and lead a new political realignment in South Africa."

Parliamentary 'Reform' Session

"With only 28 working days to the end of the first 1986 sitting of Parliament, 22 bills still being considered by standing committees inclade many of the major reform measures," Brian Stuart writes on page 10. "In addition, Bills to bring about the new provincial bodies, to establish a joint Natal-KwaZulu administrative body, and to restore South African citizenship for Blacks have not yet been tabled and published." The National Party will hold its federal congress between the first and second sittings of parliament to discuss the Seperate Amenities and Group Areas Acts and many factors "point to a busy 'reform' session of Parliament which it resumes in August. Blacks' rights will enjoy priority in many of the measures."

Scrapping of Group Areas Recommended

"The total scrapping of the Group Areas Act will 'create tremendous job opportunities and offer stability to the nation,' says the report of a House of Delegates committee," the paper reports on page 12. The committee recommended that the act be scrapped in its entirety or, if this is not possible, that at least agricultural land be exempted from its provisions.

Hotel Profits Plunge

"The hotel industry's profits plunged by a massive R61.5 million to an overall loss of R1.7 million last year, compared with the previous year's aggregate profits of R59,5 million," THE CITIZEN reports on page 15. However, "hoteliers and related sectors remain confident of a recovery." The largest decreases occurred in the Witwatersrand, the Garden Route and Little Karoo, and the Cape Peninsula.

Unrest in Seshego

"Post primary schooling ground to a halt in Seshego yesterday when pupils fled from South African Defence Force troops and Lebowa police," Johannesburg SOWETAN in English on 14 May reports on page 2. "Tension has gripped the trouble-torn Seshego township where the army moved in on Monday night in at least 12 trucks. Police are patrolling the streets and eight youths arrested on Monday are due to appear in court this morning."

Blacks Oppose Statutory Councils

"Blacks would not serve on any Government-proposed national statutory councils to discuss the country's future unless the Tricameral Parliament was scrapped, said KwaZulu's Minister of Works, Chief Simon Gumede, this week," the paper reports on page 3. Gumede told the KwaZulu legislative assembly that blacks would not approve of any council which could mean the perpetuation of "white minority power."

SOWETAN on Reforms

In its editorial on page 4, the SOWETAN discusses the reforms being introduced by the government "one after another," noting that it is "a terrible pity" that reforms such as the abolition of the pass laws and the granting of freehold rights to blacks "should fall on deaf ears. The climate, we fear, is just not suitable for these miraculous changes from a once intransigent ruling class. The regime has come to see rather belatedly that the evil, that is the very centre of an unworkable apartheid system, should be dismantled albeit piecemeal." The days for "evolutionary reform have passed. There are just too many young people who have turned deaf against anything that today's government may try to normalise in South Africa." Even the scrapping of the Group Areas and Population Registration Acts "may not satisfy angry voices which are now urgently calling for the removal of everything associated with the suffering and evils of the past."

'Focus' on Pick'n'Pay Strike

In the "Focus" column on the same page, Sam Mabe reviews the Pick'n'Pay strike, noting: "A unique feature of this strike is that from beginning to end, police were not involved and it was resolved round the negotiating table. If police could keep out of other industrial disputes, the country's labour relations could change drastically."

Lekoa Council Seats Filled

"Two of the seats left vacant in the Lekoa Town Council at the height of the Vaal anti-rent increases protest almost two years ago have been filled," the SOWETAN reports on page 5. "A spokesman for the Lekoa Town Council yesterday confirmed that the two councillors were returned unopposed in their wards when the council invited nominations for the 12 vacant wards."

Passport for Namibian Bishop

"Windhoek's 'Government of National Unity' has denied it has been withholding a passport from Namibia's Roman Catholic Church head, Bishop Boniface Hausiku," another report on the same page says. Mines Minister Andreas Shipanga said the government had approved a passport for the bishop, who has been an "outspoken opponent of the new administration since it was installed by South Africa in June last year," 3 weeks ago.

Catholics Oppose SWAPO Support

The SOWETAN reports on page 7 that a group of about 200 South African Catholics have sent a letter to the Vatican, "complaining that some Catholic Church leaders in this country seemed to favour a take-over of Namibia by the South West Africa People's Organisation." They have asked the Vatican to "investigate 'contradictions' in the teaching of the Catholic Church in this country and that of Archbishop Denis Hurley of Durban."

16 June Holiday Urged

Another report on the same page says that National Education Crisis Committee Convenor Vusi Khanyile told representatives of the National African Chamber of Commerce, the Greater Soweto Chamber of Commerce and Industries, the Johannesburg Chamber of Commerce, and the Johannesburg Afrikaans Chamber of Commerce that "June 16 should be declared a national youth day and recognised as a paid holiday" in memory of the 1976 Soweto student uprising. Khanyile said " 'education cannot be the exclusive responsibility of 16 and 17-year-olds (as was the case since 1976), but is the responsibility of everyone in this country to strive for a suitable education in South Africa.' "

'Workers Diary'

In his "Workers' Diary" on the same page, Len Maseko reports that "a new union representing about 10,000 workers in the Department of Telecommunications is to be launched in Soweto this weekend." Maseko also reports that the Industrial Court has ruled that 42 members of the General and Allied Workers Union, who were dismissed by Success Pack (PTY) Limited after they were involved in a work stoppage over wage demands, are to be reinstated.

Democrats' 'Squeeze' on RSA

Johannesburg THE STAR in English for 14 May carries a frontpage report from Washington by Neil Lurseen that "liberal Democrats in the U.S. Congress, concerned by an apparent collapse of the anti-apartheid sanctions effort this year, have prepared new plans to tighten the international economic squeeze on South Africa." The bill "appears to be an attempt to force through sanctions that will toughen the existing presidential sanctions but not be so extreme as to be rejected by moderates. Sources believe it may try to resurrect a proposed ban on U.S. landing rights for SA aircraft and stop the flow of energy materials between the countries."

Rightwing Gathering

"There are strong indications that South Africa's major right-wing political parties and oraganisations are going to join forces in the near future. THE STAR has learnt that the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging (AWB) [Afrikaner Resistance Movement], the Conservative Party (CP), the Herstigte Nasionale Party

(HNP) [Reformed National Party], and the Afrikanervolkswag (AWV) [Afrikaner National Guard] are to hold a mass meeting in Pretoria on May 31," a report on page 3 says. "Asked if any detail has been worked out with a view to future co-operation, well-placed sources said: 'You can draw your own conclusions.' "

CP Denial of Bomb Attacks

"The Conservative Party [CP] has strongly denied that right-wing groups were responsible for recent petrol bomb attacks in Alexandra and Pretoria," a report on page 4 says. "An SABC-TV report of the attacks in April, which implicated right-wingers, was a 'deliberate lie to bring rightists under suspicion,' said Mr Jan Hoon, (CP Kuruman) during the Broadcasting Amendment Bill debate " in parliament.

De Klerk on Black-White Cooperation

A report on page 7 says Minister of National Education F.W. de Klerk told students at the Rand Afrikaans University "that blacks and whites today faced a crucial choice between co-operation and chaos;'the National Party has already chosen. We want to negotiate. We have opened the door to the conference table. If black people take it up with faith, there will be more doors opened to them. The future of the black man will be measured by his reaction to this offer. Blacks must choose between revolution or evolution. Blacks and whites must choose between wanting everything or sharing everything.' "

Farmers To Decide on Fence

"Steelpoort farmers will be taken to the electrified security fence along the Limpopo border before the end of the month to decide whether they want a similar fence between them and Lebowa," an article on page 8 reports. "Farmers told THE STAR last week that they would need a fence of about 25 km — from Burgesfort to the main entrance to Sekhukhuneland." One farmer said the situation at Steelpoort was " 'as quiet as a landmine.' " Farmworkers, demanding wages of R5 a day, were staying away from work on several farms.

CP Member on White Resistance

"The Government must not underestimate white resistance to its policies, the leader of the Conservative Party in the Transvaal Provincial Council has warned," another page 8 repor states. Dr Servass Latsky told the council that the government "should take action against people such as the Reverend Desmond Tutu, Mrs Winnie Mandela — 'with her necklace and matches speech' — and Dr Beyers Naude of the South African Council of Churches." "Whites, Dr Latsky hinted, would strike back against an integrated government."

White Trip to Alexandra

A report on page 9 of THE STAR says the Johannesburg Democratic Action Committee has organized a trip for whites into Alexandra township this weekend where they will have an opportunity to meet local community leaders. The trip forms part of the United Democratic Front's " 'call to whites' " campaign which has already held three major meetings in and around Johannesburg.

STAR on Second-Tier Government

"The serious mistake the Government makes in its proposed system of second-tier government is to extend its centralised empire instead of devolving power downwards so decisions can be taken closer to the people affected by them. The country needs more democracy, not more rule from above, and especially not by proclamation," THE STAR says in an editorial on page 14. "That provincial executives can include all race groups should have been encouraging, but if the members are Government appointees, they cannot expect to be regarded as representatives of anyone except the Government." "The package that Mr Heunis presented this week may have been an attempt to add definition to the amorphousness of future lower-tier government, but there is a long way to go before the public can fully understand — let alone support — what is being planned in its name."

Editorial on Black Freehold Rights

Another editorial says that "finally, after promises and prevarication, black people will be getting full freehold property rights in the land of their birth." "History will judge all of white South Africa harshly for refusing this basic right to the majority of the country's inhabitants for so long. Now this wrong has been redressed and the Government and private enterprise can get down to the urgent business of finding the land and building the houses to make home-owning a reality."

Scrapping Land Act Urged

"If the Government is serious about wanting to combine freedom of movement with orderly urbanisation, then it must do more than just scrap the pass laws. It must scrap the land act as well," Allister Sparks writes on the editorial page. "It is one of the White South Africa's pet sociological theories about blacks that they can survive better without money in rural areas." "In fact, like the poor everywhere blacks know that they can scrape a living better in the cities, where there is always a chance of a job, where there are opportunities in the informal sector, and where in the last resort there is more money and food around to beg, borrow or steal from others. If the scrapping of the pass system is not negated by continuing it in another guise, then an alternative must be created for these people. Which is where the Land Act comes in. Pressure should be taken off the cities by allowing blacks to buy and settle on the large areas of farmland that are under-utilised. Eleven million blacks occupy 13 percent of South Africa's land area, while 56,000 white farmers occupy 71 percent. It is a crazy disproportion."

Possible Government Economic Measures

"Lower interest rates have failed to stimulate the South African economy and despite various short-term solutions more economists and businessmen believe that only an improvement of political perceptions can lead to a long-term recovery," a report on page 16 says. "This follows the government's reassessment of its economic policy as it is evident that the incentives provided by the Budget have not succeeded in reintroducing the necessary confidence in the economy. A spokesman for the Treasury said the monthly policy meeting on Monday had failed to decide both this month and last month on what further stimulatory measures should be introduced. He said it was likely the measures would be on the expenditure side and not revenue."

Inflation Eases

"Inflation, as measured by the Producer Price Index (PPI) eased further in March to a year-on-year rate of 19.6 percent from 20.78 percent in February," Gerald Prosalendis reports on the front page of Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English on 14 May. "Although the annual figure is still unacceptably high, the monthly rate of increase has slowed significantly from 1.6 percent betweeen January and February to zero between February and March. And this could signal further drops in both the PPI and the Consumer Price Index (CPI) — the official measure of inflation — in coming months."

Mayor Does Not Accept Suspension

"Suspended Soweto Mayor Ephraim Tshabalala said last night he would not accept that he had been suspended, in his absence, by his own council until he was properly informed about it," Dominque Gilbert reports on the same page.

Transvaal Plan for Stayaways

Beulah Brown also reports on the front page that commerce and industry in the northen Transvaal had drawn up a "contingency plan" in case of a mass stayaway by black workers. "Industries in the region have split into seven categories and agreed to share workers, should shortages occur."

Canadian Wheat

"The Wheat Board has accepted a tender for the supply of 50,000 tons of wheat from the Canadian Wheat Board," Linda Ensor reports on page 2. "The prices are about 7 percent higher than those realised before the Chernobyl nuclear disaster."

Falling Rand

"The rand's 55-point fall to yesterday's close of $0.4685 refelcts the chilly mood that is sweeping throughout the foreign exchange market," Alan Sendzul reports on page 3. The market appears to be "in the grip of yet another crisis of confidence" due to speculation about capital outflows, a shortage of dollars, and last week's repayment of an IMF loan, among other factors.

FCI Seeks Holiday Investigation

"The Federated Chamber of Industries [FCI] has called for an investigation into the rescheduling of public holidays,"Mick Collins reports on the same page. "FCI president John Wilson said current holidays do not reflect community sentiment, and an official organisation, representing all interested parties, should look into the matter as soon as possible."

House Prices Expected To Rise

"House prices, still a real 16 percent down on the first quarter last year, have bottomed out, according to figures in the United Building Society's quarterly housing review," Jane Strachan reports on page 3. "The report shows that in the first quarter of this year the price of a medium-sized house rose on average by 0.5 percent compared to the last quarter of 1985, reaching a level just below R73,000." However, analysts believe that "a more significant upward adjustment in house prices will not become noticeable before the second half of this year, mainly due to the lack of purchasing power of the general public."

BUSINESS DAY on Bishop Tutu

In an editorial on page 6, BUSINESS DAY says that Bishop Tutu has threatened the press with "unspecified retribution," playing on "the fears that he knows reside in the minds of many whites." This fear "is surely one reason why so many liberal journalists have fled to Australia, Britain, and other places where the freedom of expression can be honestly exercised without fear of retribution." This "exodus" has become so great "that there is not an English newspaper left in this country which is adequately staffed, and in this the newspapers do not differ much from the universities or the business world." Bishop Tutu's campaign for sanctions and disinvestment is also responsible for this exodus and if he "is incensed to the point of wanting retribution because the newspapers will not follow him on a course that must put more waifs and beggars on the street — and which may even wreck the economy altogether," it is because "he expects too much. Holy men can follow the dictates of conscience and then leave the outcome to Providence; lesser mortals count the cost."

Column on Urbanization Policy

In a column on page 6 of BUSINESS DAY, Linda Ensor writes that the abolition of the pass laws and influx control does not mean the government has "opened the city gates to rural migrants." "Instead of exercising the 'stick' of the pass laws to keep the number of urban dwellers to an acceptable minimum, government will be using the 'carrot' of employment and 'approved' housing to channel labour to acceptable growth points." Nevertheless, "the real significance of the abolition of influx control should not be belittled." The government's intention is not to allow more people into the central metropolitan areas, but to settle them on the peripheries, according to Mike Swilling, a lecturer in the Department of Political Studies at the University of the Witwatersrand. He believes "'the new urbanisation policy recognises the structural change which has developed over the last decade and provides a legal framework for it.' This change is the urbanisation of blacks to the border areas of the homelands, which are on the peripheries of the metropolitan areas, where they can get a job if if they commute long distances."

Brits Awaits Government Decision

A report on page 7 says "the fate of thousands of residents who refuse to move from the Brits location — on the outskirts of the conservative white residential area — hangs in the balance as they await government response to their predicament." Up to 10,000 residents "are adamant about remaining in Brits despite difficult conditions — untarred roads, no electricity or drainage and a bucket latrine system." Employer organizations — including the Steel and Engineering Industries Federation of SA, the Federated Chamber of Industries and the Northern Transvaal Chamber of Commerce — have come out in support of the residents and have approached governemnt to allow them to retain their homes.

DIE TRANSVALER on EPG Visit

Pretoria DIE TRANSVALER in Afrikaans on 13 May says in an editorial on page 14 that "even willful people will acknoweldge that an impasse is developing in the reform process." Despite developments behind the scenes it must be realized that negotiation between white and black is still far off. The government is willing to talk but from the other side there are no positive indications. This is the right time for a mediator to bring the clashing elements to the negotiating table. "No wonder," it says, "there is so much expectation over the second visit by the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group whose aim it is to solve the constitutional dilemma in South Africa." If Mr Malcolm Fraser's team can bring about a change of attitude here it would be a tremendous breakthrough. Concluding, it says "every South African hopes their efforts will succeed."

Black Unemployment Increases

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans for 14 May says in an article on page 6 that unemployment among blacks is on the increase. In January the number of unemployed was 6.3 more than the corresponding period last year. According to the latest Central Statistics Services report 555,000 blacks were unemployed in January. The unemployment figure increased form 8.5 percent in November last year to the current 8.6 percent. The January figure last year was 8.4 percent. However, unemployment in rural areas has decreased.

Editorial on Contacts With ANC

In an editorial on page 8 BEELD says there is an interesting about turn in the view expressed by Anglo-American's Mr Gavin Relly who, with other businessmen, met with the ANC in Lusaka. According to a report in an overseas newspaper he says it would be counterproductive to continue their contact with the ANC because there are so many other initiatives. Following the Lusaka meeting it was said that "there are grounds for further meaningful talks." Latest developments confirm suspicions that Mr Relly and Dr van Zyl Slabbert did not achieve much in their visits to Lusaka. It asks whether a capitalist businessman could have hoped to get an assurance from Marxist revolutionaries that business empires would remain intact under an ANC government. If there was such a futile hope among businessmen then it has been finally crushed by the announcement by South Africa's largest business organization that further contacts would be counterproductive. What is just as ungrounded as such a futile hope is Mr Relly's statement that South Africa is one of the most socialistic countries in the world because the Afrikaner has built it up so as to divide its wealth among themselves. If this was true it is unlikely that Mr Relly would have been in a position to send out feelers to the ANC.

Column Views RSA Pessimism

In his political column in BEELD on page 8, Piet Muller asks: "Is South Africa becoming a victim of its own pessimism?" Apparently, especially if one looks at the pessimism expressed by Afrikaners in opinion polls. The question asked by South Africans is can an outside group such as the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group really contribute constructively to solving South Africa's problems? They can, but South Africa's future will be decided in South Africa. It should be clear to all realistic observers that a black government cannot come to power by force and hope to rule South Africa. South Africa has two options: either a federal form of government or absolute partitioning. He says at the moment partition is not a viable alternative because it will cut through the heart of the economy. An acceptable solution is not easy to find, but on the other hand a solution is not impossible. The government has accepted the principle of devolution of power but it is not prepared to relinquish its central control. Concluding, he asks if South Africa should not consider a Swiss-type canton system.

Further on Visit by India's Rajiv Gandhi

Kaunda Dinner Speech Reported

MB151215 Lusaka Domestic Service in English 1815 GMT 14 May 86

[Report on speech by President Kenneth Kaunda at an official dinner in honor of Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in Lusaka on 14 May]

[Text] The most important point which his excellency the president, Dr Kenneth Kaunda, pointed out this evening at the Intercontinental is that, in regional terms, India is a very good friend to Zambia, that this visit by Rajiv Gandhi is a testimony of India's unflinching support for the oppressed people of South Africa and Namibia, who are fighting against the illegal and oppressive system of apartheid. He did mention that this visit by Rajiv Gandhi is a manifestation of the tradition warm and close relations which India and Zambia have always enjoyed. One would nothave any doubts about that because we have always in this country admired Mahatma Gandhi, we have always admired Jawaharlal Nehru, we have always admired Indira Gandhi.

So, his excellency's speech did also touch on other topics like in the field of cooperation, for instance, where his excellency the president did say that in the international field, cooperation and the implementation of the goals and objectives of the policy of nonalignment constitute an important component of Zambia and India's friendship. The policy of nonalignment is the only goal between Zambia and India in the hope for international peace and security, and it is, therefore, in the interest of the two countries to strengthen this movement which today encompasses two-thirds of the countries of the world.

Apart from that, his excellency the president did talk about world peace and he said that world peace is very vital, it is necessary for the development of the world, it is necessary for the development of Zambia, and it is necessary for the development of India. Without it, both countries and the world, indeed, cannot develop. In fact, the (?important introductory) meeting in Geneva between the superpowers hould be followed not only by furthering [word indistinct] for dialogue between the two sides, but also by the most active involvement of all the factors of international relations in achieving lasting peace in which solutions for all key issues of peace, security, and disarmament will be sought jointly.

Furthermore, the president did emphasize on another point that more energitic efforts should also be made to implement the United Nations' plans for the independence of Namibia. The international community, in this respect, must therefore continue to reject the introduction of any extraneous issues in this plan and the achievement of this goal is of vital interest not only for Africa but for the Nonaligned Movement and the entire international community as well.

Press Conference Held

MB151459 Dakar PANA in English 1000 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Lusaka, 15 May (ZANA/PANA) — Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda and Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi asserted in the Zambiancapital Lusaka today that independence and freedom will come to Namibia and South Africa no matter how long it will take. Speaking at a joint press conference at State House in Lusaka, Kaunda and Gandhi said tempers were running high and the forthcoming non-aligned conference in Harare, Zimbabwe, in August will definitely [word indistinct] he needed thrust to the fight for democracy in South Africa and Namibia. Attempts by the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group [word indistinct] yet other alternatives to avert the bloodbath — but if these peaceful efforts are spurned, the consequences of a bloodbath would he disastrous to contemplate.

Nevertheless, President Kaunda emphatically said: The role of the Reagan administration is central to a political solution in South Africa. He said the so-called Contact Group had a role to play but that this however, depended on the attitude of the United States of America becuase when Reagan roars, other human animals coil their tails.

President Kaunda [words indistinct] his own diplomacy which was gaining momentum when at the last minute he decided to supply arms to the UNITA rebels. The Zambian leader also dismissed Jonas Savimbi's threats to attack Zambia [words indistinct] is a question of his master's voice. South Africa was looking for an [word indistinct] following the failure to prove its claims that we keep Cuban troops and have training camps for the ANC. Kaunda said Zambia was looking after the ANC, whose headquarters was in Lusaka and that was legitimate in accordance with international law to keep the refugees. There was no legitimacy whatsoever in Savimbi's assertion. In fact, it was not surprising that the threats were made after a meeting in Cape Town with Pieter Botha.

About the role of the nonaligned conference said it will try to suggest other peaceful means to avert an explosion.

He said the Commonwealth team was the last chance to the political solution, warning: If its advice is not heeded, the explosion will have started in earnest. The bloodbath that will [word indistinct], will be hard to contemplate, (?Kaunda echoed). But the two leaders however, said: We must continue to live in hope; we must continue to try. Pretoria's rantings were meant to hoodwink the world into beliving in its cosmetic changes.

Gandhi condemned USA attack on Tripoli saying there was no justification because it might just escalate world tension — leading to another world war. It is not just a threat to Libya, it is a threat to [words indistinct] international order. Such [word indistinct] can be counterproductive to the so called terrorism. He said it would not be [words indistinct] if some known terrorist groups were living in Pakistan. [words indistinct], London cannot attack New York if terrorists known to hit British targets were reported living there. There was a danger of escalating world tension with such reactions. Gandhi suggested other alternative peaceful means.

Meanwhile, Zambia and India have agreed to cooperate in various fields of economic, cultural and social, political endeavours. Zambia would be sending high powered team led by Prime Minister Kebby Musokotwane to India to learn about the country's economic and technological advancements. President Kaunda told a press conference that India, although too, a developing country, had made advancements which would benefit the SADCC. India has a great role to play in the efforts to improve our economic development, Kaunda said.

The Indian leader has meanwhile left for Harare, for a two day visit there on his second leg of a four nation tour of Frontline States.

MB150945 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0830 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Harare, May 15, SAPA — Indian Prime Minister Mr Rajiv Gandhi arrived in Harare today for talks with his Zimbabwean counterpart, Mr Robert Mugabe, that will embrace the tense southern African situation and the impeding handover of the leadership to Zimbabwe of the Nonaligned Movement. ZIANA reports that Mr Gandhi, who flew in from Lusaka where he had talks yesterday with Zambian leader Dr Kenneth Kaunda, was greeted at the airport by Mr Mugabe and hundreds of cheering well-wishers.

His visit to Zimbawbe is part of a four-nation tour of frontline states and he leaves tomorrow for Angola and then Tanzania before flying home. Anti-Government Plotters Appear in Court

MB141653 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1643 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Harare, May 14, SAPA — Nine senior officials accused of plotting to overthrow the government by violent means today appeared before Harare magistrate, Miss Elizabeth Msarurwa. It is alleged that the nine on several occasions between January 1 and August 31 last year conspired to stage a coup within Zimbabwe. ZIANA reports that information on their activities was received before the day of the intended coup and the men were arrested. The accused are Mr William Kona, the national chairman of ZAPU, Mr Brian Mbulwa Siziba, a corporal in the national army, Mr Sidney Donald Malunga, ZAPU MP for Mpopoma, Mr Tshile Nleya, Mr Kindness Ndlovu and Cadet Charles Gray, Brig Joesph Zethi Dube, Col Eddie Sigoge and Mr Leon Khumalo. The case was postponed to May 28.

Conscription Being Considered To Ease Unemployment

MB150933 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0809 GMT 15 May 86

[Text] Mutare, May 15, SAPA — The Zimbabwe prime minister, Mr Robert Mugabe, yesterday disclosed that his government is considering the introduction of national service for all school-leavers in a bid to alleviate unemployment. It would have a "military input" among other aspects, but would be based mainly on economic considerations, Mr Mugabe told delegates to the Zimbabwe National Chambers of Commerce [ZNCC] annual meeting in Mutare. At study paper on national service had already been prepared and was being discussed by the cabinet, he revealed. "We are considering national service not only because it affords the youngsters the opportunity to acquire a skill but also to enable them to be much more conscious and useful to the country," said Mr Mugabe.

A ZNCC member had called for a Swedish-style non-military call up to alleviate the problems posed by the influx of an estimated 70,000 to 120,000 job seekers onto the labour market each year, while only an average 8,000 new jobs had been created annually in the formal sector of the economy since independence in 1980. The total number in employment in Zimbabwe is still below what it was under white rule 10 years ago, when the population was a million less.

Zimbabwe's defence act, inherited from Mr Ian Smith's Rhodesian government, provides for compulsory military service. However, this has not been enforced since the end of the bush war in view of the Zimbabwean government's already acute problems of accommodating large numbers of former guerrillas in its regular forces. Until 1978 only whites, coloureds and Asians were eligible for conscription in Zimbabwe, completing a basic two years. In the final phase of the war attempts were made to conscript blacks, although in the face of considerable evasion.

Mr Mugabe's ruling ZANU (PF) party has a volunteer "youth wing" which has at times assumed a para-military function, in the face of severe criticism from internal opponents of the government and international human rights groups.

Mugabe Planning State Trading Corporation

MB150646 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2043 GMT 14 May 86

[Text] Mutare, May 14, SAPA — Private enterprise was a legacy of Zimbabwe's colonial past which its new government "could not wish away", the prime minister, Mr Robert Mugabe, said here today. Opening the annual meeting of the Zimbabwe National Chamber of Commerce (ZNCC), Mr Mugabe reaffirmed his ruling ZANU(PF) party's determination to achieve a "socialist transformation" of Zimbabwean society, but said it did not regard "profit" as a dirty word. "We recognise the necessity for producing a surplus to be used for re-investment and for the remuneration of the investor," he said.

Mr Mugabe disclosed that plans for a Soviet-style state trading corporation were far advanced. It would compete with existing private companies in the import-export field, procuring goods and commodities and selling them direct to local and overseas customers. The proposed corporation would also negotiate bilateral trade deals with the state trading corporations of other countries. Mr Mugabe urged members of the ZNCC to help achieve the growth goals set by his government under its new five year plan. He issued a strong warning to employers who violated labour laws by underpaying or overworking their staff. Such explotation could not be tolerated under the new ideology, said Mr Mugabe.

Before independence in 1980 the ZNCC membership was almost entirely white but today includes many emergent black entrepreneurs. Together with the Zimbabwe Chamber of Industries it represents all the country's businessmen apart from the mining, agricultural sectors of the economy.
